Selassie Bid for Peace Reported Sent League; Protectorate Is Asked

Emperor Is Said to Have Sent Plan Directly to Geneva.

Rome Is Doubtful Duce Will Accept

By the Associated Press.

Rome (Saturday), Feb. 22.—Emperor Haile Selassie, it was said in informed circles early today, has advanced proposals to the League of Nations for termination of the Italo-Ethiopian war.

The Emperor's plan, it was understood in these quarters, contemplates a League of Nations protectorate over Ethiopia.

In circles where Italian government information generally is distributed, it had been denied Wednesday that there was any possibility of peace negotiations as the result of an Italian victory in northern Ethiopia.

Informed persons said, however, that the lack of official confirmation of the Emperor's reported move was due to the fact his plan was said to have been submitted directly to the League.

In quarters where the Emperor's reported move for peace was mentioned, it was not specified whether Haile Selassie would cede any territory or yield those parts of Ethiopia which are now occupied by Italian troops.

There was little belief in informed quarters here that Premier Mussolini would accept the Negus' reported plan.

Recent Fascist victories were regarded in these circles as a certain barrier to anything less than annexation of important Ethiopian areas.

Dispatches received here last night said Gen. Rodolfo Graziani's air forces in southern Ethiopia were bombing the remnants of the army of Ras Desta Demtu at Magalo, a point 225 miles southeast of Addis Ababa with a population of several hundred.

New Territory Taken.

By the Associated Press.

With the Northern Italian Army in Ethiopia, at the Front, Feb. 20 (Delayed).—Italy's northern army resumed the offensive today and conquered important new territory without so much as a shot being fired.

A force of 20,000 white troops marched 12 miles, conquering 20 new towns, to gain new laurels following major conquests last week. Thirty-five towns were captured in a huge battle between February 10 and 15.

No sign was seen of the army of 50,000 of Ras Mulugheta, Ethiopian minister of war, continuing a swift retreat to the southward.

Italy's total territory conquered since February 10, now is 1,920 square kilometers, one-fourth of which was taken today.

There were indications the army would rest for a few days before the final stage. It appeared that so far as this front is concerned the war is all but over.

The advance today took in all of the fertile plain of Buie and set up a new line to the foothills of the mountain range.

Pictures taken by Italian pilots show piles of dead beside roads where airplanes and machine guns had killed hundreds of them.

They are still finding Ethiopian dead and wounded. Wounded warriors fill the Italian hospitals alone. An estimate of 5,000 Ethiopian dead isn't high.

Today's ground is almost as historic as Amba Alaji. In 1895 the Italians were victorious over Ras

You Can't Arrest Me!

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A new type of "courtesy card"—warning of traffic and parking law infractions—appeared on Capitol Hill yesterday.

But it wasn't intended for "official" cars, driven by members of Congress. Rather, it was a warning to "outsiders" that they were usurping territory allotted to "Congressional immunity" autos.

When The Post reporter revisited Capitol Hill to observe parking and traffic conditions near the old and new House Office Buildings, he found that the majority of "Congressional" tag-holders had changed their tactics.

No longer were these machines (with a few exceptions) parked contrary to District regulations. Their places, however, were taken by machines bearing District license plates—mostly in the low or "special" figure class.

Congressional Owners.

On previous visits to the vicinity of New Jersey avenue and C street southeast, evidence pointed to the "Congressional" car owners as principal violators.

Yesterday, the low-numbered District tags led in parking violations. As "Congressional" cars moved out, local machines moved in—wilfully defying safety rules and parking laws.

But Capitol authorities, it appeared, weren't going to "overlook" these violations by Washington motorists. The offenders—whether they parked between "no parking" signs, or violated fireplug regulations, were told by Capitol police that those places were reserved for "Members of Congress."

Here was a typical example: An automobile—perhaps owned by a Congressional secretary, or just a private citizen—was parked across a crosswalk, in violation of a "no parking any time" sign. A Capitol policeman "tagged" the machine with a card reading:

"New Jersey avenue between B and C streets southeast is reserved for Members of Congress only. All other persons must not park here. Record of all cars violating this notice shall be referred to the House Office Commission. No expired Congressional tags recognized."

Expired Tags.

The notice mentioned "expired Congressional tags." But it said nothing about current "Congressional" tag holders. On previous visits, it was learned that the constitutional "immunity" provision apparently applied to Congressional tag holders in "good standing." And the tags apparently were "recognized" by members of the Capitol Police Force.

Over 2,000 Ill; Schools Close In Ohio Town

Contaminated Water Held to Blame for Disease in Coshocton.

By the Associated Press.

Coshocton, Ohio, Feb. 21.—One out of every five persons in this city of 10,885 lay ill today of an intestinal malady which State health officials attributed to contaminated water.

All schools were closed, business houses reported 50 per cent of their employes absent, and alarmed residents were boiling all drinking water.

"This situation is costing the city schools alone $500 a day," declared A. C. Pence, superintendent of schools.

The waterworks, a $164,000 Public Works Administration project, is not scheduled to be completed until May.

Dr. W. B. Johnson, of the city health department, declared analysis of the city water showed presence of colon bacillus.

"Where there is colon bacillus there also can be typhoid," he said.

Local physicians, too busy to keep an accurate check on the number of patients, which they said exceeded 2,000, diagnosed the ailment as gastro enteritis.

They said there was as yet no evidence of typhoid fever, but extra quantities of typhoid toxin anti-toxin were sent here from Columbus in anticipation of general inoculations.

Doctors said the present illness was violent, but not likely to result in fatalities.

Pence said he had intended to reopen Monday the schools, which closed yesterday when 800 pupils were stricken suddenly, but decided today to delay the opening indefinitely. He pointed out that under the State school foundation fund, which pays school systems on the basis of attendance, the schools were losing approximately 25 cents a day per pupil.

Coshocton's present water supply is obtained from wells drilled between the Tuscarawas and Walhonding Rivers. B. V. Bevier, State Health Department engineer, said a sudden rise in the rivers, due to a thaw last week, had flooded the wells.

The new waterworks will tap a new series of wells.

New Altitude Record Is Attained at Boston

Boston, Feb. 21 (AP).—The National Aeronautic Association announced today a new world altitude record of 11,358 feet had been established February 1 by Terris C. Moore, of Cambridge, for light seaplanes in the third category.

The previous altitude record for such type planes, he said, was 10,600 feet, established in France.

German Linked To Lindbergh Crime Is Seized

Alien Held in West Said to Resemble Hauptmann; Is Questioned.

By the United Press.

Santa Ana, Calif., Feb. 21.—A slender, mild-mannered German carpenter, who "looks very much like Bruno Hauptmann," convicted slayer of the Lindbergh baby, was questioned tonight by police and Federal authorities on reports he had information about Hauptmann and the Lindbergh case.

The man gave his name as Alexander Christian Witten, 35 years old. He admitted, according to Sheriff Logan Jackson, who questioned him in county jail here, that he entered the United States illegally from Germany, but denied he ever had been in New Jersey.

He was booked by Inspector Franklin Davis, of the United States Immigration Inspection Service, for investigation on suspicion of violating the immigration act.

Witten was arrested at his home at Balboa, Calif., by deputy sheriffs acting on information from an unnamed person that Witten "looked very much like Bruno Richard Hauptmann."

According to the informant, a picture of a man resembling Witten appeared in a recent issue of Real Detective Magazine, in connection with an article by a "Rev. Mr. Burns" who said Witten told him he had certain information about Hauptmann.

Sheriff Jackson questioned Witten for two hours tonight in a steel-barred cell at the county pail. He said:

"Witten admitted he entered this country illegally, but he did not say anything that would clear up the reports of his connection with Hauptmann."

Witten said he entered the United States April 13, 1929, aboard the German liner Berlin, landing at New York. He went directly to Chicago, and later came to California "but never stopped in New Jersey," he said.

He said he was in San Francisco in 1931 and 1932, during the time of the Lindbergh kidnaping, and later came to Hollywood.

He is at present employed on a WPA construction project, making artificial sea shell ashtrays.

Scene in Courtroom.

The Rev. Vincent G. Burns was ejected from the courtroom on the final day of the Hauptmann trial when he interrupted the closing prosecution argument by Attorney-General David T. Wilentz.

According to newspapermen in the courtroom, Burns, cried out, "If it please your honor, I have a confession that was made to me by the man that committed this crime." He had hardly begun to speak when a detective's hand closed over his mouth and he was hustled from the room.

Burns, pastor of an inter-denominational church in Palisades, N. J.,

U. S. to Mark Washington's Anniversary

'Farewell Address' to Be Read in Senate, House; Exercises Planned.

Johnson's Attempt to Toss Coin Over River Center of Interest.

The 204th anniversary of the birth of George Washington today will find the eyes of the Nation focused on the river bank of the first President's farm, along the Rappahannock, near Fredericksburg, Va.

Appropriate anniversary exercises have been arranged throughout the country, but the one common "exercise" which all Americans will follow will be Walter Johnson's attempt to duplicate the first President's legendary feat of throwing a silver dollar across the river.

A silver dollar coined while Washington was President was mailed yesterday to the "Big Train" to be used in the attempt, by Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, whose offer to bet the former speed-ball king 20 to 1 that he couldn't make the throw, started the controversy that has swept the Nation and has caused more poring over old Virginia maps than anything since the Battle of Manassas.

Whether Bloom himself will witness Johnson's attempt was doubtful last night, as the Senate and House of Representatives, usually in recess on Saturday, will meet especially to hear Washington's farewell address read.

Washington Day Program.

President Roosevelt, who remains one of the few important personages who has not been brought into the controversy, will not be in the city. He will leave early, to speak at Temple University in Philadelphia, where he is to be given an honorary degree. Later he will go on to Cambridge, Mass., to attend the 100th anniversary celebration of the Fly Club, a Harvard University organization to which he belongs.

The outstanding Washington Day program here will be the exercise at 10:45 a. m., in Constitution Hall, under the auspices of the District Societies of the Sons, Daughters and Children of the American Revolution, and the meeting of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants at 10:30 a. m., in the Old Union Engine House.

Government office buildings, banks, local libraries and numerous business concerns will be closed all day, giving thousands of Washingtonians the opportunity to make the 60-mile trip to Washington's river farm.

Many more will go to Fredericksburg, though thousands of Washington devotees, like the Boy Scouts, prefer to repeat their customary annual pilgrimage to Mount Vernon.

Headed by the Drum and Bugle Corps of Troop 49 and escorted by motorcycle police, the Boy Scout caravan will leave Zero Milestone at 10 a. m. The ceremony, in which more than 300 are expected to participate, will include the placing of a wreath at the tomb of the Father of the Country, as a tribute from Scouts of the ation.

Another wreath will be deposited at the tomb by Dr. Andres Pastoriza and Dr. Ernesto Bonnetti Burgos, Ambassador and Minister of Foreign Affairs, respectively, of the Dominican Republic.

Dollar-Throwing Contest.

With Gov. George C. Peery and members of the Virginia General Assembly planning to attend the dollar-throwing, Fredericksburg prepared to "do herself proud" today. Scores of cherry trees—including a dozen presented Virginia by a representative of the Japanese government—will be planted and dedicated as a "cherry tree memorial boulevard."

The "boulevard" will extend from the city to the farm where the youthful George is said not only to have thrown the dollar across the river, but to have confessed to chopping down his father's favorite cherry tree.

In mailing Johnson the 1796 dollar, Bloom wrote in an accompanying letter:

"Walter, there is no one in the world who wishes you more success tomorrow than I do. After you have warmed up and have two strikes and three balls on the other fellow, use this dollar, because I believe that as the eagle on the dollar is in flight, it might bring to you the good luck that millions of people throughout the country are wising you, and the eagle in its flight might assist in carrying this across the Rappahannock.

"Good luck to you Walter, and whether you are successful or not,

Fireman Dies In Ship Blast At Baltimore

Explosions Batter Crew Fighting Flames; Five Alarms Sounded.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 21.—One fireman was killed and several were injured tonight by one of many explosions which occurred when flames swept the hold of a nitrate-laden ship at her dock here.

It was not until the ship was slowly sinking and already was awash amidships that firemen said the blaze was under control. Fireboats continued to pour streams of water into her.

The dead fireman was not identified immediately. He was blown into the ice-covered river from a pier by an explosion which sent his comrades reeling back against a warehouse.

When the firemen were able to approach the ship again, they found him dead on the ice of the river.

Battalion Chief Hurt.

Battalion Chief Clarence Smith and Charles Kolb, foreman, were injured by the same blast. Both were rendered unconscious by smoke and fumes and Smith nearly drowned in a puddle of water on the pier before he was rescued.

The ship, the Norwegian freighter Gisla, was loaded with more than 5,000 tons of nitrate. She docked here Thursday.

Five alrams were sounded during the blaze.

All the city's fireboats were standing by and land apparatus was brought as close as possible in an attempt to save the ship and adjoining piers. An attempt to move the ship away from the dock by tugs failed.

Water of Little Avail.

The ship is of Norwegian registry and arrived here only today. Water was of little avail in halting the blaze. When water struck the nitrate explosions followed in rapid order.

Less than two hours after the blaze started, firemen said there had been a thousand explosions, some large, some of a minor nature. All served to spread the flames.

Ships at nearby piers were towed to safety by tugs.

The crew of 30 men, Capt. Thorbjorn H. Abbetsen and Mrs. Abbetsen, were aboard the Gisla when the fire started. The sailors fought the blaze until obliged to flee to safety.

Cold, Clear Weather Forecast for Today

Clear skies and continued low temperatures will prevail in the District today, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

The Potomac remained frozen yesterday as the mercury ventured no further up the scale than 32 at 4 p. m. Yesterday's minimum was 14 at 7 a. m.

Before dawn today the temperature will sink to 14, the forecaster said.

800 Reds Picket N. Y. Consulate

Jury Named to Try Girl.

Anadarko, Okla., Feb. 21 (AP).—Ten farmers, a real estate dealer and a druggist will decide the fate of Emma Willis, 18, accused of killing her share-cropper father, Iddish H. Willis, 52, with a shotgun after he refused to let her have a "date."

4 Escape Death, One Injured As Locomotives Strike Autos

Four persons escaped death yesterday in two grade crossing accidents near Washington. One of the victims, however, was injured critically.

Three involved in the first accident, were declared to be lucky to be alive, for their car was hit by two locomotives, the first, a slow freight engineer, and the second, the crack Baltimore and Ohio "Royal Blue."

This crash was at the Ammendale, Md., crossing. In the automobile were Luther Brown, John Hodgekin and his wife, Mary. The couple escaped without a scratch. Brown's arm was broken.

Police said that Hodgekin had driven onto the track, when the freight train rumbled out of the dusk, striking his car. The occupants jumped out of the car and crouched between the tracks.

They had heard the whistle of the Royal Blue, thundering north. It struck the car, hurling it high on the station platform.

The other accident was at the Landover, Md., crossing, where Edgar M. Clark, of 1406 Meridian place, a Potomac Electric Power Co. employe, drove his car into the side of a speeding Pennsylvania express train. He was removed to Casualty Hospital, where emergency operations were performed. He is not expected to live.

Witness told police that the driver apparently did not see the train and drove his car up the slight incline and directly into the second locomotive of a "double header."

The train did not stop. The auto, which caught fire, was destroyed.

Townsend Gets $150 a Week Seeking $200 a Month for Aged

R. E. Clements, Co-founder of Pension Plan, Asserts He Receives an Equal Salary; Says Organization Welcomes Inquiry.

By Edward T. Folliard.

When Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the California physician, conceived his pension plan, he decided that the "old folks" ought to get at least $200 a month.

But Dr. Townsend is doing much better than that now. So, too, is the co-founder of the Townsend plan, R. E. Clements, former real estate broker, of Long Beach, Calif.

Out of the pennies, dimes and dollars that are rolling in, Dr. Townsend and Mr. Clements are each taking a salary of $150 a week, plus traveling expenses.

Mr. Clements, a thin, dapper individual, credited with being the financial "brains" of the OARP—the Old Age Revolving Pensions organization—told about it yesterday.

Wearing a brown suit, tan shoes and fawn spats, Mr. Clements held forth in the Townsend suite of offices in the Southern Building.

He came here to proclaim that the Townsendites "sincerely welcomed" the investigation of OARP that was voted by the House of Representatives last Tuesday. The reporters invited for an interview gave him a foretaste of what he is to get from a House investigating committee.

ROBERT E. CLEMENTS.

"How much do you get?" Mr. Clements was asked.

"Dr. Townsend and I," he replied, "recently raised our salaries to $100 a week."

The raise came after January 1. They had been getting $50 a week, according to an announcement at the Chicago convention of the Townsendites.

$50 a Week From Newspaper.

"We each get a salary of $50 a week."

"What is the circulation of the newspaper?"

"It is about 250,000 a week."

He explained that he and Dr. Townsend owned the weekly; that it was a private corporation and was not a part of OARP. The paper sells for 5 cents a copy retail.

"What is being done with the income from the paper?"

"It is being put into a reserve fund."

"Well, doesn't the reserve fund belong to you and Dr. Townsend? How much is the reserve fund now?"

"I don't think that is a matter of public interest."

"Suppose you are asked that question by the House committee?"

"I will answer it then."

He said he was not familiar with the scheme whereby Townsendites arranged to deal with merchants, provided the merchants agreed to rebate 2 per cent of the receipts to the Townsend organization. This was

Legal Action Forecast Over Suppression of Missionary Organization.

By the Associated Press.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 21.—A high official of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, a spokesman said today, may be sent to Poland to direct legal action against Polish suppression of a Methodist organization.

Dr. Elmer T. Clark, assistant secretary of the Church Board of Missions, said a "long fight" was in prospect and, in its effort to get the ban lifted, the board might dispatch Dr. Winston G. Cram to Poland.

Yesterday Dr. Clark revealed the Polish government had declared "invalid" the Methodist Church missionary organization known as "the Society for Education and Culture." The church property there, Dr. Clark said, may be worth $750,000 or more.

With Dr. Cram, secretary of the board, in Texas, Dr. Clark sent a protest to the State Department. Today Secretary of State Hull revealed the American Consul General in Warsaw is assisting officials of the society and that the American Embassy there has interested itself in the case.

Dr. Clark informed the State Department that "the Polish government has declared invalid the organization through which Methodism has been functioning in that country and has taken over its property."

"The church hereby registers its honest and emphatic protest against this action as violative of its rights," he continued.

Dispatches from Warsaw related that following an investigation of the organization, Polish officials on February 6 ordered it to suspend activities and an administrator was appointed for the properties.

Warsaw, Poland, Feb. 21 (AP).—A proposal for a mass emigration of Jews from Poland today was placed before the government.

During the debate in the Senate, one speaker said that even Jews admitted that "three and one-half million Jews are too many for Poland and 1,000,000 of them should emigrate."

Farley Asserts Administration Rescued Trade

Speech at St. Louis Rally Praises Federal Credit Aid to Business.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Feb. 21.—Postmaster General James A. Farley told a Democratic rally tonight the Roosevelt Administration "has rescued business."

"And we are proud of the fact," said the chairman of the national Democratic committee, as he termed the use of Government credit to bolster industry "one of the wisest policies" in recent years.

"This is the first time, within my memory at least," Farley said, "when an Administration has been called on to defend itself for restoring prosperity and putting money in the pockets of the people.

"But for the present we are, for the most part, sitting back until our political opponents come to an agreement on what there is wrong about the New Deal, which has them so wrought up and so excited."

Then he launched into a defense of the Government in business.

"The primary thing to remember is that it is absolutely impossible for Uncle Sam to get out of business for some time to come. Through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, literally billions of dollars belonging to Uncle Sam are now in use, helping the banks, railroads, insurance companies, mortgage companies, building and loan companies and other corporate units regain their financial feet. * * *

"The most obvious fact about economic and fiscal conditions in this country today is that the use of Government credit to bolster finance and industry was one of the wisest policies undertaken in recent years by the Federal Government. * * *

"It's very popular at present to cry for an immediate balanced budget, and to condemn Federal fiscal policies. But the fact remains that if the Federal Government ever moved in that direction the very people who are demanding such action would be the first to protest. And rightly so, because business would suffer as much and more than other elements in the community if the Government should actually decide to get out of business.

"This country has made wonderful strides forward in the past couple of years, and the major reason for that fact is that the Ameri-

Secretary to Set Up Pre-War Parity Earnings for the Farmer.

Bill Will Go Back For Senate Action

May Go to Conference; Nine Changes Extend Base of Measure.

By Robert C. Albright.

Vesting vast powers in the Secretary of Agriculture, exceeding those granted under AAA or any other normal or war-time legislation, a widely amended soil-conservation substitute for AAA was approved by the House yesterday.

The vote was 267 to 97. The bill goes back to the Senate, which already has passed a milder measure and now has the alternative of accepting House changes or sending the bill to conference.

Twenty Republicans joined with 246 Democrats and 1 Farmer-Labor Senator in voting for the bill, while 25 Democrats, 64 Republicans, 7 Progressives, and 1 Farmer-Labor voted against it. Thirty-six Senators were paired and 31 did not vote. There are four vacancies in the House.

A score of amendments were hurled to defeat in the pell-mell rush toward a vote, but nine survived, among them a so-called "consumer-protection" amendment, which materially broadens the operating base of the bill.

This amendment requires the Secretary to establish, at as rapid a rate as he deems practicable, a pre-war parity income for the farmer, without discouraging production to a point below the normal domestic human consumption in the years 1920 to 1929.

Setting up a ratio between purchasing power of farm and other-than-farm income, this change carried New Deal adjustment policies into new fields. Sponsored by Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, it was accepted by Chairman Marvin Jones of the House Agriculture Committee. A similar amendment by Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, was defeated in the Senate. At that time Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, said it "delegated to the Secretary of Agriculture power to adjust income in the United States."

G. O. P. Bid Fails.

Passage of the farm bill, with its heavy burden of amendments, followed failure of a Republican effort to send the bill back to the committee for the addition of two other amendments, curtailing expansion of dairy and live stock production under the act, and fixing a $2,000 "top" on payments to large scale farmers.

The motion to recommit was defeated, 146 to 224, on a roll call vote. Previously, in committee of the whole, the House had voted down the two outstanding Republican amendments.

The first, by Representative Gerald J. Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin, would have denied payments to farmers who use land taken out of production for pasturage or growth of feed crops which might stimulate output of dairy cows or their products, or other live stock. It was defeated, 111 to 114. The second, by Representative Clifford R. Hope, of Kansas, ranking minority member of the Agriculture Committee, would have fixed the $2,000 limit on individual payments. This was beaten, 55 to 127. Both the Hope and Boileau amendments were later incorporated in the unsuccessful Republican motion to recommit.

Proceedings of the House were disordered and boisterous, with the presiding officer rapping almost continuously for order. Charges of "dilatory tactics" were flung at the Republican minority by Chairman Jones, as minority members gained the floor for speaking purposes by offering privileged motions.

Jones' Amendments.

The Republican offensive was aimed chiefly at allegedly unconstitutional features of the broad bill. The measure was termed by its critics a "political" bill designed for use in the approaching campaign, while Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace was target for reiterated charges that he may spend virtually without limit, with no administrative standards to guide him.

Practically the only amendments written into the bill were either those sponsored by Chariman Jones

Fight Promised On White House Tax Proposals

Senator Byrd Will Favor Billion-Dollar Levy; Publicity Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

Strong hints that one of the major struggles of the present Congressional session may await the Administration's still incompleted tax program came yesterday from both the Senate and House.

From Senator Byrd, of Virginia, a key figure among Congressional Democrats who are opposed to some New Deal acts, came an assertion that he would favor a "billion-dollar tax bill" as a reminder to citizens that present expenditures must be paid for. In addition, Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, declared he would drive once more for "a broader income tax base and an increase in normal and surtax charges."

On the House side another indication of possible trouble appeared. At a closed session of the Ways and Means Committee it was disclosed that Representative Lamneck (Democrat), of Ohio, cited a law that forbids any Government department or establishment to make tax recommendations to Congress. How strongly such a point might be pressed remained unknown.

Byrd's Call is Contrast.

Byrd's call for a billion-dollar bill contrasted with the only definite indication thus far to come from the White House, that around $500,000,000 might be sought to finance the pending farm bill.

The Virginian, a member of the finance committee, moreover fell readily in line with the perennial proposals of La Follette, who in the past has been backed by most Middlewestern indenpendent Republican, for increases in the rates on small incomes as well as large and a reduction in exemptions.

How far such an alliance of the La Follette Liberals and the conservative element would go toward producing an effective voting group was a matter of conjecture. Opinion generally was that the result might depend upon attitude of the White House.

From the President's press conference word was forthcoming early in the day that Mr. Roosevelt had made progress in preparing recommendations. He told reporters he would study the problem further at Hyde Park, N. Y., over the week-end, but with final formulation awaiting his return, next Wednesday.

Expects White House Call.

At the session of the House Ways and Means Committee, where all tax legislation starts its way through Congress, Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, said he expected members of his committee to be called to the White House next week in advance of the Chief Executive's submission of his proposal. He said such a meeting had been scheduled tentatively this week, but later deferred.

The citing of the law forbidding Government departments from making tax recommendations to Congress was reported to have had its genesis in the belief of some committeemen that the Treasury rather than the President might hand the tax plan to the committee. The law stipulates that a recommendation can be made only at the request of the Senate or House.

Tax experts put forward two suggestions. One was that the administration might choose to advance only "suggestions." Another was that the law would not apply to the President himself.

Asked whether either branch had made a request upon the executive branch for a tax play, one member of the Ways and Means Committee said privately:

"Well, we haven't yet."

Speaker Byrns told newspapermen, however, that he expected little trouble from the tax plan. He foresaw no House attempt, he said, to make the approaching bill the vehicle for a general revision of the tax schedules.

An altogether different situation prevails in the Senate, however. Many of its members have definite ideas on taxation which they are forbidden by the Constitution to introduce as original legislation. Revenue bills must start in the house.

"I'm in favor of a billion-dollar tax bill," Byrd said yesterday. "I want to make the people tax conscious. They should be made to realize that they will have to pay for all these expenditures.

"I don't like high taxes. My whole record shows that. As Governor of Virginia I consistently opposed them. However, we've got to pay for what they're doing sometime, and I believe in paying for it now, so the people will know what they are spending."

He strongly indicated that he expected support from the Republican conservative group, and other indications were just as strongly to the effect that with some exceptions such help would be forthcoming.

One exception was Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, who, saying it was a reversal of his previous position and that most of his colleagues would disagree with him, asserted that he would not vote for a penny of increased taxes "until there is a sincere effort to balance the budget."

Senator Couzens, of Michigan, ranking Republican member of the Finance Committee, said he would back the La Follette proposals, and in addition would propose an excess profits tax, which would allow corporations a profit of 7 per cent on their investment, and seize a percentage of all net income above that amount.

"I'm not planning any personal fight, though," he said. "The Administration will get what it wants. You're up against a machine and you can't do anything about it."

Seek Publicity Provision Repeal.

By the United Press.

Charging that publication of salaries of $15,000 or over provides a "sucker list" for blackmailers, kidnapers and wildcat promoters, Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, opened a fight in the House yesterday to force repeal of the publicity provision in the internal revenue act.

Simultaneously, the House Ways and Means Committee reported favorably a bill to impose penalties of $5 and $10 on persons and corporations not filing duplicate income tax returns and Representative John W. Boehne, jr. (Democrat), Indiana, introduced a measure to repeal this section of the law.

Women's Party Assails Bill Limiting Work Hours; House May Defy Farm Vote Pressure.

By Franklyn Waltman

AFTER all, are women the only rugged individualists left among us? It would seem so. Railroad workers are scrambling over each other and other industrial workers demanding the passage of legislation limiting their work-week to 30 or 40 hours a week. The farmers are insistent that the Federal Government should control them. Other groups want to be shielded by the Government from the vicissitudes of competition and of life.

But the introduction of a bill making it unlawful to permit women, with certain exceptions, to work more than 40 hours in any week in the District of Columbia has sent the National Woman's Party into paroxysms of indignation. These women will have none of such paternalism, feeling they are quite able to protect themselves and regulate their lives.

Mrs. Helena Hill Weed, of the party's Congressional committee, in an attack on the bill in the current Equal Rights, organ of the group, asserts that the measure "is dangerous because it is a flagrant and indefensible attack on the established constitutional liberty of adult women."

"In this day of economic disruption," the article continues, "no woman of leisure can afford to remain indifferent to attacks on the right of women to order their own lives in earning their living, for no one knows what the next day may bring forth, so far as economic security is concerned. The one thing women can cling to, as a pledge of economic independence and insurance against the bread line, is their human right to earn their living in fair competition with every other human being. This bill would utterly destroy that constitutional right."

The leaders of the National Woman's Party suspect that the real purpose of the bill is not to protect women but to eliminate them in industry, business and among Government workers, since, it is argued, if women are prevented from working more than 40 hours a week, employers will prefer men, especially in the Government departments where overtime work frequently is demanded.

"There are 15,000,000 farm votes that can be beautifully organized on a farm issue and neither party will dare bid less than the farmer has actually been receiving under the AAA," asserts an article in the high-priced magazine Fortune. "Both parties will therefore start with the recognition of Federal responsibility for the farmers' ills. And the upshot is that, regardless of the outcome of the election, the Federal Government will pick up the farmer where the Supreme Court set him down and carry him considerably farther than he was carried by the AAA."

Perhaps that is a correct diagnosis of the political situation as it relates to the farm problem—certainly the prompt passage by House and Senate of the soil conservation bill is proof that the Administration is determined not to let the opposition steal a march on it in this campaign year.

Yet one of these days the worm on Capitol Hill may turn on the farmers, just as the House earlier this week turned on Father Charles E. Coughlin and the Townsend movement. Such demonstrations give courage to the well-meaning rank and file. Having defied the lightning this week, the House members, if they are not struck down, may be encouraged to defy it again. Pressure political groups frequently come to the end of the rope—and then go the way of the Anti-Saloon League.

When the House investigation of the Townsendites starts it will be found that a shrewd, one-time California real estate operator, R. E. Clements, is the brains of the movement and not the kindly, gentle old physician from Long Beach, Dr. Francis E. Townsend.

Mr. Clements, not more than 40 and thus a long way from the day when he would be eligible for a $200-a-month pension, as proposed by the scheme, however, is doing quite well now. He revealed yesterday that he receives $100 a week from the Townsend organization and another $50 from the Townsend Weekly, a newspaper promoting old-age pensions, owned solely by him and Dr. Townsend. In addition, there are expenses and a reserve fund of the Townsend Weekly, amount unknown, but believed to be substantial, since the publication has a circulation of 250,000.

Rhode Island Republicans have turned to satire to scotch the willingness and ease with which the Legislature of that State has been paying bonuses to veterans. Bills providing for such payments have been going through the legislative mill with the ease of the man on the flying trapeze. State Senator Frederick C. Broomhead decided to perpetrate a hoax to show with what ease suckers could be made of his colleagues.

He introduced a bill to pay a bonus of $100 to Evael O. W. Tnesba, represented as a sergeant in the World War. Without objection the bill was quickly passed. Senator Broomhead burst into laughter. What was so funny about paying a bonus to an old soldier who had served his country in its hour of need? demanded his colleagues. Ho, ho, ho! laughed the Senator, just read the name of the recipient of the $100 bonus backwards. It is peculiar, but his Democratic colleagues did not enjoy the joke and now are demanding an investigation.

can people have regained their confidence.

"The great fact which impresses itself upon the man who looks at our present-day economic situation is that, for the first time in recent times, an effort has been made to consider the needs of Federal legislation. President Roosevelt and Congress have worked on the wise plan, that it is wrong and dangerous to confer benefits on one class only, and then let the rest of the people shift for themselves.

"I say the small merchant, the retailer, the doctor, the dentist, the school teacher, the clerks, the stenographers and the great mass of workers and farmers, are American citizens who pay taxes just as do the members of the American Liberty League. After the long night of the depression they needed measures undertaken quickly to restore their cash income. They got that help from the Roosevelt Administration.

Asserting that "this relief money stays in motion; it does not go into investment," Farley warned that the "great middle classes" might suffer if the Government got out of business "in a hurry."

"The Roosevelt Administration has rescued business in this country, and we are proud of the fact," he concluded. "We have only one note of caution for big business. In your new unrestrained enthusiasm, please don't pull down the house which sheltered you."

Welcomed Criticism.

Farley said the Administration welcomed constructive criticism, which had been "decidedly helpful," and declared "every reasonable attack will be answered."

"But this constructive criticism has been buried in large measure under the barrage of partisan, biased and bitter attacks, emanating from those who have profited most by the New Deal measure," he added. "The men who are making the most money under the New Deal are complaining the most.

"The Republican National Committee has a little cry-baby brother, called the American Liberty League. The brothers are always together. They pal around together, they think the same thoughts, the echo the same phrases and they seek the same end, which is the destruction of President Roosevelt's popularity with the great mass of American people.

"The mis-called Liberty League is an organization of multi-millionaires, who are making more money than any other group in this country, and in some cases more money than they ever made before in their lives.

"The Roosevelt Administration has put an end to stock market 'rigging,' to stock market pools, and other financial practices by which the insiders carry off the money, and the public holds the bag. That makes it hard on the market operators, but it has saved and will save millions of investors in this country, who otherwise would see their small investments disappear because the law gave them no adequate protection."

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Feb. 21.—Mounting interest in a membership campaign intended to keep Kansas in the Democratic Presidential column was reported by State party leaders tonight, on the eve of a Statewide rally for Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Farley will speak before the Washington Day Club tomorrow night over a national radio chain, from 10:30 to 11 p. m., Eastern standard time. His topic will be "Three Years of Roosevelt."

In the same hall three weeks ago, Landon assailed the Roosevelt Administration as "wasteful and extravagant" before 2,500 hearers.

Presidential Delegates.

Hiawatha, Kans., Feb. 21 (AP).—Presidential delegates to the Republican National Convention, pledged to favor Gov. Alf M. Landon for President, were increased to four at a district meeting here today.

John D. M. Hamilton, Topeka, general counsel for the Republican National Committee, and Will T. Beck, State Republican chairman, were instructed to vote for Landon "until he is nominated."

Two delegates were selected yesterday at Osawatomie.

Taxation Problem.

Chicago, Feb. 21 (AP).—James M. Beck, former solicitor general, tonight asserted there was "no greater contrast between the age of Washington and our own" than in their attitudes toward taxation, "most vital of all problems."

"Our fathers did not consider taxation as purely a matter of dollars and cents," the former Pennsylvania Republican Congressman said, in a speech prepared for delivery before a Washington anniversary celebration of the Union League Club. "They fought an almost hopeless war for seven years * * * to protest against an unconstitutional tax * * * upon a pound of tea."

"Today," he continued, "the American citizen is taxed from the cradle to the grave."

Asserting that the National Government spent in the last fiscal year over $7,375,000,000, the speaker said: "If our national expenditures and debt increase in the next 50 years as they have in the last 50 years, the end of the Union would be in sight."

Postmastership Patronage End Sought in Drive

Roosevelt Approval of Civil Service for Jobs Speeds Efforts on Hill.

By James D. Secrest.

A determined move to take the appointments of postmasters out of the field of Congressional patronage will be made on Capitol Hill at once as the result of President Roosevelt's statement that he favors extending the civil service to first, second and third class postmasterships.

Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, who is the author of such a measure, said he would ask authority of his committee next week to apply to the House Rules Committee for a special rule to call up the measure in the House.

At the same time the Civil Service Committee chairman stated that he would not ask the House to take any action on the Government leave bills until next week, as he wished to confer further with spokesmen for employe organizations. He said he has not yet decided whether to move for acceptance of the Senate bills or to ask for a conference.

The postmaster bill was on the consent calendar until recently, when it was stricken off by sufficient objections. Ramspeck said the objections came from the Republican side of the House.

Also Pending In Senate.

A similar measure, introduced by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, is pending in the Senate, but it is understood Administration leaders have agreed to let the House act first, as postmaster patronage appointments are handled almost entirely by House members rather than Senators.

President Roosevelt explained at his press conference that he had favored extension of the merit system to postmasterships as far back as 1913.

He declined to indorse proposals for extension of the Civil Service to all New Deal agencies, however, but explained that he would favor Civil Service extensions to emergency agencies as rapidly as they become permanent units of the Executive Government.

The Ramspeck and the O'Mahoney bills differ slightly, and it is reported that Postmaster General James A. Farley prefers the Senate measure, chiefly because it would not become effective until January 1, 1938.

Appointment Without Term.

Ramspeck's proposal merely provides that first, second and third class postmasters shall, after the passage of the act, be appointed by the Postmaster General without term in accordance with the provisions of the Civil Service act of 1883.

Postmasters now holding office would not be disturbed until the expiration of their terms, after which they would be required to take non-competitive examinations if they sought reappointment. If the postmaster did not wish to take the examination, any employe of the post office in question would be eligible for promotion. Should there be no employe considered qualified for the job, the Postmaster General would notify the Civil Service Commission and ask for a list of eligible candidates.

Under the O'Mahoney bill any vacancy occurring in a postoffice having an annual income of $1,000,000 or less would be filled by a resident of the community. Postmasters in the larger offices also would be required to have several years experience before becoming eligible for appointment.

"It seems to me that members of the House should be delighted to get rid of the job of recommending appointees for postmasters in their districts," Ramspeck said.

Patronage Causes Trouble.

"The patronage right causes more trouble than good and makes a member lose more supporters than he gains. I know of many instances where members have been defeated for re-election merely because of their postmastership appointments."

Ramspeck explained that the candidates for such a job were usually all supporters of the member originally.

"But if you recommend one of them for the job, why the chances are you will lose the support of the other candidates."

Senator O'Mahoney said that he did not anticipate much difficulty in getting Senate approval either of his or the House bill. It is understood, however, that Senator McKellar, chairman of the Senate Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads, is opposed to the legislation.

EPIC Delegates Given Sanction By President

All Factions in California Represented in Choice for Convention Group.

A group representing all factions of political belief in California, but with the McAdoo group predominating over the EPICs in marked degree, was announced last night as the President's selections for delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Those named by the President, in answer to a request from the Democratic State central committee of California, will run in the May 5 presidential primary.

Even before the selections—which gave approximately 32 names of persons acceptable to Senator William G. McAdoo, Democrat; about a dozen acceptable to the EPICs (End Poverty in California League), three labor leaders whose affiliations are uncertain and one unknown—had been published, EPICS meeting in San Francisco had decided to name their own slate at a meeting tomorrow.

All factions disagreed on the extent of power secured by each group in the convention slate.

EPICs claimed at least 16 favorable to them, while McAdoo workers doubted that there were more than 12.

Most observers conceded that the President, Postmaster General James A. Farley and Culbert Olson, State Democratic chairman and leader of the EPIC forces, had done an astute job. Olson, in Los Angeles last night, according to Associated Press dispatches, said that the delegation was unsatisfactory, but that he wished more time to study the list.

Representative Byron N. Scott, of California, announced last night he had wired approval of the list to EPIC chiefs in California, and urged them to work for the sanction of the slate at the Sunday conference. Scott belongs to the EPIC forces and is a Democrat.

Eight of the chosen are Townsendites, including Congressional leaders from California who have voted for the Townsend Plan or espoused it this session.

Thus, all factions are represented in the slate as a whole. Senator McAdoo heads the 48 names, as first on the list of the eight delegates-at-large, who also include J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency; Olson, Isidore Dockweiler, father of Representative Dockweiler; Edward Vandeleur, labor leader; Mrs. Lucretia del Valle Grady, George Baker and Alphonse Zirpoli.

It is believed in some quarters that after internal struggles the EPICs in California will accept the slate as the best that can be achieved.

Townsend and his chief supporter, Representative McGroarty (Democrat), California, remained embroiled in a quarrel last night over the advisability of supporting third party movements to gain recongition for the Townsend Plan at the Democratic convention.

Townsend said he did not want his group to act to cause conflict in Presidential primaries in either party. McGroarty responded by saying Townsend is not a Democrat, and that what he McGroarty, seeks is merely recognition of the Townsend Plan in the Democratic party.

Roosevelt Says 'Potomac TVA' Is Not Feasible

Rankin to Press Fight for Proposal, Now Facing Wide Changes.

The ambitious plan of Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, to set up a Potomac Valley Authority modeled after TVA appeared headed for drastic amendment if not a pigeonhole yesterday after President Roosevelt declared his opposition at a press conference.

The co-author of the TVA act was not visibly taken back by the President's statement, however, and announced at once that he would be willing to accept any alterations in the TVA bill. He indicated he would be satisfied if the measure is stripped down to power development alone.

"There is no conflict between President Roosevelt's attitude and mine on the power question," he said. "I am not actuated by any pride of authorship and would be perfectly willing to accept any amendment to make my bill uniform to the Administration's wishes.

Rankin said he still would press for hearings before the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, to which the bill was referred. He charged in a formal statement that residents of Maryland, West Virginia, Delaware and the District are paying $24,000,000 too much for electric power.

Sees Cost as Bar.

President Roosevelt made it clear that he had no desire to develop every major river into another TVA in stating that the Potomac River is to small for such a broad development as proposed in the Rankin bill. He said the overhead cost would be terrific and the plan is fraught with difficulties.

Rankin explained afterward that he would have no objection to placing the authority for development of the Potomac River Valley under the TVA or any other governmental agency if the President wishes. He said he did believe the construction of dams and power plants are essential.

The President pointed out that three projects in the Potomac River Valley, now in the first stages of development, are features of the PVA proposal. These are: (1) the highway linking of Mount Vernon and Great Falls by a George Washington Memorial Boulevard connecting with Mount Vernon Memorial Boulevard; (2), a thoroughfare connecting Lincoln Memorial with the Gettysburg battlefields, now being studied by a commission, and (3), a parkway running between the Shenandoah National Park and the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Says Beauty Would Remain.

Rankin termed "nonsense" the contention of some that construction of a power plant at Great Falls would mar the beauty of the falls. He said construction of a modern power dam, with a highway across it, would add to, rather than detract from the fall's beauty.

Anticipating objections to "ultimate cost of the project," Rankin said the PVA development would be self-liquidating and would, in addition, produce great benefits from the standpoint of navigation, national defense, flood control, etc.

"To me it seems inexcusable for Congress to sit here and let this great wealth of hydroelectric power in the Potomac River go to waste," he said.

Besides bringing "a yardstick" for electric power rates to the National Capital, the PVA, Rankin asserted, would eliminate the differentials that now exist in electric rates, such as those of the Potomac Electric Power Co.

Dern to Give Address At Ahepa Banquet

Secretary of War George H. Dern will deliver the principal address at the Ahepa national banquet, to be held at the Mayflower Monday, February 24. Other talks will be made by Demetrios Sicilianos, Minister from Greece; Senator William H. King and V. I. Chebithes, supreme president of the Ahepa.

President Roosevelt is a member of the organization, which also includes on its rolls Carrington T. Marshall, Harry H. Woodring, Gov. Louis Emerson, Senator William H. King, Senator Samuel M. Shortridge, Senator David I. Walsh, Senator James J. Davis and Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

Illegal Ballot Charge In Scott Is Dismissed

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 21 (AP).—Judge Lemuel F. Smith today announced he had dismissed the case of the Scott County election contest between Kelly Carter, Republican, and Hoyt P. Bostright, Democrat, who had been elected county clerk last November. The case was completed yesterday.

The court ruled that there was insufficient evidence to support charges of the use of illegal ballots and the use of legal ballots in voting illegally.

Warden Quits At San Quentin During Inquiry

Convict Indicted for Razor Slaying of Richard Loeb; Ex-Guard Accused.

By the Associated Press.

San Quentin Prison, Calif., Feb. 21.—James P. Holohan suddenly quit the wardenship of populous San Quentin Prison today in the middle of an investigation into a sensational counterfeiting plot carried out behind its gray walls.

While Secret Service agents revealed they had smashed the $12,000 bogus money ring involving 9 convicts and 11 other persons, Holohan handed his resignation to the prison board, ending what he called "sitting on a powder keg for eight and a half years."

San Quentin, with about 6,000 prisoners, reputedly is the largest penitentiary in the United States from a population standpoint. It is badly overcrowded, having been built to hold not more than 2,500.

Disclosure that convicts had used the prison engraving plant to make spurious money was made in a confession by one of three paroled prisoners recently arrested on counterfeiting charges. He told Secret Service operators a cache of bogus $10 bills was hidden in San Quentin.

Spurious $10 bills fluttered down when Secret Service men removed photographs of movie stars from the walls of the engraving room. In the ceiling the Government agents found dies and plates for printing the bills.

Joliet, Ill., Feb. 21 (AP).—A grand jury investigation of two sensational episodes at the Statesville Penitentiary culminated today in the indictment of a convict for the razor slaying of Richard Loeb and of a former guard for aiding the escape of a prisoner.

James Day, moody young robber from Chicago, was charged with murdering Loeb in a prison bathroom last January 28 in an indictment returned before Circuit Judge E. L. Wilson.

Homer Talley, former guard, was charged with abetting the flight of John Floss, Chicagoan serving a one year to life term for armed robbery.

State's Attorney W. R. McCabe said he was undecided whether to ask the death penalty for Day. In a lengthy confession, made public by authorities immediately after the crime, Day contended he killed Loeb in self-defense because Loeb had persistently annoyed him with improper advances. Loeb with Nathan Leopold was in prison for the 1924 "thrill" murder of Bobby Franks, of Chicago. Loeb's body bore 56 wounds.

Floss walked out of the penitentiary February 5. He was captured the next day in Chicago. The prisoner told officials he and Talley were on "a little drinking bout" and went on a "joy ride to Chicago after having a few too many." He said no escape was intended.

Talley contended he drove Floss away from the prison because the latter threatened to "cut me up like Loeb."

Roosevelt Speaks Over Radio Tonight

President Roosevelt will join with Protestant, Catholic and Jewish leaders tonight in a Nation-wide broadcast commemorating Brotherhood Day under the auspices of the National Conference of Jews and Christians.

The President, to speak from his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., will be introduced from Chicago by former Vice President Charles G. Dawes. He will be followed on the program by Dr. Cyrus Adler, president of the American Jewish Committee, and Michael Francis Doyle, of Philadelphia, founder of the National Conference of Catholic Charities.

Taking advantage of a lull in Congressional activity, the President will leave the Capital today for a trip that will take him to Philadelphia, Boston and his Hyde Park, N. Y., home.

Mr. Roosevelt goes first to Temple University to participate in the celebration of Founder's Day and will receive an honorary degree of doctor of jurisprudence at the mid-year commencement exercises. He will deliver a brief address.

The President goes then by train to Cambridge, Mass., to attend the dinner celebrating the 100th anniversary of the Fly Club of Harvard University of which he is a member. He also will witness the initiation of his youngest son, John, into the club.

Arriving at Hyde Park early Sunday, Mr. Roosevelt expects to remain there until Tuesday or Wednesday.

Wilson Case Trio To Fight Removal

An effort to fight removal of three of the Allen B. Wilson "mistaken murder" suspects from Washington to Montgomery County may be made today, it was learned last night.

Thomas L. Dawson, Maryland secretary of state and lawyer for one of the prisoners, Albert S. Sutton, conferred last night with other defense attorneys to decide whether to make this move despite the ruling of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings.

Cummings has ruled that it will be unnecessary for the county to extradite, inasmuch as the men already are prisoners.

The others being held in Washington for the hearing in Rockville Tuesday are, besides Sutton, Albert McDermott, alias John (Slim) Dunn, and Ernest Myers.

Woman Snow Shoveler Fired; Protest Filed

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Feb. 21.—Dismissal of a woman who held a railroad snow shoveler's job for three days until a gust of wind blew off her cap and revealed her long hair stirred a protest tonight from advocates of equal rights for women.

"Before officials autocratically discharged her, they should have investigated her financial plight," said Miss Florence Birmingham, a candidate for the State House of Representatives.

"If this woman was doing her work properly, there is no reason why she should not have been allowed to continue—whether she wore pants or step-ins," said Dr. Eliza Taylor Ransom.

The woman, who lost her job with the Boston and Maine Railroad, could not be found.

Said Walter V. McCarthy, State welfare commissioner:

"I don't think a woman, no matter who she may be, should perform that kind of work."

For three days she toiled with scores of other snow shovelers, clearing away frozen crusts that cluttered up the big terminal yards of the North Station.

Her work satisfied her superiors and didn't seem to impose a burden on her middle years.

Then a gust just a bit stronger than any that had preceded it whipped across the vast spaces of the yard and, Pouf! went he cap—and Pouf!! went her job.

It was against the road's policy to hire women for that sort of work and the gang foreman promptly cashiered his unsuspected female assistant.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 21.—Nineteen pieces of abstract modern sculpture, so abstract that the customs service wanted to assess them as building material, became symbols of a crusade tonight as the Museum of Modern Art called for battle for liberalism in governmental interpretation of the elusive word, "art."

The 19 pieces, brought here for exhibition, were turned down by the Customs Service under its interpretation of sculpture as depicting either human or animal form.

None of the 19, admitted President A. Conger Goodyear, of the museum, qualified under that interpretation.

There was, for instance, "head in metal and wood," by Henri Laurons, French constructionist.

Goodyear examined the collection, consulted his list and finally pointed out as the head of something which appeared to be a three-family birdhouse recently struck by lightning. He didn't vouch for its being a head.

There was a huge brass lump (which the customs wanted to pass at the current tariff on brass) but which Goodyear, again by aid of the catalog, identified as "spiral expansion of muscles in action," owned by the Milan Gallery of Modern Art. The spiral, Goodyear said, was obviously neither man nor animal but was art, and, as such, should be admitted to the country duty-free.

The museum, he said, now has applied for admission of the exhibit under bond, which it must pay a heavy and unrecoverable premium. He hopes, however, to make this exhibit a symbol of the campaign which he feels must be made for liberalism in the Government's rulings.

4 Legislators Forced Down In Funeral Trip

Plane on Way to Mitchell Rites Lands in Virginia; Radio Talk Censured.

An Army transport plane, bearing four members of the House Committee on Military Affairs to the last rites of Gen. William Mitchell, commander of air forces during the war, which are to be held in Milwaukee today, was forced down by motor trouble at Winchester, Va. No one was injured, although the escape was narrow.

The passengers were Chairman John J. McSwain, of South Carolina; Representatives John M. Costello, of California; Andrew Edmiston, of West Virginia, and Matthew J. Merritt, of New York. The pilot was Capt. W. Towle, and his co-pilot was Lieut. John W. Pearson.

Motor trouble developed near Winchester, the Associated Press reported, about 20 minutes before the forced landing was made.

The plane was dismantled for return to Washington by truck. All the passengers returned here by bus. It was said that the landing was forced by an oil leak. The plane's landing gear was damaged.

Earlier in the day Boake Carter, a radio news commentator, was called upon by the Army's chief of staff, Gen. Malin Craig, to correct a statement made in a broadcast in which he deplored the fact that Gen. Mitchell was not to be given burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

In a telegram that fairly crackled, Craig said Carter erred in his representation of the facts.

"There is no reason why Gen. Mitchell should not have been buried in Arlington National Cemetery had he or his family expressed such a desire," Craig added.

"The War Department would have extended to him the same military honors it gives to any veteran of honorable service.

"All who inquired as to that fact were so informed. The War Department requests that you correct the impression you created, giving publicity to the true facts over the air in the same manner as the original error was broadcast."

From Milwaukee, yesterday, the Associated Press announced simple funeral services, without military honors, would be held today for Gen. Mitchell.

The body arrived by train at 11:30 a. m. (C. S. T.), accompanied by Mrs. Martin A. Fladoes, of Milwaukee; Mrs. William K. Jackson, of Boston, sisters of Gen. Mitchell, and Sherburn M. Becker, jr., son of the former mayor of Milwaukee, a cousin of the general.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. in St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Dutch Irwin Gets 6-Year Sentence

Scorning fervent pleas for probation, Justice F. Dickinson Letts, in District Supreme Court, yesterday sentenced seven men, convicted two weeks ago of as many violations of the gaming laws. Although he refused probation, Justice Letts did not, in any case, impose the maximum sentence.

Morris E. (Dutch) Irwin, was the most severely dealt with. He was given a sentence of from two to six years and was pictured as the master mind of the palatial Fourteenth street establishment raided by police last year.

Besides the pale-faced "Dutch" six of his henchmen were given sentences. They were: Edward J. Gibson, two to four years; Wilbur S. Carroll, one year to 18 months; Leonard F. Hill, one to two years; Frank E. Crandall, four months to a year and a day; Morris A. Mahone and James McIntyre, four months to four months and a day.

In the latter sentences, the day was added when Justice Letts learned the men had been convicted of a felony and must be given indeterminate sentences. The seven were charged with operating a gaming establishment in the 1100 block of Fourteenth street northwest.

Court Modifies Job Preference To All Veterans

Philadelphia Jurist Limits Scope of Ruling to Business Survey.

Philadelphia, Feb. 21.—Federal Judge George A. Welsh limited the application of his opinion on veterans' preference today solely to the WPA's business census project, but the Government, dissatisfied with half-victory, promptly appealed and won a stay of enforcement.

Judge Joseph Buffington, of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, granted the supersedeas staying the effect of the District Court's decree at least until a hearing in the second week of March.

Judge Welsh's decree enjoined directors of the census project in Philadelphia from employing anyone "in disregard of the preference of employment granted (to veterans) by acts of Congress."

The decree did not meet fully the demands of either the Government or of Benjamin Spang, the veteran who filed the suit when he was refused a business census job because he was not on the direct relief rolls. The opinion, announced last week, made Washington apprehensive of a possibility that it would throw the whole work relief program out of gear.

Judge Welsh, disclaiming any such intent, held a hearing today to determine the scope of the decree. Charles E. Wyzanski, assistant to the United States Solicitor General, wanted it applied only to Spang as an individual. H. Eugene Gardner, Spang's attorney, wanted it applied to all veterans and all Federal projects.

Gardner said after the decree was signed that Judge Welsh "apparently was taking a middle-of-the-road course."

The substance of Judge Welsh's opinion is that the emergency relief act specifies preference of employment only in road projects, with that preference going to persons on direct relief. He held that because the relief act specified no other preferences it is legal to infer that veterans are entitled to preference on other projects under the terms of previously existing laws. The decree, however, mentions only the business census project.

The ruling includes not only veterans, but the widows of veterans, and the wife of a veteran if the veteran himself is physically unable to work.

Slayer of Girl, 5, Killed by Posse In Oklahoma

Mother of Victim Is Given Chance to Live; 5 Others Guarded From Mob.

By the Associated Press.

Mangum, Okla., Feb. 21.—Trapped by 100 possemen, a Negro who assertedly admitted fatally beating a 5-year-old white girl and injuring her mother critically was shot down and killed today when he tried to escape.

The shooting served to decrease authorities' fears of mob violence. Extraordinary precautions were taken, however, in behalf of five other Negros held in custody—two of them suspected of aiding in the brutal attack.

The slain Negro, Willie Jones, 25, a former Texas convict, fell before blasts from sawed-off shotguns only a few minutes before the girl, Alice Wilson, died in a Mangum hospital.

Physicians held out hopes for the child's mother, Mrs. Alice Wilson, 34, after a delicate brain operation. They said her skull was fractured.

She had been beaten with a heavy iron skillet and a sharp-edged hoe. The girl remained conscious until a few minutes before her death.

"The whole side of her skull was crushed in," said a physician.

Cornered in Woods.

Jones was cornered in a clump of woods after possemen had searched over 50 miles of mountainous country.

Members of the posse called on Jones to surrender. He ran. Several men fired. He was struck by four buckshot.

Jones' wife was among the five other Negroes held for investigation.

She was locked in the Altus, Okla., jail. Of the Negro men, Ernest Wright was held at Mangum. The three others, Ernest McNeely, John McNeely and a Negro known to officers as "Bubbles," were taken to the State reformatory at Granite for safekeeping.

Crowds gathered at Mangum. Feeling still was high. Sheriff E. N. Clabaugh issued a statement calling on citizens to "refrain from demonstrations."

From the murmurs of Alice, Sheriff Clabaugh pieced together a story of the attack, at their farm home late yesterday. Robbery was believed the motive. The Wilsons are well to do.

"The man came to the back door," Alice said. "Without saying anything he knocked mother down with the hoe and then hit her again with the skillet."

The girl said she screamed and the Negro struck her with the skillet.

Frances, 8, another daughter, returning from school found her mother lying on the floor and Alice lying in a closet, where she had crawled.

Frances ran 1½ miles to seek help.

A check of Negro homes in the vicinity resulted in the arrests. And, at the home of one Ernest Wright, the sheriff said he was told Jones had just been there, confessing:

"I just killed a woman and I want to get away."

Suspect Arrested In $1,100 Thefts

Two robbery cases involving property worth more than $1,100 were solved yesterday by police.

William Washington, colored, 24, 918 Westminster street northwest, was arrested by H. E. Brodie and T. M. McVeary, detective sergeants, in connection with the theft of $100 in cash and about $900 worth of clothes from a dry cleaning establishment in the 1300 block G street northwest. Most of the property was recovered.

Sixteen cameras valued at $95 and an $85 typewriter, stolen from the Home Owners Loan Corporation office in the Post Office Department Building, were recovered with the arrest by Brodie and J. M. Dowd, of Roger Stonel, 22, an HOLC clerk, of the Keystone apartments, Twenty-second street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. He was charged with larceny.

District Police Officer Called Hit-Run Driver

J. P. Meshkoff Accused by Taxi Man; 2 Lose Operator's Permits.

A District policeman was accused yesterday of driving a hit-and-run automobile and two prominent Washingtonians were ordered to surrender their permits after Traffic Court convictions.

Following a reported hit-and-run accident, in which three persons were injured at Seventh and F streets southwest, Detective John P. Meshkoff, attached to the Fourth Precinct, director of the Metropolitan Boys Club, was identified by Herman Norris, a colored taxi driver, as the driver of the car that sped away from the scene.

After an investigation of the accident, Meshkoff was ordered to appear before the Corporation Counsel Wednesday.

Meshkoff denied the accusation, declaring he had not seen his automobile since he parked it on Ordway street northwest, about 7 p. m. Thursday. The alleged hit-run car was listed in Meshkoff's name.

Meanwhile, 15-day permit suspension orders were issued against Victor Cahill, real estate operator, of the Duppont Circle Apartments, and John F. Costello, jr., of 149 Newark street northwest, son of the Democratic committee leader.

Cahill was accused of speeding 36 miles an hour on Massachusetts avenue northwest. He paid a $5 fine in Police Court. Notified of the permit suspension order, Cahill said:

"It is a rotten deal. It is outrageous. I have never before been arrested for any type of violation—I have never even received a parking 'ticket.' I am a heavy taxpayer in the District. I see no reason why my past record shouldn't count for something.

"Members of Congress can get away with parking and traffic law infractions, but a taxpayer in Washington takes the rap. It's unfair treatment. But they can take my permit and keep it—I won't fight."

Speed Convictions.

Costello was "uncertain" as to whether or not he would appeal the suspension order to the Commissioners. Both permits were suspended by the board of review and revocation of operators' permits, under the new order governing first offense speed convictions.

In the Meshffoff accident, three persons, Norris, the taxi driver; James Douglas, colored, 1013 Fifteenth street northwest, and Aloysius Brown colored, 24, 28 Fourteenth street southwest, were injured. The latter two were passengers in the cab.

Meshkoff's car was badly damaged. It was found abandoned in the 300 block of I street southwest, soon after the crash. In a report to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, by Capt. Jeremiah A. Sullivan, commanding the Fourth Precinct, it was pointed out that the hit-and-run machine was listed in Meshkoff's name.

Car Located.

Immediately after the abandoned car was located, Lieut. Letterman called Meshkoff's home, at 3446 Connecticut avenue northwest. The detective's wife answered the telephone, and said her husband was in bed, Meshkoff was ordered to report to his precinct station. It was there that he was identified by Norris.

In his report to Maj. Brown, Meshkoff said he left his car on Ordway street Thursday night, and spent the evening playing cards with friends at his home.

"The first I knew that my car was missing, or had been in an accident, was when I saw it at the precinct station after the collision," said Meshkoff.

In addition to Cahill and young Costello, other District motorists to lose their driving permits for speed convictions yesterday were:

Robert L. Boss, 3511 Twentieth street northeast, 36 miles; James Edwards, 546 Hobart street northwest, 36 miles; William E. Garnes, 1108 I street southeast, 36 miles; Gary A. Gilbert, 2500 K street northwest, 36 miles; James E. Power, 4015 New Hampshire avenue northwest, 35 miles; Ardell J. Proctor, 909 Third street southeast, 36 miles; Evelyn L. Turner, 1314 V street southeast, 36 miles; Malcolm W. Wehrung, 4400 Greenwich parkway northwest, 38 miles.

Thirty-Day Suspensions.

Leroy J. Adams, 2216 N street northwest, 45 miles; Edward L. Bacon, jr., 1355 Euclid street northwest, 40 miles; Melvin A. Baum, 1104 Monroe street northwest, 40 miles; Edward W. Cook, 2631 Woodley place northwest, 40 miles; Raymond T. Edwards, 204 Tenth street southeast, 40 miles; Odie Jones, 1028 Cherry Hill northwest, 40 miles; Claude Principe, 3624 Morton place northwest, 44 miles; Jerome Rosen, 5318 Illinois avenue northwest, 40 miles; James O. Shepard, 26 Seventh street northeast, 36 miles, second offense; Ezra Williams, 5425 Connecticut avenue northwest, 43 miles.

Mangascia before they were massacred at Aduwa.

The Italians have announced the loss of one plane of 150 active during the past 10 days. The motors of a bomber failed near Dessye and its crew was killed.

Troops to Be Freed.

Rome, (Saturday), Feb. 22 (U.P.).—A half million men will be released from the Italian army soon and sent to their homes as result of a general improvement in the international situation, the United Press was informed by highly reliable sources early today.

Men belonging to the classes of 1911, 1912, and 1913, will receive an indefinite furlough, it was said. However, soldiers now engaged in Italy's campaign against Ethiopia will not be included in the discharge.

The men will be discharged gradually and may be recalled to the colors within 24 hours in event an unforeseen situation arises.

It is understood that Premier Benito Mussolini decided to release 500,000 soldiers from the above classes on grounds that the present calmness of the international situation does not warrant keeping such a large force on a war footing within the Italian peninsula.

You Can't Arrest Me

found that Congressmen parked in violation of every established District regulation, they succeeded in "getting away with it."

Yesterday a Capitol policeman was "passing out" warning notices. He saw a private car pull into a parking space labeled: "For Members Only."

The policeman was quick to act. He shouted:

"Hey, those signs mean something—you can't park there!"

Yet, on the opposite corner stood a car with Texas licenses—and a "Congressional" tag—parked within 3 feet of a "stop" sign. This same car, on previous visits, was found parked across the street, directly beneath a "no parking any time" sign. There it remained for two days—and yesterday it was at a new prohibited spot.

Wrath of Citizens.

Out on Fairmont street northwest, where a "Congressional" tag holder provoked the wrath of citizens by repeated infractions, conditions were found improved. The illegally parked machine had been moved—after three days between two "no parking, entrance" signs.

Meanwhile, a suggestion came from Maj. Gen. Lansing H. Beach, U. S. A., retired, former District Commissioner.

"Impound these cars," said Gen. Beach. "Perhaps 'Congressional immunity' can apply to a member of Congress, but it can't possibly apply to his automobile. Take the car away from him—or anybody who violates the law—and maybe it will help. I think the District Commissioners should insist upon this rule."

It was also suggested that "Congressional" tag owners might be made "immune from immunity."

But, one law-breaking lawmaker has said:

Lindbergh Suspect Held

was well-known for his efforts in behalf of his brother, Robert Elliott Burns, fugitive from a Georgia chain gang.

After the courtroom scene, Burns told reporters:

"Bruno Richard Hauptmann is not the man who confessed to me in church on Palm Sunday, in 1932, that he was the man who kidnaped the Lindbergh baby. I am convinced that the man who talked to me was the guilty party."

U. S. Department Silent.

By the Associated Press.

The Justice Department maintained yesterday its "no comment" attitude toward the Lindbergh case when questioned about the arrest in Santa Ana, Calif., of Alexander Christian Witten.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, whose agents aided in the arrest of Bruno Hauptmann, has been silent on the Lindbergh case since the Federal agents withdrew soon after Hauptmann's arrest. Friends say Hoover never has been convinced the crime could not have been a "one man job," although he has conceded privately there was a possibility of accomplices.

Conference Held.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 21 (U.P.).—The men who prosecuted and defended Bruno Hauptmann held a lengthy conference with Gov. Harold G. Hoffman tonight.

C. Lloyd Fisher, chief defense counsel, and Anthony M. Hauck, Jr., Hunterdon County prosecutor, left the Governor's office shortly after 9 P. M., declining to reveal the specific nature of their conference. Fisher carried a bulky brief case.

"We were down here," he said, "to discuss certain phases of the Hauptmann case with Governor Hoffman. What it was we cannot say, because any statement might be disadvantageous to the thing under consideration."

Hoffman's office declined to comment.

It was believed, however, that two matters vitally important to Hauptmann were discussed. One was the possibility of persuading Dr. John F. Condon, who paid the $50,000 ransom money in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, to return from his Panama vacation and answer questions. Hauptmann has sent a note to Principal Keeper Mark O. Kimberling, of Trenton State Prison, asking him to use his influence in having Condon brought back.

The other possibility was that the testimony of other State witnesses at Hauptmann's Flemington trial was discussed.

Ever since Hauptmann's conviction there has been vague talk on the part of those interested in the defense of starting an investigation of the veracity of several State witnesses.

Hauck said he was maintaining communication with Attorney General David T. Wilentz, now on vacation in Miami.

"Nothing happened in there tonight that would cause me to recommend that Mr. Wilentz return," Hauck said.

Gov. Hoffman was informed tonight in a written report from his State police that all evidence in their possession points to the guilt of Bruno Hauptmann in the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr.

Three weeks of close investigation have failed to develop any new evidence or testimony on which to base an appeal for a new trial, it was said. The investigation was started on Hoffman's orders.

Another source came to Hauptmann's aid today. The Rev. John Matthiesen, Hauptmann's spiritual adviser, wrote a letter to Lutheran clergymen, urging them to support the convicted kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby in his fight for life.

"I believe that Hauptmann has been greatly wronged," the letter read. "I know him and I love him. He is a true Christian and a brother of Christ."

Then the letter called for support of Hoffman, who granted a 30-day reprieve to Hauptmann. Beyond this appeal for support of Hoffman and the sending of encouraging words to Hauptmann, the letter made no specific recommendations. But it immediately started a warm controversy among Lutheran clergymen, of whom there are about 3,500 in the United States.

Matthiesen visited Hauptmann at the death house today. When he came out, he was surprised to be informed that copies of his letter had been made public. He said it was "a breach of faith" on the part of ministers receiving copies.

The cost of mailing came to about $100. Matthiesen said it was paid by "contributions," presumably out of funds sent by persons in various parts of the country to help finance Hauptmann's defense.

15 Communists Arrested.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 21 (AP).—Fifteen alleged Communists, including 13 German emigres, were arrested today for distributing literature attacking the Social Democratic Party, to which a number of government officials belong.

Foreign Trade Of U.S. Gaining, Report States

Exports Up 13 Per Cent in January, Commerce Bureau Says.

By the Associated Press.

Continued improvement in the Nation's foreign trade in January was reported yesterday by the Commerce Department, with imports, exports and the export surplus all gaining over a year ago.

Exports were up 13 per cent to $198,436,000 while imports increased 12 per cent to $186,915,000. The export surplus advanced from $9,931,000 last year in January to $11,521,000 last month.

The department also released data on Italy to show United States exports declining from $6,187,000 in January last year to $5,430,000 in January this year.

Shipments to Italy—currently engaged in war with Ethiopia—of petroleum, refined copper, iron and steel scrap, and machinery and manufacturers, however, increased.

"Despite a sharp decline in shipments of cotton during January form the comparatively large amount in December," the department commented on the total figures, "our exports to foreign countries continued at a relatively satisfactory rate during the first month of the year."

Compared with December, January exports fell 11 per cent, while imports were almost the same, the usual trend between these two months.

Declines in cotton, tobacco and petroleum shipments accounted for the export drop, while imports were maintained as a result of larger sugar purchases.

Quantity of imports in January was 11 per cent over January, 1935, and about the same as in January, 1923-1925.

Net gold imports totaling $45,981,000 in January, 1936, were considerably smaller than in the last four months of 1935, when they averaged $218,305,000 per month. Silver imports continued to be large, the January value amounting to $58,483,000, compared with $47,603,000 in December, 1935.

Meanwhile, a post-holiday decline in retail trade last month was held largely responsible by the Labor Department for a drop of 650,000 persons from industrial pay rolls. The department's monthly survey showed pay rolls declined $17,900,000 from December. Compared with January, 1935, however, employment was up by 470,000 persons and weekly pay rolls were $24,500,000 greater.

The Brazilian government and the Bank of Brazil yesterday signed an agreement with the National Foreign Trade Council by which it is expected to "unfreeze" up to $30,000,000 in American credits "frozen" in Brazil.

The agreement was signed by Oswaldo Aranha, the Brazilian Ambassador, on behalf of the Brazilian interests, and by E. P. Thomas, president of the Foreign Trade Council, for the American creditors.

Under its terms, creditors with claims of less than $25,000 will be paid in cash. Creditors for larger amounts will be given 56 serial notes payable monthly until the total amount has been liquidated, beginning July 1.

Knife Is Slaying Clew In Fight Over Divorcee

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 21 (AP).—A knife found in a gutter near the scene of a fight staged by two men over a pretty divorcee was the principal clew held by police tonight in the slaying of Fred H. Daugherty, an attorney, who died early today of stab wounds.

The fight was attributed by police to Daugherty's demand that Clarence A. Moore, 32, an insurance collector, apologize for an alleged insult to 28-year-old Ethel Barnett.

Moore was held in $7,500 bail on a murder charge. The lawyer refused, while dying, to name his assailant.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Jooss European Ballet, National Theater, Friday afternoon. Program: "Ballade" (music by John Colman), "The Big City" (music by Alexander Tansman), "A Ball in Old Vienna" (music by Josef Lanner), "The Green Table" (music by Fritz A. Cohen).

It is doubtful that the ballet can ever free itself entirely from its own technical traditions, although it is making a brave attempt to do so. In "The Big City" and "The Green Table," Kurt Jooss has discarded most of the gestures of romanticism and replaced them with realism of varying degrees of darkness, but even after this revision, there remain certain conventions of dancing mechanism that are at variance with actuality. Instead of a strictly new method we see an admixture of styles.

As for the other two ballets on exhibition yesterday, "Ballade" is as definitely dated a picture of medieval France as the "Roman de la Rose" and "A Ball in Old Vienna" successfully evokes the days of waltz mania. The natural touches in the miming are the only traces of invading realism; otherwise these choreographic stories are, in their sentimental fantasy, as unreal as the false naturalism of Hans Christian Andersen.

Perhaps Kurt Jooss and other innovators are making a vain struggle against the immemorial charm of dancing. After all, the ballet, like the opera, is fundamentally a convention. People do not dance their way through life, any more than they sing their angers and their despairs. The stage spectacle with attendant music is on an imaginary plane.

Those of us who were seeing "The Green Table" for the first time had read so much about it as to be familiar with its satiric intent, and this awareness weakened its impact. It is grim and grisly propaganda against war, and the clowning antics of the diplomats only stress the ghastliness of military madness. Most of the scenes are pointedly effective, but the dramatic level is uneven and could be strengthened. For one thing, there is too much of the angular dancing of Death, who should be a figure of static horror, a presence rather than a participant in the action.

The company is admirably trained, and its esprit de corps is so perfect that no one dancer is obtrusive. Timing, routine and grouping were so well disguised as to appear spontaneous. This seeming freedom had at times the quality of improvisation, and covered certain weaknesses in the choreography.

John Colman's music for "Ballade," while ingenious in its variations on a French folk theme, was harmonically out of keeping with the epoch of the ballet. Alexander Tansman's tuneful score was far better than most Continental attempts to write in the jazz idiom.

A vote of thanks goes to whoever thought of using a set of Josef Lanner's delightful waltzes for the Viennese scene. It is well for us to remember that the waltz was in full swing before any of the Strauss family wrote a note.

Green Is Defied By Lewis Board In A. F. L. Row

Industry and Crafts Warfare Comes to Fore in New Controversy.

By the Associated Press.

Defying the American Federation of Labor's executive council, John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization told William Green yesterday that it would continue to operate.

In a sharply worded letter to the federation president, the commitee said that its members believed continuance was "not only fully justified, but essential to the growth of the A. F. of L."

Back of this development lies the bitter factional fight in the federation over whether mass production workers should be organized by industry or by craft.

Before drafting the letter to Green, the Lewis committee was reported to have discussed formation of industrial unions in the radio and steel industries. No definite conclusions were reached, it was said.

The letter made light of the "dual labor movement" talk at the executive council meeting.

Youth Dies of Injuries In Blasting Accident

Police at Upper Marlboro were notified yesterday that Charles L. Johnson, colored, 21, of Rosaryville, Md., had died in Casualty Hospital from injuries received when a dynamited piece of frozen earth struck him in the head Thursday.

Johnson was said to have been assisted in blasting an excavation for a cellar near Suitland, Md. The frozen dirt struck him at a distance of 15 or 20 feet. His skull was fractured.

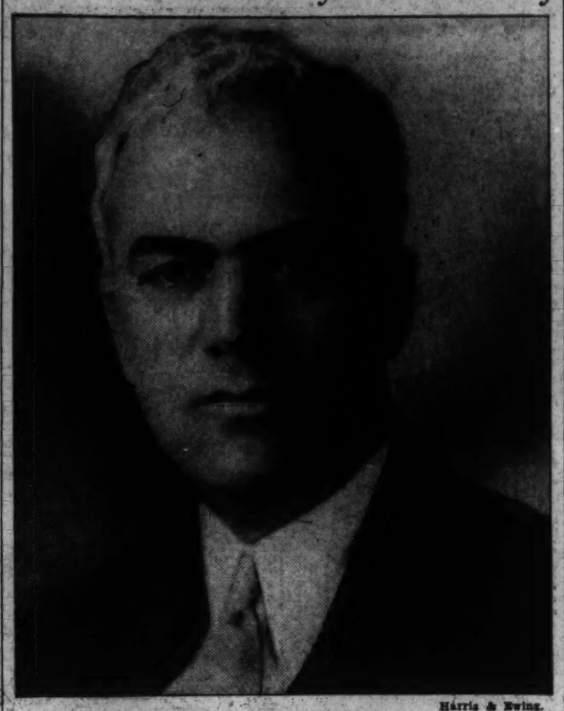
New President of Maryland University



HARRY CLIFTON BYRD. Harris & Ewing.

Regents Board Reveals Selection After Long Conference.

Baltimore, Feb. 21.—The University of Maryland Board of Regents today announced the appointment of Harry Clifton (Curly) Byrd as president of the institution after 3½ hours of deliberation in the board's headquarters here.

The board's vote was 7 to 2, according to a formal announcement issued by W. W. Skinner, chairman. Negative votes were cast by Judge W. Calvin Chesnut and Gen. Clinton L. Riggs.

The board's statement was:

"The board of regents at its meteing on February 21 received the report of the special commitee which for six months had been considering the selection of the most available man for president of the University of Maryland.

"The committee recommended the appointment of Mr. Harry Clifton Byrd as president of the university.

"The vote of the board was seven in the affirmative, two negative.

"The negative votes were cast by Judge Chesnut and Gen. Riggs."

The name of Albert C. Ritchie, former Governor, also is believed to have been considered.

Former Leader in Magazine Field Retired 'Last Time' in 1930.

By the Associated Press.

Westport, Conn., Feb. 21.—John Adams Thayer, widely known typographer and printing engineer, was found dead in bed at his home here today. Yesterday was his seventy-fifth birthday.

Born in Boston and educated in the Cambridge, Mass., public schools, Thayer became identified with printing early. In 1892 he entered the employ of the Ladies Home Journal and later was made advertising manager, leaving in 1898 to become advertising director of the Delineator.

In 1902 he joined Erman Jesse Ridgway, vice president and general manager of the Frank A. Munsey Co., in forming the publishing firm of Ridgway-Thayer Co., which the following year began publication of Everybody's Magazine and Adventure Magazine.

He retired in 1906 and went to Paris but returned after five years and bought the Smart Set Magazine, which he conducted until 1915, when he became director of Philippine publicity in the United States. From 1917 until 1920, when he retired a second time, he was executive officer of the Periodical Publishers Association.

In 1927 Mr. Thayer entered business again as treasurer of the Borden Bookstack Co. and a consulting typographer and printing engineer. His final retirement from active business came in 1930.

He was proud of the fact that under his banner Everybody's was the first magazine to establish a circulation of more than 1,000,000 an issue. His first retirement in 1906 was marked by a banquet in New York so elaborate it was the talk of the period. Each of more than 200 guests was provided with a telephone receiver to listen to a speech given in Boston by Thomas Lawson, the financier. It was said to have been the first mass use of the long-distance telephone.

Funeral Rites For Mrs. Smith Are Set Today

D.C. Native Was Descendant of Famous American Families.

Funeral services for Mrs. Maria Sommervell Smith, daughter of the late William H. West, for 30 years chief clerk of the Treasury Department, will be held today at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Roberta S. Fosse, of 5016 Sixteenth street northwest. She died there Thursday at the age of 83.

West, a descendant of Banjamin West, the colonial artist, entered the service of the Treasury Department almost a century ago. His name is still inscribed in a plate over the cash room in the department. At night, after his work with the department was over, he served as public accountant for the Riggs National Bank, then just founded.

On her mother's side, Mrs. Smith was descended from Lord Fairfax and the famous Minor family, who owned a large portion of Arlington County, Va. Her mother was a member of the Folsom family, one of whose descendants married President Grover Cleveland, while her aunt was a granddaughter of President James Monroe.

A native of Washington, Mrs. Smith was married twice. Her first husband, Alexander Somervell, was former chief of the examining division of the Postoffice Department. At his death about 45 years ago, she married Henry F. Smith, owner of several dairy farms in Loudoun County, Va., and operator of a retail dairy in this city.

Surviving Mrs. Smith are two other daughters, Mrs. Marie L. Shipley and Mrs. Flora Virts Colcard, both of this city, and two generations of grandchildren.

Interment will be private.

Henry B. Price, 63, Architect, Succumbs Here

Funeral Services Will Be Held Monday; Burial at Arlington.

Henry Brooks Price, 63, retired architect and former major in the U. S. Army, died yesterday at his home, 1316 New Hampshire avenue, after a long illness.

Born in Baltimore, Price was a graduate of Johns Hopkins University. After he finished there he went to Paris, France, for a year, to study in the Beaux Arts. He then returned to New York, where he was prominent for many years as an architect.

He was a member of the American Institute of Architects and was architect for many famous buildings, including the Numismatic Museum and the Hispanic Museum.

During the World War he served as a major in the Sanitary Corps at Camp Humphreys, and planned many hospitals throughout the country. After the war he served in the Army Officers Reserve Corps.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Sarah Almy Price.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Monday in Gawler's Chapel, 1756 Pennsylvania avenue. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

PVA Dies Aborning.

President Roosevelt has done well to prick Congressman Rankin's trial balloon labeled Potomac Valley Authority. There are indications that the Representative from Mississippi was more interested in expressing his exuberance over the TVA opinion than in conferring the blessings of a New Deal authority upon residents of the Potomac Valley. At any rate, he is willing to amend his bill to conform to the Administration's wishes. That means it will go into the waste basket.

Some phases of Mr. Rankin's proposal, such as development of the Potomac's scenic and recreational possibilities, and elimination of the river's pollution, are highly commendable. But no Potomac Valley Authority is necessary to the achievement of these objectives. They can be much more effectively handled by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the Army Engineers Corps and the local governments concerned.

One stated purpose of the proposed PVA is very revealing. The authority would be instructed to make the Potomac navigable as far as Cumberland. Since the old C. & O. Canal, especially built for this purpose, has been permitted to fall into disuse, and since plans are now being formulated to convert part of its bed into a highway, this part of the scheme is obvious window dressing. It is included, of course, to give the power project a semblance of constitutionality. Yet even if Mr. Rankin's conglomerate scheme were worth consideration on economic grounds, it would still be inadvisable to set up a duplicate of the TVA until the broad aspects of the latter's constitutionality have been tested.

Since Washington already has the lowest electricity rates of any American city served by a private company, this city can scarcely be enthusiastic for the investment of many millions of dollars in the erection of dams that would seriously impair the scenic value of the Potomac. Mr. Rankin's services would be much more appreciated locally if they were devoted to securing for the District the relatively trivial sums urgently needed for decent schools, libraries, police protection and public health.

Hitting The Underprivileged.

Discovery of flaws in the new farm bill might easily be made a new national sport, like jig-saw puzzles or the more recent game of monopoly. There seems no end to the bill's possibilities as a subject of humorous recreation, for it is little more than a grant of authority to the Secretary of Agriculture to do for the farmer anything that can be financed with $500,000,000. To those groups which would have bitter experience of the bill's shortcomings, however, it is more of an overshadowing tragedy than a joke.

One of these groups is composed of the tenants and share-croppers of the South. Profs. H. Clarence Nixon and Charles S. Johnson, serving as experts for the Southern Policy Committee, have concluded that the new bill "will inevitably reduce the requirements for farm laborers and threaten to displace more tenants and farmers than the old crop-control program, without any of the provisions for benefits of that program." In view of the fact that two-thirds of the farmers of the Cotton Belt belong to the tenant class, this is indeed a serious gap in the so-called stop-gap measure.

As the bill stands, there is nothing to prevent landlords from dividing their lands in such a way that tenants would have to produce cash crops on which no benefits would be paid, while landlords could grow feed and soil improvement crops which require less labor, yet entitle the owner to Federal bounties. In other words, the measure which pretends to correct a disparity in purchasing power as between agriculture and industry would actually further depress the status of underprivileged farmers.

To some extent this deficiency might perhaps be overcome by regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture. Even so, legislation which leaves a matter of such great importance to the discretion of a department head is indefensible. With the distressed tenants of the South adding their protests against the bill to those of the dairy industry, a considerable portion of the farm population is already lined up against the proposed new outflow of bounties.

Outside of the AAA everyone knows that cotton acreage restrictions worked to the great disadvantage of share-croppers and tenants. Thousands of these unfortunates have been forced to quit farming and go on relief. Still greater discrimination would probably bring something like a peasants' revolt.

The chief protest against this deceptive and inequitable type of farm "relief" comes from a liberal group which does not appear averse to farm benefits reasonably distributed. When their criticism is added to the vulnerability of the bill on economic and constitutional grounds, its passage becomes even more clearly a cheap bid for the farm vote—tenants are seldom voters—next November.

The Next Step Forward.

Washington's struggle for an adequate public health appropriation has reached a crucial stage. The need for additional nurses, better hospital facilities and more modern equipment has been proved beyond the shadow of doubt. Virtually every civic, professional, religious and commercial organization in the city has joined in the appeal. Congress is fully aware of the wishes of the people. But it does not yet know what the attitude of the District government will be.

The immediate objective of the public health committee organized at last Sunday's mass meeting is to secure the support of the District Commissioners in their campaign. An interview with the heads of the local government has been requested and will, of course, be arranged. The Commissioners will then be asked formally to prepare and submit to Congress supplemental estimates for the Health Department. That procedure would throw the full force of a united community behind the drive for public health funds.

The request of the public health committee is all the more appropriate since the demand for larger Health Department appropriations originated with the Commissioners themselves. They are fully aware of the past negligence of Congress in this respect. Moreover, they realize that the District can well afford the health program outlined in their original budget. It was only the arbitrary slashing of the Budget Bureau which emasculated that program before the estimates reached Congress.

In short, the Commissioners will merely be asked to repeat the essential recommendations that were so thoughtlessly short-circuited by an unconcerned Federal bureau. That is a request which can not logically be denied. For the Commissioners on numerous occasions have properly sought the aid of citizens and their organizations in the solution of community problems. Commissioner Allen is even now sponsoring a plan permitting local residents to vote in referendums on important local policies. All of these efforts to further constructive civic consciousness in Washington would be dashed if the most important community undertaking in recent years should fail to obtain active support and cooperation from the city fathers.

As The Post has previously pointed out, far more than reasonable public health expenditure is involved in the current movement, important though that immediate objective certainly is. A community is trying to make its voice heard in halls where issues vital to that community are too often decided on the basis of misinformation and misrepresentation. It is of the utmost importance that District officials, even though they obtain their offices by appointment, should add their influence to that of an aroused, if disfranchised, citizenry.

When the situation has been fully outlined it is impossible to believe that the Commissioners will do otherwise.

Flight From Realities.

If majority leaders have their way the House will adjourn without giving thought to fiscal problems that urgently invite attention. It is suggested that the action taken on the controversial neutrality legislation, and the TVA decision, have providentially cleared the way for a short session. The list of unfinished business is limited to the farm bill, the relief appropriations and the "farm" taxes, which, as the designation implies, would be no more than substitutes for the invalidated processing taxes.

If, as seems highly probable, the House refuses to take the initiative in launching a new tax program, the Administration ought to urge immediate consideration of the various carefully prepared proposals which Treasury experts have ready for presentation "upon request." Increased revenues are sorely needed to cover part of the cost of bonus outlays and to make a real impression upon the frighteningly large deficit. Even though revenue receipts show gratifying improvement there is no legitimate excuse for postponing action on the pretext that business recovery will provide a painless way of balancing the budget through increased returns from existing taxes.

Procrastination on the part of the Federal Government in dealing with its own tax problems also adds to the perplexities of State and local governments now in search of new sources of revenue. Maryland, for instance, is considering levying a consumers' sales tax as a means of financing relief outlays. To avoid inextricable confusion and overlapping of tax systems in the future, it is essential that the Federal Government should outline a tax program that will not only provide adequate national revenues but also offer some guidance to Maryland and other States in the development of local taxing policies.

The Congressional habit of grabbing new sources of revenue in planless fashion when an emergency arises is as indefensible as is flight from the uncongenial task of voting revenue-producing taxes on the eve of a Presidential election.

The Control Of Firearms.

Testimony to the effect that obsolete War Department weapons are finding their way into private use has already produced one beneficial result. Aroused by the Munitions Committee's findings, the Senate unanimously passed a bill to control the shipment of firearms and ammunition in interstate commerce. That desirable action is long overdue. A government which sees the need for strict regulation of shipment of arms abroad can scarcely ignore the business of arming criminals at home.

Under this bill munitions could be legally shipped in interstate commerce only to licensed dealers and manufacturers or to individuals licensed to purchase arms. It would be unlawful, in any circumstances, to sell weapons to persons indicted for or convicted of any crime of violence. However, the bill would not meet all the objections to the alleged promiscuous sale of guns considered useless by the Army. According to witnesses before the Munitions Committee, in late years thousands of "mutilated" machine guns, rifles and revolvers sold by the Army as junk have been reconditioned for sale—in some cases to criminals and in others to revolutionary groups in Latin America.

Since 1926 the Army has prescribed strict regulations for the disposal of unserviceable weapons. Guns that can be modernized and repaired are sent to arsenals for that purpose. Those deemed useless are sold as junk. The regulations strictly provide that such arms shall be mutilated so that they cannot again be used as weapons. If the stories told the Munitions Committee are true, however, those regulations have not been rigidly administered.

There is something exceedingly unpleasant in the mere suggestion that Army machine guns have been dumped on the market in such state that they can be repaired and sold for illegal use. Have any ordnance officers been lax in their duty? Is the "mutilation" process now prescribed completely effective? Or has the testimony before the Senate committee greatly exaggerated uses to which this discarded equipment may be put?

To satisfy the public as well as the War Department that the Government is not in any respect contributing to lawlessness through this means, a thorough investigation seems in order.

Caribbean Wards.

The careful annual report of the Governor of the Virgin Islands suggests that life is taking on a slightly brighter hue for the Caribbean proteges of the United States whose cedared hills, lying just east of Puerto Rico, were once described by President Hoover as "the Nation's poorhouse."

The health of the islands is better than ever before. The death rate has been reduced 50 per cent since 1917, when the islands first flew the American flag. Malaria, the local scourge, has been brought under control to the point where only 27 cases were reported last fiscal year as against 894 for 1931-32. The economic improvement, if less impressive, is none the less real.

The greatest factor in the upswing has been the relief program of the Federal Government, the report asserts. During the year, $893,513 in emergency funds was spent on the islands. This compares with an appropriation of $364,023 for the ordinary government. The relief funds divide roughly into two parts. Some were applied to maritime St. Thomas, where an effort is being made to obtain a share in the lucrative winter tourist trade. But the bulk has been used as an investment to underwrite the Virgin Islands Co., a non-profit organization set up to improve the islands. This has led to considerable employment and recapture from the jungle of several thousand acres once richly productive of sugar cane.

The present tranquillity of the islands, following the political squabble which put them into headlines last year, does not delude Gov. Cramer into believing that their problem has yet been solved. There can be nothing to camouflage the fact that, beginning with the $25,000,000 purchase price paid Denmark in 1917, the United States has paid out and is continuing to pay out tremendous per capita sums to support the islands' combined population of 25,000.

Rack And Torture.

From the Buffalo Evening News.

On the same day Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes handed down the momentous TVA decision, he delivered the ruling of the Supreme Court in another case of importance. Asserting that "the rack and torture chamber may not be substituted for the witness stand," he and his colleagues unanimously set aside the death sentences imposed on three Mississippi Negroes who allegedly had murdered a white planter.

In his discussion of the affair, Chief Justice Hughes used vigorous language:

"It would be difficult to conceive of methods more revolting to the sense of justice than those taken to procure the confessions of these petitioners."

That is not the American way of treating men on trial for their lives and the Supreme Court has proved itself a fit protector for these underprivileged citizens who still stand within the shadow of the rope. They can be convicted, but it must be a jury of 12, not a mob, which dooms them.

Elderly Vice Presidents.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The death of former Vice President Charles Curtis at the age of 74 recalls to mind the arguments, because of advanced age, against his renomination in 1932. Had the Hoover-Curtis ticket prevailed at the polls in 1932 we would now be without a Vice President. This would have been the eighth time in our history of the Vice Presidency becoming vacant by death, as against six deaths in the Presidency, of which only half were not by assassination.

The framers of our Constitution obviously intended the Vice Presidents to be assurance of uninterruptible continuity in the Presidential office as against risks of death, resignation or removal from office. Of course it works against such purpose when party conventions nominate for Vice President men older instead of younger than their candidate for President. And yet in our history the question of age—of reasonable expectancy of life—has been given less attention in nominating the Vice Presidents than Presidents. The head of the ticket is usually younger than the tail of the ticket. Our system reverses the practice of succession in England. For instance, with the death of George V his son Edward automatically became King, while King Edward's younger brother, the Duke of York, and then the latter's young daughter, Princess Elizabeth, come next in succession. If, however, President Roosevelt were to pass away before the end of his term, it would not be a younger but a much older man (Garner, now 67) who would succeed him. If both Roosevelt and Garner are re-elected, then the latter would be 71 before completing second term.

HENRY D. BAKER.
Durham, N. C., Feb. 18.

Democracy Vs. Republic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter signed by Julian S. Lorenz in your issue of February 19 conveys a totally erroneous impression of the "Army View of Democracy."

The statement in the Army Training Manual quoted by Mr. Lorenz from the Atlantic Monthly is a definition of a democracy a form of government which has been tried and found unsatisfactory. It is not "American democracy," nor does the manual say it is. The American form of government is not a democracy but a republic—something very different, as the Army Manual clearly points out.

It is very unfair of the Atlantic Monthly (if it is correctly quoted) or of contributors to your columns to circulate deliberately false statements designed to reflect unfavorably upon the Army and Army training. Mr. Lorenz should examine Training Manual 2000-25 for himself and he will then perceive that he has been guilty of unfairness. This document, from beginning to end, is an argument for the American form of government. It contains nothing "subversive."

P. S. BOND,
Colonel U. S. A.
Washington, Feb. 20.

Dry Gossip.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A cruel thing is being done these days in the name of "temperance."

My heart aches for some of the mothers whose children are in Washington working in Government jobs, because the drys have deliberately set out to play upon their emotions by trying to create the impression that Washington is a den of iniquity where repeal of prohibition has brought about "disgraceful conditions" and where thousands of young people are forced to come in contact with "the evils of liquor." It is not hard to imagine the anxiety of those mothers who are being urged to petition Congress to make Washington dry so as to protect "our sons and daughters from the evils of liquor."

I wish it were possible for every one of those suffering mothers to visit Washington and be reassured. They would find that, in spite of the fact that this is a cosmopolitan city with a population of nearly half a million permanent residents and an annual population of over two million visitors, it is an exceptionally safe and charming place for young people.

Contrary to current dry gossip, vice is not rampant, drunkenness is less than during "speakeasy" days, and temptations are not lurking in every corner to destroy the morals of innocents. Statistics show that the tide of intoxication is receding for the first time since the prohibition law was enacted, and that in spite of the enormous increase in population, social conditions are better than they have been for many past years. For every young person frequenting night clubs an decocktail bars, a thousand will be found taking advantage of the almost limitless opportunities for healthful sports and cultural recreation.

"Pull" In The Civil Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read the letter submitted by E. Alvin Gentry, of Flint Hill, Va., and printed in The Post February 4. The gentleman tries to glorify the so-called merit system by criticizing the patronage practices. Printed on the same page with Mr. Gentry's letter is one submitted by A. B. Carson, of Washington.

There is one idea brought out by the latter's letter that should be presented to those who are in accord with the civil service merit system we have today. That is that the law provides appointments shall be kept proportional among the States. With Virginia's quota filled 3 times; Maryland's quota filled 4 times and that of the District of Columbia filled approximately 61 times, does this mean that this part of the country produces this amount of brilliant applicants?

I have been employed by the Government and under civil service eight years. As to selecting and promoting civil service employes, it is mostly "pull" and not merit. I venture to say that 90 per cent of the appointments from nearby Washington are through pull. If friends and relatives of the civil service appointing officers can be put on the Government pay rolls, it seems to me the politicians should have the same privilege. J. R. H.
Washington, Feb. 18.

The Evil Of Liquor.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. C. V. Burnside says that "the less the amount of liquor drinking the better for morality."

The trouble with the gentleman's argument is that he, like all advocates of prohibition, is entirely mistaken regarding the evil. The real evil is not the making or selling, or even the drinking of liquor. The real evil is the drunkard. The man who gets drunk is a criminal and a fool. He is a public nuisance and a terror. He should be dealt with according to law and according to his crimes.

The gentleman asks: "Must every generation be taught that an evil cannot be abated by licensing it?" I answer: We do not, and never have, licensed drunkenness. The generation which grew up under prohibition was most thoroughly taught that the evil of drunkenness cannot be abated by prohibiting the lawful sale of liquor.

HUGH B. ROSSELL.
Washington, Feb. 20.

Congressmen's Cars.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Contempt for the law is perhaps the most serious affliction suffered by our commonwealth, and the picture drawn by The Post this morning of the defiance by certain members of Congress of the traffic laws of Washington is shocking. We have become deplorably tolerant of the weakness o some of our magistrates that the makers of our laws should themselves with impunity flout law and order is discouraging.

But while the person of a Congressman may be sacred and immune, no such sanctity or immunity extends to his car, and a car that breaks the law either in motion or parked can lawfully be seized by the police and be driven or towed to the police station. Of course, the member of Congress, if in the car, can go along, too, if he so desires; or the policeman could first drive him to the Capitol. H. P. H.
Washington, Feb. 20.

The Gallinger Nurses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I do not think that there is any printable word which adequately describes the vicious type of politicians who think that it is all right for 10 per cent of the student nurses at Gallinger Hospital to contract tuberculosis in line of duty.

The very fine editorial in The Post of February 18 says that the nurses must do 12 hours' daily duty, but does not mention that in addition they must study and attend classes. After three years' duty as student nurses, they must pass long and thorough examinations given by State examining boards before they are allowed to practice their profession. It is almost incredible that the Gallinger nurses, working under such intolerable conditions, manage consistently to make the highest ratings of any group in the District board examinations.

These girls are doing useful, constructive work and it seems wasteful to allow their health and lives to be sacrificed. I am very glad that The Post and the members of the medical profession of the District have decided to oppose such waste.

WILLIAM G. SCHLECHT.
Washington, Feb. 18.

"Wasted Energy."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent the move to aid in elimination of traffic hogs or violators, may I relate one feature that needs attention in the hope that you will see fit to give it some publicity for the good of safe driving for all?

As a citizen trying to assist in correcting recklessness in driving, I reported major violations on the part of drivers who either broke the law thoughtlessly or because no official in uniform was visible to them at the time. But I now deem this wasted energy. I had an occasion to report a taxi driver for a rank violation of traffic rules and put myself out to the extent of going to headquarters and obtaining a warrant for the offender. After several months the summons was finally served, the culprit came to precinct headquarters and made a cash deposit, failed to show up for trial, and, so far as punishment is concerned, that was the end of it. I was told by policemen that his forfeiture did not call for any notation on his driver's permit. Has this phase of the matter of dealing with reckless drivers been brought to your attention before?

My thought is that any citizen who puts himself out enough to lose time, etc., in trying to rid the streets of a reckless driver and who is willing to appear against the offender should at least have the co-operation of the courts. L. R. ELKINS.
Washington, Feb. 14.

Justice Served.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to thank you for being instrumental in freeing the colored youth, Rudolph Pediford, who was imprisoned for five months in the District Jail although innocent. You have done a fine thing.

I was also glad to learn from your paper that the colored youth, Walter Monroe, who in 1932 was sentenced to more than ten years of prison for turning in ten false fire alarms, was paroled from Lorton in March, 1935.

At the time of his conviction I was so shocked at the severity of the sentence that I wrote a letter of protest to the judge who convicted him. T. RUPLIE.
Washington, Feb. 19.

Exclusive Liquor Dealers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Being an exclusive retail liquor store proprietor I read with great pride your splendid editorial on February 20 on "The ABC Achievement."

I do, however, wish that you had mentioned that out of the 88 retail licenses that were revoked the last 12 months, not one of these was an exclusive liquor store.

This, I think, shows that if the 400 Class A licenses are cut down to 300—as is proposed by the ABC Board—the exclusive package store should be given every consideration.

Many thanks for a clear-cut, timely editorial in behalf of one industry. M. STIRMAN.

The Post Impressionist

Robbery At Constantinople

Post Office, Saturday.

SOME hardy readers of this Column expressed annoyance, a while ago, at an indication that we held a poor opinion of the Fourth Crusade. Until now we have refrained from reply: none of our expert witnesses lived nearer than a shelf in the Library of Congress—an inconvenient distance from our desk.

Today there comes to us one who was personally present at the Crusade in question.

So we shall swear Robert de Clari, Kt.

First, however, for the background:

"It happened in that time when Pope Innocent was Apostolic of Rome and Philip King of France and there was another Philip who was Emperor of Germany and the Year of the Incarnation was one thousand two hundred and three or four, that there was priest, Master Fulk was his name, who was of Neuilly . . . and he went through the land preaching the Cross."

In other words, Father Fulk started a crusade for the recapture of the Holy Land from the Saracens.

But the expedition got out of his hands. It was diverted to the conquest, by those Christian Crusaders, of what was then a Christian city, the richest and most civilized of the world.

Why?

In the Old French Chronicle of the Kingdom of Jerusalem you will find a broad hint that the Venetians secretly agreed with the Saracen Sultan to spare him from attack, in return for certain commercial favors to Venice. Mas Latrie elaborated this hint in his history of Cyprus. Although the French scholar Hanotaux argued (1877) that the favors were really negotiated somewhat later than the Crusade, there remains the announcement by the German Hopf (Geschichte Griechenlands) of the discovery of an actual treaty signed at the sinister date.

He wrote his account of the perverted adventure soon after returning from it to his native France—say, about 1216. This was deposited in the Benedictine Monastery of Corbie. The original manuscript was lost; but a copy, stolen during the fifteen hundreds, turned up at the Royal Library of Copenhagen in 1664. In 1896 Edgar Holmes McNeal, of Ohio State University, translates it out of the old French, and it is published by the Columbia University Press.

Therein Sir Robert deposes and says that soon after the shipless Crusadors had assembled at Venice, the Doge claimed they were in his debt and bargained with them:

"Lords, if you are willing to promise faithfully to pay us the 36,000 marks you owe us, out of the first gains that you shall make for yourselves, we shall put you oversea."

The crafty Venetian used them first against the rebellious Zara and got them into worse straits. Whereupon he produced a scheme calculated to surfeit them, leaving the Saracens unmolested; he prepared them to revenge him on a state which had severely wounded Venetian trade. Said he:

"Lords, in Greece (I. e., in the empire of which Constantinople was the capital) there is a land that is very rich. If we could have a reasonable excuse for going there . . . it would seem a good plan."

Such an "excuse" was forthcoming—with suspicious speed:

The German Emperor, Philip of Swabia, had married the Princess Irene of Constantinople; her brother Alexius claimed the Constantinople throne. Now—according to the concise summary of Robert's text in Dr. McNeal's introduction—Philip and Alexius promised, in return for help in a raid on Constantinople, "to give the Crusaders 200,000 marks, to send an army of 10,000 men with them . . . and to bring the Greek Church into obedience to the Pope."

In Robert's history evidence seems lacking that the Pope himself was a party to this plan: the Venetians were just then quarreling with Rome. But there is every reason to suppose that the Doge was hand-in-glove with Philip and his brother-in-law and was eager to supplement the lure of loot with any other which might serve Venitian ends.

The consequence was the conclusion of the Crusade in the conquest of Constantinople. The promised religious result proved fleeting. Nor did the event help Alexius: Baldwin of Flanders set up a transitory "empire" for himself—the "heir" got the air. But the so-called Republic of Venice was revenged on a rival and rewarded by the Sultan; the Venetian troops secured the lion's share of the loot, and the Crusaders' officers enriched themselves—at the expense of their own men and to the ruin of the city.

Fair Enough

Americans in Germany.

Munich, Feb. 21.

MUCH personal inconvenience would be avoided if Americans coming to Germany realized that they cannot insist on the same privileges here which Germans enjoy in the United States.

In New York, for example, there is an aggressive Nazi group which holds political meetings hostile to a large element of native-born American citizens and sometimes conducts rifle practice on the outskirts of the city.

Americans coming to Germany, however, are subject to the German laws, and these laws do not permit political assemblies comparable to the Nazi meetings in New York. And, of course, it would be absurd for any American group in this country to think of organizing a "shoot" on the order of the Nazi outings at home.

The explanation is that the Germans in America are subject to American law, while Americans in Germany must live within the restrictions imposed by the Nazi regime.

Most Americans understand this, but a few seem to think that their passports guarantee them all the rights which are theirs at home and are surprised and hurt when they find themselves in trouble with the political police.

* * * *

THERE is a case on trial now in the People's Court in Munich which is of interest in this connection, although not necessarily to the point. The defendant is Charles Nisselbeck, aged 36, who was born in Bavaria and naturalized in Brooklyn, but returned here to go into the export and import trade.

He was arrested last May, and his difficulty might have remained a secret for some time but for the fact that his wife, also of German birth, reported immediately to Mr. Hathaway, American consul, who investigated promptly. But Hathaway discovered no evidence that Nisselbeck was beaten or starved, and the deliberate pace at which justice proceeds while a defendant lies in jail is something which apparently has to be accepted.

Nisselbeck is alleged to have conspired with Otto Strasser, political exile living in Praha, Czechoslovakia, who was once a political colleague of Adolf Hitler, but broke with him and ran away. He is also charged with importing copies of Strasser's revolutionary publications, and the question on trial in the present case is whether he did or did not. If he did he is subject to the same penalties that would apply to a German in Gemany and cannot claim the same indulgent treatment that a Nazi residing in New York receives at the hands of a more tolerant people.

* * * *

HUGO RAMSAY, another consul, is attending the sessions of the trial in Nisselbeck's interest, but if the man is convicted on good evidence it will be just too bad for Mr. Nisselbeck.

It is the German who has been naturalized as an American and then returns to Germany with an American passport who gives most of the trouble. The explanation, obviously, is that such people are unable to suppress their interest in German political controversies and either sound off too vehemently or find themselves tempted to take sides. It cannot be assumed that Nisselbeck did this, because a decision has not been reached yet, but there is significance in the fact that the naturalized German is the one who has most of the difficulty.

There has been no question raised as to the young man's loyalty to the United States. Now, this is an important factor, because the American Government long ago drafted a law permitting the cancellation of the citizenship of naturalized persons who go abroad to reside there indefinitely, claiming all the rights of American citizens but avoiding the country and their responsibilities.

NOWADAYS if a naturalized American returns to his fatherland for more than two years he must convince the nearest consul that he is still a loyal American in order to retain his passport.

This was adopted at a time when many Central Americans were going to the United States to study in the universities, acquiring citizenship in the meanwhile, and then returning to their own homes to take part in political intrigues. It is a useful law now, because otherwise the American Government would be meeting constant calls to assist nominal Americans in trouble with various European governments.

In a recent case which Mr. Hathaway handled, the defendant, a born German but a naturalized American, had lived in Germany for 15 years and had not even troubled to present himself to the consulate. Nevertheless, when he got into trouble he yelled for help, and the Germans, for some reason, let him wriggle away. After he had left Germany, Mr. Rathaway received word that the man's American citizenship had been written off in 1921, but he was on his way by that time, and the Nazis may have regarded his escape as good riddance.

Of course, there is an important question of manners involved. Nazis residing in American cities who hold meetings to harass native-born Americans may be acting within their rights, but they can hardly be called good guests. On the other hand, Americans in Germany have no choice. They must keep out of political movements and arguments, or else——

Benes Reported Named As Peacemaker by Pope

Paris, Feb. 21 (AP).—The newspaper L'Oeuvre said today that Pope Pius has requested Eduard Benes, president of Czechoslovakia, to act as peacemaker between Premier Mussolini and the League of Nations' countries which have imposed sanctions against Italy.

The newspaper said that Benes had imposed the following terms:

Italy must reveal the minimum terms on which it will accept peace; if these terms are achieved, Italy must promise definitely to accept a settlement of the conflict.

Old-Fashioned Winter

By Hilding Sivertsen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Chicago.

AT Jefferson, Iowa, during the snowy weather that has prevailed since Christmas, a man might have been observed frequently "mushing" a team of home-grown huskies hitched to a regulation Arctic dog sledge, and he was the victim of much good-natured razzing.

On February 8, during a severe blizzard, a group of coal miners down the river were out of food. All ordinary transportation was paralyzed. This man, who had formerly lived in Canada, hitched up his huskies and sledded a substantial supply of food along the river to the miners, saving them from considerable discomfort, if not from actual starvation. Heckling was changed to applause.

Residents of the entire Mississippi River Valley, especially those of Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas and Nebraska, have seen much comparable evidence of the "old-fashioned winter" in January and February this year. In Iowa the winter is the most severe in the 117 years that weather records have been kept. Old-timers have to hark clear back to 1888, the year of "the Great Blizzard," to find anything like it, and even then the severe cold did not continue so long. As this is written there has been a continued cold wave of eight week's duration—seemingly a permanent wave.

In 1888 a terrific blizzard occurred during the first week of January, the thermometer going down to 30 degrees below zero, with a wind that sometimes reached a velocity of 50 or 60 miles an hour. The blizzard was especially severe in western Kansas, where the wind attained its highest velocity. It was felt all over the Mississippi Valley, however. The present series of blizzards will be something to talk about for the next 50 years.

* * * *

THIS year snow fell during the Christmas holidays and almost immediately the temperature swooped down and began to hover about the zero mark, frequently falling to 40 or even 45 below in northern Minnesota and North Dakota, and 20 to 25 below zero in Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska and South Dakota. There has not been a thaw in eight weeks. The Christmas snow remained on the ground and was frequently added to, until in places it reached a depth of a foot or two on level ground, changing to drifts which in the central part of this district have reached heights of 15 to 20 feet.

The total result has been to slow down and occasionally paralyze traffic. In some cases trains have been held up for two or three days at a time and busses for even longer.

The chief menace in the situation has been the general coal shortage.

At the beginning of the severe cold spell Iowa coal miners were working only five days a week, under the regulations of the International Mine Workers. Gov. Clyde L. Herring appealed to President Roosevelt for assistance in obtaining a modification of this ruling and was finally successful, after a great deal of bickering, in the course of which Gov. Herring was roundly denounced by International President Lewis for his impertinence in suggesting that people's lives were more important than union rules.

Even with the longer working week the shortage remains acute, and schools in many places have been closed for several days at a time. State and municipal authorities in Iowa have discouraged the opening of theaters and churches dependent upon coal.

* * * *

IN many communities the courthouses and other public buildings have been used as temporary housing for indigent families, and beds have been set up and meals furnished for sufferers. WPA workers have been used to shovel snow. Relief funds have been subjected to especially heavy drafts.

One feature of the severe winter is the plight of wild life, especially pheasants and quail. The Iowa Conservation Commission has enlisted the services of hundreds of CCC workers and others, and has collected money by private contribution to buy feed for birds. Special instruction has been given to those interested in providing cover for them. Despite all this work, it is estimated that hundreds of thousands of game and other birds have lost their lives this winter. Even crows have been found frozen to death.

Concern is also expressed over the condition of fish in the lakes, for the ice is so thick and has remained so long that the oxygen supply has become depleted. It is feared that great numbers of fish have died under the heavy ice. Some of the rivers have become frozen solid, which will also result in the death of aquatic life of all kinds.

Cattle and hogs, which are shipped in open cars, confined only by wooden bars, have been frozen to death in transit, especially where freight trains have become stalled by drifts, with no shelter at hand.

* * * *

PASSENGER trains, in some cases, have been stalled in the open country and passengers, as well as members of the crews, have gotten out to shovel snow ahead of the locomotives. At other times the passengers have spent hours, sometimes stretching into days, playing bridge or poker while awaiting snow plows and rescue.

The inability of farmers to get to town has resulted in shortage of butter, eggs, milk and other produce. The farmers, in turn, have suffered from the lack of groceries.

Automobiles and trucks have shared in the hardships of cold weather. At times fully half of them have been out of commission, with frozen radiators and batteries, gummed-up starters and inability to get out of icy and snow-filled gutters. Old bobsleds and "one-horse open sleighs" have been resurrected and have appeared for the first time in 25 years. Snowshoes and skis have appeared in the so-called temperate zone States. The air is bitterly cold. The small boys don't get out to skate and slide as much as they would like. Influenza and pneumonia have been quite prevalent.

* * * *

ONE general effect of the protracted and unprecedented winter has been to impress upon the minds of the people their comparative helplessness when Nature goes on a rampage. After just a few days of snow blockades and below-zero temperature, human beings begin to realize keenly that they are not far removed from the drastic, relentless facts of harsh Nature, after all, and are very much dependent for life and comfort upon her mellow moods. Within three years this section has witnessed the utmost extremes of heat and cold—drought and moisture.

The next thing to worry about will be heavy spring floods. With all the accumulation of snow locked up in freezing temperatures for eight weeks or more, there will be a great release of water if warm weather comes on rapidly. The Nation—at least that part of it which is definitely interested in Mississippi Valley affairs—will do well to be prepared for an emergency when the thaw comes.

3 Nations Push Naval Agreement

London, Feb. 21 (AP).—French and Italian efforts to obtain an agreement with Great Britain on European political questions as payment for their approval of a naval treaty were pushed today in London, Paris and Rome.

Charles Corbin, the French Ambassador, conferred twice with Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, and reiterated a French demand for an air pact with Great Britain in connection with a naval treaty, it was authoritatively reported.

In conference circles, it was reported that members of the Italian naval delegation who have been in Rome are returning here with a demand that sanctions and other questions in connection with the Italo-Ethiopian war be settled after the naval agreement.

Since the Americans one week ago made clear that European matters must not be connected with the treaty, the French and the Italians have been seeking some way to link their proposals with adherence to the treaty.

Two Die of Gas Fumes From Broken Main

Flint, Mich., Feb. 21 (AP).—Two persons were killed today in the village of Clio, near here, by gas which seeped into their home from a broken main.

The deaths brought Michigan's total from this cause during the week to eight. A score of others have been made ill.

The latest victims were Herbert Herman, 44, and his wife, Marion, 38. The break in the gas main, in this case as in the others, was attributed to the extreme cold.

No. 1 Superman

By Karl Schriftgiesser

Our "Mr." Washington.

IT'S a funny thing about George Washington. Nobody has ever succeeded in making him seem to me like a human being. Of all the American heroes he still remains, even at this late date, a sort of superman. Perhaps he has suffered from too many statues and too many postage stamps, and I think that Mr. Copley, the artist, is to blame. At any rate I am sure that Washington could never have been quite as austere as we have all been led to believe.

The funny thing is that not even the "debunkers" and "detractors" of Washington have been able to pump real air into him. Do you remember when W. E. Woodward, the former advertising man, tried to put the real Washington, as he called him, within the pages of a book? He tried very hard, and all sorts of people got very mad because he said that Washington took a drink now and then. And Rupert Hughes? When he wrote about Washington didn't some of the dear ladies of the D. A. R. want to deport him?

This has always amused me. Ever since I was a boy I have always sort of been afraid of George Washington and although I have read lots about him since then I have never felt I knew him, like I have felt I knew Abraham Lincoln, or Dan Webster, or some others. Perhaps it is because, when I was very young, I read somewhere that even Martha Washington called him "Mr." Washington. I don't know, but I asked a lot of people yesterday about this and they said they felt the same way.

In trying to figure this out it dawned on me that I've never seen a picture of "the young Washington," but always pictures of a cold and proud man in uniform. There may be others and Sol Bloom will correct me if I'm wrong. But I've never seen them, only pictures of the older Washington and never one of him smiling. True, he went through Valley Forge which would take the smile off any man; but afterward he retired to a comfortable existence and was well fed and not at all displeased by the acclaim accorded him by his fellow countrymen.

HAD there been newsreels and press photographers in those days we might have an entirely different idea of the man. Had the candid camera been around to snap him, say with his mouth half full of fried chicken at Mount Vernon, I am sure that the false idea of him, founded upon the legends spread by Parson Weems, would never have lasted as long as they did. There is nothing like the candid camera to take dignity out of the record, and if it is a sort of Winchellian device, in that it acts when nobody is aware of it, there is no question but that as a deflator of personalities, it works better than words.

But it is more than a matter of pictures, this strange austerity of Washington. It is founded upon a national naivete, I suppose, of the same kind that makes so many people, in the books they read, want to have the villains 100 per cent villainous and the heroes 100 per cent pure people who love their mothers, never cheat at cards, and go home on the 5:15 every night. It is a hand-me-down from our Puritan ancestors and because of it we have accorded to Washington nothing but virtue, with the result that, no matter how truthful the Woodwards and Hugheses may be, we will have none of their attempts to inject blood into our idols.

And so we think of Washington as a great soldier who cut down a cherry tree, when he was a boy and who threw a silver dollar across a river when he grew up, and we let those completely homely virtues stand for all that was human in the man. And nothing that the historian may do will alter the case. Washington, as the good man and true, has become a national legend and most of us would be terrifically upset if it were definitely proved that he had just as much charm, as pleasant a voice, and as ready a smile as the man now occupying the position he was the very first to hold.

* * * *

YESTERDAY morning I had to go to my dentist before coming into the office and he said that he could not see me on Saturday. I had forgotten it was a holiday, but he reminded me that it was. Every year on Washington's birthday, he said, he went down to Mount Vernon alone to pay his respects to Washington. Knowing him as a man devoid of the rah-rah-rah type of patriotism and not given to sentimentalisms (in public, at least) I was a little surprised.

"Oh," he said, when I showed my incredulity, "I think every one, at least once a year, should do something of this kind. I don't mean I go down there and make a public spectacle of myself, but I just wander around and silently say a prayer of thanks to him for all he did for us. He was a very great man."

And I couldn't but agree that he was, but some impishness inherent in my scoffing nature made me ask this fellow if he didn't agree with me that it would be nicer if we could have a mental picture of Washington that was less frozen. And he looked at me, astounded.

"Frozen? Him? Why, say, he was a Great Man" (I could just see him capitalizing those two words!), "and nobody's got any right to try and—what's the word?—humanize him. No, sir! Nobody'd have the respect for him that they now have if they thought of him as just another guy like you or me, or even Roosevelt. I'm mighty darn glad he didn't have any press agent in his day. Yes, sir, I like to think of him as somebody apart from everybody else. But he wasn't 'frozen.' Why, say, do you know he'd take a drink of wine now and then?"

So I said, "Happy Washington's Birthday and don't cut down any cherry trees," and left. What else could I do?

DuPont Denies Federal Claim For $617,316

Challenges Good Faith of Government in Reply On 1929 Income.

By the Associated Press.

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 21.—Pierre S. du Pont, chairman of the board of the Du Pont Co., in an answer filed with the U. S. Board of Tax Appeals in Washington today, denied the claims of the Internal Revenue Commissioner for an additional tax of $617,316 on his 1929 income.

A summary prepared by the publicity representative of the Du Pont Co. and given out here states that du Pont challenges the good faith of the Government and made the charge that the various allegations are "made as part of a scheme to injure him or to force a compromise of claims in a manner amounting to extortion."

Du Pont questions the good faith of the commissioner in denying that nearly a million dollars in charitable contributions were not properly deductible, since a Supreme Court decision upholding similar deductions in another case is a matter of record.

He avers that one of the statements made by the commissioner in an attempt to support the charge that Du Pont and John J. Raskob, former Democratic National Chairman, entered into fraudulent agreements to set up losses for tax purposes, is "willfully and knowingly false" and "is part of a scheme to injure petitioners (Mr. du Pont) and Mr. Raskob or to force a compromise of claims in a manner amounting to extortion."

Referring to the stock transaction between himself and Raskob, Du Pont said:

"It is true that I sold to Mr. Raskob during the year 1929, certain stocks, with the purpose of establishing losses already sustained. The procedure was in the manner provided by law. At that time, which was just after the "crash" of October, 1929, the selling of these securities in the open market might have had an appreciable depressing effect in the then disorganized state of affairs and I was unwilling to risk a contribution to existing disorder. Mr. Raskob sold to me a similar amount of stocks, I believe for similar purposes and with similar ideas with respect to the market.

"As will be remembered, there was quite a quick recovery in prices of some stocks. In the latter part of 1929, and in the early part of 1930, I repurchased from Mr. Raskob at market values the same number of shares of the same stocks that I had sold to him, and I sold back to him similar amounts of shares that I had previously purchased from him.

"There was no agreement or misunderstanding between us that this second step should be taken."

Vandenberg Fights to Delay $204,500,000 Relief Grants

By the Associated Press.

Contending that there was a $200,000,000 saving at stake, Senator Vandenberg, (Republican), Michigan, launched a drive yesterday against further appropriations for the Florida ship canal, the Passamaquoddy power project and three other work-relief-financed undertakings until each project is approved by Congress.

A quick showdown was promised, when the War Department appropriation measure comes before the Senate. Senator Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, laid the ground for the fight by introducing amendments to the appropriation bill adding $29,000,000 for continuation of the projects, which the House had knocked out.

Already, $14,500,000 has been paid out in starting the five projects, Vandenberg said, estimating that completion would cost about $204,500,000 more.

He hoped to muster support for a future policy prohibiting starting any such large scale projects without specific approval of Congress.

Projects under Vandenberg's fire, together with the sums he said were necessary for completion and the amount of funds already allotted, are:

Florida ship canal, minimum estimate yet required, $138,000,000; $5,000,000 allotted.

Passamaquoddy (Maine) total power project, $39,000,000, with $5,000,000 allotted.

Conchas Dam, New Mexico, $6,000,000 yet needed; $2,500,000 allotted.

Sardis Reservoir, Mississippi, $9,500,000 yet needed; $1,000,000 allotted.

Vandenberg opened an attack on the Florida ship canal at hearings before the Senate Commerce Committee on a resolution he introduced calling for investigation of its engineering feasibility and serviceability from a shipping standpoint.

He said the hearings had demonstrated to his satisfaction there is "no economic justification" for the 200-mile canal across northern Florida.

Fletcher defended the canal as providing a 400-mile shorter passage from the Eastern Coast to Gulf points, as well as offering safe passage in hurricane weather.

Townsend Plan Official Here

brought to light in the House the other day.

Mr. Clements, however, read several telegrams from merchants who said they favored the plan, and that no coercion had been used on them.

On a wall, just behind, Mr. Clements' desk, hung a picture which apparently is an emblem of the Townsendites. This showed an old, bearded man striding across a field while he tossed golden coins right and left. The caption said:

"As he sows, so shall we all reap."

Mr. Clements wanted to talk about the Townsend Plan. Ten million persons, he said, were behind it. Not this many were paying dues, he explained, but that many or more had signed petitions to signify their approval of the plan.

"We are asking Congress," he explained, "to enact a 2 per cent tax on all transactions. We are the first people to come before Congress to ask to be taxed.

"The money so raised would be used to pay a $200-a-month pension to all persons 60 or over.

"Our proposition is that the resulting stimulation of purchasing power will bring back a velocity in the turnover of money and credit that will re-establish prosperity in this country.

"It is primarily a recovery plan, not a pension plan."

Some of those present, who had been reading the statements of Dr. Townsend, were under the distinct impression that Dr. Townsend was primarily concerned about the "old folks."

But Dr. Clements did not recall reading such statements.

"What about all this money that is rolling in?" Mr. Clements was asked. "Why is it necessary? What is it for?"

"Well," he relied, "we have to pay for printing. We spend from $1,000 to $1,200 a week on the radio. We have to pay organizers to go out and preach the Townsend gospel. We have to pay rent for these offices here and for the hire of stenographers and clerks."

Mr. Clements was reminded of the principal argument in the House against the Townsend Plan.

Members like Representative Gifford, of Massachusetts, he was told, had complained that the Townsend Pension Plan was fantastic, impossible, and that, therefore, it was a "cruel hoax" to take money from the old people who were contributing in the hope that they soon would be getting $200 a month.

"It is not a hoax," said Mr. Clements.

A moment later, he admitted that the Townsend organization's attorney had not given a ruling on the constitutionality of the Townsend Plan. Many members of Congress have insisted that it would not be constitutional.

Mr. Clements expressed his own opinion, however, that it was constitutional.

Enemies of the Townsend Plan have broadcast stories to indicate that certain Townsend officials have had trouble with the law. Mr. Clements told of a case in which an irresponsible newspaper said that he and another man had been indicted. This, he said, made him "d—— mad." He explained that there was nothing to such stories.

Mr. Clements was asked for a roster of his organizers. He refused. Told that there had been reports that the organizers included erstwhile organizers in the Ku Klux Klan, he said:

"That may be true in the South. I would be surprised if it weren't true, considering how many Ku Klux men there used to be in the South."

House Votes Farm Bill

or amendments he was willing to accept.

One of those would have broadened the Secretary's authority to spend from the "30 per cent of customs receipts" fund set up under AAA, not only to promote domestic and foreign markets, but also to use what was left over for benefit payments on that portion of farm crops used for normal domestic consumption.

Another amendment by Jones would carry over the old AAA import quota provision, giving the President authority to call on the tariff commission for findings, and impose import quotas, when the commission finds farm imports are jeopardizing prices under the program.

Still another change opened the way for compensation to tenant farmers and share croppers by directing the Secretary, in making grants, to "take into consideration the contribution in services of tenants and croppers, and any loss of income sustained by tenants and croppers by reason of changes in the farming practices adopted."

Other amendments:

By Chairman Jones—Authorizing the Secretary in every practical way to encourage use of land withdrawn from production for soil conservation purposes, rather than for growing commercial crops.

By Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), Texas—Directing the Secretary of Agriculture to protect the interest of the small producers.

By Representative Fred C. Gilchrist (Republican), of Iowa—Substituting the term "may" for "shall" in connection with payment of benefits under the act.

By Representative Boileau—Extending authorizations for use of funds to eradicate disease among cattle.

By Chairman Jones—Authorizing use of $2,000,000 in relief funds for fighting wind-erosion in the Southwest "dust bowl."

Among the amendments defeated, or ruled out of order was one by Representative August H. Andresen, (Republican), Minnesota, to repeal the reciprocal tariff law and abrogate existing trade agreements.

The bill had been under discussion in the House for three days, but there never was any question as to its ultimate passage. The only serious threat to the measure came from the dairy bloc, which earnestly but vainly sought to insure against use of 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 acres of farm land taken out of production for increasing the supply of dairy products.

No Contracts Provided.

Devised to get around the Supreme Court's AAA decision, outlawing crop control, the House measure, like that approved last week by the Senate, provides for a two-year stop-gap program during which Wallace would make payments to farmers for taking land out of production, ostensibly for soil conservation purposes. Unlike AAA, there would be no written contract with farmers.

After January 1, 1938, the temporary Federal program would give way to a permanent, State-aid arrangement, with the Government making grants directly to States which set up their own farm-adjustment programs. States may come in before 1938 if their plans are acceptable to Secretary Wallace.

A five-fold policy, with soil conservation as its base, was established in the bill approved yesterday by the House. Purposes set forth include:

Preservation and improvement of soil fertility.

Promotion of economic use of land.

Provision for and maintenance of a continuous and stable supply of agricultural commodities adequate to meet domestic and foreign consumer requirements at prices fair to both producers and consumers thereof.

The Secretary of Agriculture could make payments to farmers based on:

Their treatment or use of their land, or part of it, for soil restoration, soil conservation or the prevention of erosion.

Changes in the use of their land.

A percentage of their normal production of any one or more farm commodities designated by the Secretary which equals that percentage of the normal production of such commodities required for domestic production.

$500,000,000 Limit.

Before the House met yesterday for the final lap, an amendment had been written into the bill restricting expenditures under the program to $500,000,000. A similar amount to finance the vast undertaking is expected to be provided in alternative suggestions for new taxes to be submitted to Congress by the President next week.

Prominent in the assault on the measure yesterday were Representatives Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan; John Taber, of New York, and Usher L. Burdick, of North Dakota, all Republicans. Mapes said it would "give those shiftless farmers who refuse to rotate their crops a chance to get easy money." Taber said the measure was Communistic and an attempt to enslave the farmer.

"I am opposed to this bill," said Burdick, himself a dirt farmer, "because you are surrendering the power over the entire program to one man—the Secretary of Agriculture. This bill is not the only way to deal with the farm program. For God's sake, where is your independence?"

Jones defended the program against all attacks, denying it set up a "scarcity" doctrine, and declaring that counter Republican policies from 1928 to 1932 "paralyzed agriculture and destroyed commerce."

Normal Relationship Is Dim.

The McCormack amendment approved yesterday, designed to bring about a "normal" income relationship between the farming and non-farming population, is similar to the Wagner amendment, which was defeated last week by the Senate, despite the fact that it had Wallace's approval.

Providing a probable basis for extended controversy, when the House bill goes to the Senate, the amendment adds to the purposes of the bill:

"Re-establishment, at as rapid a rate as the Secretary of Agriculture determines to be practicable and in the general public interest, of the ratio between the purchasing power of the net income per person on farms and that of the income per person not on farms that prevailed during the five-year period, 1910-14, inclusive, as determined from statistics available in the United States Department of Agriculture, and the maintenance of such ratio. The powers conferred under sections 7 to 14, inclusive, of this act shall be used to assist voluntary action calculated to effectuate the purposes specified in this section. Such powers shall not be used to discourage the production of supplies of foods and fibers sufficient to maintain normal domestic human consumption as determined by the Secretary from the records of domestic human consumption in the years 1920 to 1929, inclusive, taking into consideration increased population, quantities of any commodity that were forced into domestic consumption by decline in exports during such period, current trends in domestic consumption and exports of particular commodities, and the quantities of substitutes available for domestic consumption within any general class of food commodities."

Senate Munitions Inquiry Told Services to Air Group 'Not Political.'

By the Associated Press.

The work performed by O. Max Gardner, former Democratic national committeeman from North Carolina, for the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, was described yesterday by his law partner in Washington as "no more political than the work of any other lawyer in Washington."

Fred Morrison, Gardner's partner, said, moreover, that the fee paid was "substantially less" than the $75,000 mentioned by James P. Murray, Washington representative of Boeing Aircraft Co., in a letter to the president of his company. The letter was introduced Thursday at the Senate Munitions Committee hearing. Gardner is in the South, Morrison said.

He estimated the fee paid Gardner was "two-thirds or perhaps three-fifths" of the sum mentioned by Murray in the letter. This would make it $50,000 to $60,000.

"Gov. Gardner's (he was former Governor of North Carolina) employment was not for the purpose of exerting political influence," Morrison said. "It was for legal counsel and reorganization work. If the work was political, then anything a lawyer would do in Washington would be political."

Murray, in his letter written January 18, 1935, described Gardner as "a politician of the first water, and my observation tell me that in this Administration, in order to get things done, resort simply has to be made to the use of politics."

Morrison said Gardner served the aeronautical chamber through most of 1934 and until about April, 1935, and continued in a lesser advisory capacity on policy matters for a longer period.

The Post's Food Editor's Oyster Recipes Take First Place in Nation-Wide Contest

Miss Duncan Awarded Trip To Bermuda

'Torchbearers,' With Burning Ruin, Clinches Prize for Originalty.

"There is something about the fat little middle and fluted skirts of an oyster that is irresistible."

Washingtonians, long famous as devotees of the luscious oyster, that the beds of the Chesapeake Bay provide so liberally for bivalve-loving gourmets of the Nation's Capital, readily echo the writer's praise of their favorite hard-shelled food.

Now these Washingtonians will have an opportunity to taste the royal oyster in four entirely new forms. For Dorothea Duncan, food editor of The Post, yesterday was announced as the winner of a Nation-wide contest conducted among newspaper and magazine food editors and writers by the Oyster Institute of North America. Her prize-winning recipes are made public today for the first time.

The contest called for four original oyster recipes. One of the recipes—named "Torch Bearers," and served under the blue flame of a small quantity of burning rum—was prepared by Miss Duncan yesterday in The Post's kitchen, for the delectation of Dr. Lewis Radcliffe, director of the organization sponsoring the contest. Dr. Radcliffe had called to congratulate Miss Duncan, who will receive the first prize, a two-week trip to Bermuda.

The judges were unanimous in awarding first honors to Miss Duncan. They were Miss Amy Vanderbile and Mme. Pearl V. Metzelthin, food writers and consultants, and Crosby Gaige, theatrical producer and gourmet, who staged the hit-show, "Accent on Youth."

Runners-up in the contest were Miss Mary Zoretskie, of the Syracuse, N. Y., Post-Standard; Miss Marion F. Sawyer, of the Detroit Free Press, and Miss Alice M. Eaton, of the magazine Hotel and Restaurant Management.

Following are the four winning recipes.

Oysters Artesian.

8 large oysters
2 tablespoons of flour
2 tablespoons of butter
2 cups of milk
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons mustard horseradish
4 strips of bacon
4 1½ to 2-inch slices of Vienna bread
Melted butter.

Wrap each oyster in a half strip of bacon, securing the bacon with a toothpick. Broil under a flame for eight minutes, turning each oyster once.

Make a well in each slice of bread by hollowing out the center. Toast first the smooth side and then the hollowed side. Brush bread well with melted butter, and fill each with two bacon-wrapped oysters. Cover with sauce, made as follows: Melt butter in top of double-boiler, and stir in flour and salt, which have been mixed, to form a smooth paste. Add milk gradually and cook until creamy, smooth and slightly thickened. Flavor with mustard horseradish. This recipe will serve four.

Oyster Fried Pies.

1-3 cup shortening (half butter and half lard)
1 cup sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons ice water
8 large or 12 small oysters

Cut cold shortening into flour, which has been sifted with salt, using two knives. Add ice water. Chill dough before rolling. Roll about one-eighth inch thick, cut into circles 3 inches in diameter. On one-half of each circle place 1 large or 2 small oysters, which have been dried between two clean towels. Dust oysters lightly with salt. Fold over each circle, pressing together the open edges with the tines of a fork. Prick each pie. Chill.

Fry pies in deep, hot fat (375 to 390 degrees F.) until golden brown, about two or three minutes. Drain on absorbent paper and serve at once. This recipe will make six oyster fried pies.

Oyster and Mushroom Barbecue.

Saute large white mushroom caps in butter for five to ten minutes, or until almost tender. Roll large oysters in grated Italian cheese, allowing two oysters to every three mushrooms. String mushrooms and oysters together on small wooden skewers, starting with mushrooms, and alternating until three mushroom caps and two oysters are used. If oysters are very large, they should be doubled over to compare in size with the mushroom caps.

Broil under broiler, which has been preheated for ten minutes, turning once. Have the rack about 2 inches under flame. Allow two minutes broiling for each side, turning only once during cooking process. Remove and serve at once, with a tablespoon of sherry wine poured over each barbecue.

Torch-Bearers.

Imbed shallow oyster-cocktail glasses in crushed ice. Fill glasses with freshly shucked oysters, which have been dried between clean towels. Just before serving, cover with light rum and set ablaze. Use enough rum to keep blaze burning for about one minute. Serve with lemon wedges.

100 G. W. Students Graduate Tonight

The Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, minister of the Central Congregational Church of Brooklyn, New York, will deliver the convocation address.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will offer the invocation while degrees and certificates will be presented the graduates by Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of the University.

Dr. Lewis Radcliffe, president of the Oyster Institute of North America, congratulates Dorothea Duncan, food editor of The Post, on winning first honors in a Nation-wide contest for original oyster recipes, conducted under the sponsorship of the institute and open to newspaper and magazine food editors and food writers of the country. The decision of the judges in awarding first prize to Miss Duncan was unanimous. Her reward will be a two-week vacation trip to Bermuda.

Washington's Birthday

the next time I see you we will celebrate, because I know that George Washington, who was always a lover of good sport, would wish you the same as I am doing today."

Bloom's well-wishes, however, seemed ironical, to say the least, for his letter was dispatched with a broad grin, soon after he learned that weather elements seemed to be conspiring against the "Big Train." Not only was considerable wind resistance threatened, but a thaw that might make the snow-heaped river much wider than the recent measurement of 372 feet was reported imminent.

Persists In Stand.

Late last night, despite a shower of denunciations from strict believers in all George Washington yarns, Bloom persisted in his stand that old British government maps showed the river to have been 1,300 feet wide in Washington's day, and that no one could throw that far.

Confirmation of this theory, that the river now is narrower than in Washington's day, was offered yesterday by Mary Willis Minor, who described herself as a Virginia genealogist, and a descendant of Col. Lewis Willis, one of Washington's playmates. Mrs. Minor said that she could remember her aunt saying that her father, this Col. Willis, often remarked that the river was much wider when hei was a boy than when he was an old man.

The issue was further complicated this morning with the report of the results of some scholarly researches on the part of Richard Langham Riedel, Senate page. According to Riedel, the object thrown by the first President might have been a stone or bit of Indian wampum, but that if it was a dollar, "in all probability it was a Spanish piece-of-eight."

Riedel quoted from a copy of Parson Weem's life of Washington, as saying, "Col. Lewis Willis, his playmate and kinsman, has been heard to say that he has often seen him throw a stone across the Rappahannock, at the lower ferry of Fredericksburg. It would be no easy matter to find a man now-a-days who could do it."

A Spanish Dollar.

"This would indicate that it was a stone, rather than a dollar, that Washington tossed over the river," Riedel continued. "If the missile actually was a coin, in all probability it was a Spanish dollar. But why not the possibility that Washington used an Indian wampum shell? We might picture Washington throwing a shell in a manner that would cause it to spin through the air, and upon striking the water, skip across the surface of the river to the opposite shore."

Johnson, at his Germantown, Md., farm, who all along has maintained stoutly he could throw a dollar as far as Washington ever did, was not too optimistic.

"There may be too much wind resistance," he said. "Give me a baseball though, and I'll do it."

The interest manifested in the dollar-throwing astonished the baseball star.

"Why only today two carpenters were working on my house, and I overheard them arguing over whether I could do the trick. If I so much as walk over to a neighbor's house, I'm asked to explain why I'm not practicing," he chuckled.

Broadway Goes to Havana. By Ed Sullivan

HAVANA, Feb. 21.—God's in His Heaven, all's well with the world; Shirley Temple is the favorite movie actress of this city, which argues well for the sanity and sentimentality of the residents. The taxicab driver almost precipitated a collision in the narrow street when I brought up her name. He touched his fingers to his lips in an osculatory bouquet. "Ricito de oro, ricito de oro," he enthused. That is the Cuban description of "Little Miss Marker," and a free translation would be "curls of gold"—that is how she is advertised in front of the local cinema cathedrals. Ranking next to Shirley is Fred Astaire, and the chauffeur of the car uttered vast sighs of contentment at the recollection of Astaire's nimble feet. At the moment, the picture doing the biggest business here is "The Magnificent Obsession," described on the posters as "Sublime Obsession." It has played at the Encanto Theater—the theater of enchantment—for a solid week and is still turning them away. Hollywood is the common denominator.

Amazing how you warm up to a city when you learn that its residents, while not speaking your language, have similar likes and dislikes. Truth to tell, first impressions of Havana are disquieting. At the harbor entrance stand the forbidding gray battlements of Morro Castle, where political prisoners are locked away in dungeons. That is Impression No. 1. One hundred yards to the right is the spot where the battleship Maine was sunk. That is Impression No. 2. In the nearby parks along the waterfront, the machine guns of the revolution rattled and banged, and blood was spilled. That is Impression No. 3. Then you learn that these people rush to the local theaters to see Joan Crawford and Clark Gable, and you come to the realization that they are no different than you are; that their Latin violence was no more unruly than that of a Louisiana assassin; that Morro Castle is no more forbidding than the gray walls of Sing Sing or Alcatraz.

Last night we started making the round of the city's night clubs. The Eden Concert, a stone's throw from Sloppy Joe's, was the first to be visited, and from there we went to the Montmartre. The floor shows were pretty bad, the owners making the mistake of imitating the Broadway formula, but when the performers went to town in their own medium—the rhumba—the effect was exciting. The Eden Concert, an open air club situated between tall buildings, achieves a picturesque and unusual effect by painting the surrounding walls with Cuban murals. The Montmartre features a dance floor that is laid out in the numbered squares of a roulette table. I'll report on the others after inspecting them tonight.

No more bewitching night exists than that presented by Havana as your ship bears down on it from the Gulf of Mexico. Sprawled along the waterfront for miles, and etched against the blue sky by thousands of electric lights, it looks like a fairyland of the tropics. The city itself, on closer inspection, bears out the impression that the Cuban aristocrats live in mansions. The broad, clean thoroughfares decorated with aisles of tropical flowers, are more impressive than anything New York has to offer. Monuments and parks seem to be at every other corner. Only in the business section are the streets narrow and pinched for elbow room, as tiny as the twisted streets of our Chinatown.

Ferry Farm Will Hold Big Birthday Fete

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 21. While the Nation was more or less concerned tonight with whether Walter Johnson, of baseball fame, would throw a silver dollar across the Rappahannock River here tomorrow, Virginia's General Assembly and their families banqueted in Seacobeck Hall of the State Teachers College preparatory to attending the Washington birthday exercises.

The Legislators and their families arrived here at 5 p. m., were welcomed by a delegation of Fredericksburg officials and escorted to the college, where they will spend the night.

At the banquet, attended by the visiting guests and prominent Fredericksburgers, brief talks were made by former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle, now president of the State Board of Education; Morgan L. Combs, president of the college, and Dr. S. C. Mitchell, professor of history at the University of Richmond and principal speaker at tomorrow's exercises. Gov. George C. Peery and his staff will not arrive until tomorrow noon. Lieut. Gov. James A. Price was said to be ill in Richmond and his attendance was doubtful.

The exercises at Ferry Farm, a half mile from here will start at 2:30 p. m., when the much-publicized effort of Walter Johnson will take place. That the "Big Train" would do the feat with ease was believed here today as youngsters tossed rocks and pieces of lead across the stream. John Monger, a C. C. C. youth was loaned a silver dollar, which he tossed across the river, the coin landing more than 25 feet from the river on the opposite bank.

Dr. Luther A. Hodges, foot specialist, annouhced that he would give six months' free foot treatment for the silver dollar. Aaron Goldsmith, a merchant, offers $100 for the coin. Sol Bloom, Representative from New York, notified celebration officials today he would be unable to attend the exercises.

Tomorrow's program will open in the morning with a tour of the city by the General Assembly. They will be guests at luncheon at 1 o'clock and at 2:30 will attend the exercises at Ferry Farm. After Mayor R. J. Payne has made the address of welcome he will introduce former State Senator C. O'Connor Goolrick, who will introduce Gov. Peery.

Presentation of the cheery trees to the State of Virginia will be made by Otosihiro Kuroda, representing the Japanese government. Gov. Peery will accept them in behalf of the State. The official dedication of the cherry tree memorial boulevard will take place when Gov. Peery and Mr. Kuroda plant one of the trees. Dr. S. C. Mitchell will then be introduced and will deliver a talk on Washington.

Dead of Burns.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Feb. 21.—Mrs. W. T. Mattox, well-known resident of Gretna, died last night in a Lynchburg hospital from burns sustained at her home eight weeks ago. She was trynig to light a stove with inflammable fluid, when it exploded. Her husband and two daughters survive.

PREVENT DANGERS OF CONSTIPATION*

"Bulk" in ALL-BRAN Is Gentle in Action

Common constipation is largely due to insufficient "bulk" in meals. You fail to get your internal exercise. Millions of people have found that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies soft "bulk" with satisfactory results.

Tests in nutrition laboratories demonstrate that the "bulk" in ALL-BRAN can be used with the utmost confidence. Naturally, those few individuals with diseased or highly sensitive intestines should not take "bulk" in any form—either in leafy vegetables or in bran.

Unlike cathartics, ALL-BRAN is natural in its action—nor does this food lose its effectiveness with continued use. Within the body, it absorbs moisture and cleanses the intestines, promoting normal and healthful elimination.

Two tablespoonfuls of this delicious cereal, served with milk or cream, are usually sufficient. Enjoy it also in cooked dishes.

Help your family keep well. Serve ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

An Excellent Ingredient in Relishes, Salads and Side Dishes.

SAUERKRAUT has a wide variety of applications in the daily menu. Aside from its use in main dishes, sauerkraut is an excellent ingredient in relishes, salads, side dishes, garnishes and other forms.

Many housewives utilize it in a few basic recipes, such as combining it with spareribs, sausage, pork shoulders and other meat cuts.

There are scores of other recipes, however, that are enhanced by the tangy flavor of sauerkraut, and from these have been selected a number that lend themselves to quick and easy preparation. Economy is another important qualification considered in the selection.

Pigs' knuckles and sauerkraut is included among the following recipes. Though it takes several hours to cook, the dish is included among those that are quickly prepared, because the actual preparation takes very little time.

Pigs' Knuckles and Sauerkraut.

Wash and scrape pigs' knuckles and put on to cook in water to cover. Simmer for about two hours, or until the meat is tender. Then add sauerkraut to the broth and cook just long enough to make it tender. Season to taste with salt, pepper and celery or caraway seed.

Sauerkraut Olive Relish in Green Peppers.

2 cups sauerkraut
1 package lemon flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
4 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup finely chopped celery
12 olives stuffed with pimientos (sliced in rings)
½ teaspoon salt
6 green peppers
Lettuce
French or mayonnaise dressing

Dissolve a package of lemon flavored gelatin in one cup boiling water. When cool add sauerkraut, lemon juice, celery, olives and salt. As it begins to thicken, pour into green peppers from which seeds and partitions have been removed. The green peppers serve as individual molds. When chilled, slice in thin rings and serve on beds of crisp lettuce with a dab of salad dressing on top of each ring.

Sauerkraut Bran Salad.

1 cup celery
½ cup cereal bran
1 cup sauerkraut
Russian dressing

Cut pears, celery, and kraut in small pieces. Mix with Russian dressing and bran. Serve in nests of crisp lettuce. Garnish each salad with two strips of red pimiento crossed, and small rosettes of cheese. All ingredients should be thoroughly chilled.

Mashed Potatoes and Kraut. (vegetable side dish.)

Sauerkraut and Tuna Fish Salad.

2 cups flaked tuna fish
2 cups sauerkraut
1 cup diced celery
1 tablespoons chopped capers or a few stuffed olives
2 tablespoons onion juice.

Combine ingredients and serve with cooked salad dressing on lettuce leaves. Salmon or any cold cooked fish may be used instead of the tuna fish.

Successful Debs Need Stewed Figs And Liveliness

Two things are necessary to become a successful debutante—stewed figs and "conviv"—according to two of New York's prettiest and most popular debs, Jane Pope and LeBrun Rhinelander.

"Conviv" the girls defined for the Associated Press as "liveliness, a sense of humor, the antithesis of being bored and stupid looking."

Stewed figs are a popular diet now in debutante circles. A dash of spinach or a little tomato juice are often accompaniments to this dish.

Both girls insist that beauty and clothes are not the first essentials for debutante popularity, pointing out that "loads of people are perfectly swell and not very nice looking."

Stuffing of Bread Crumbs Makes Roast More Tempting

U. S. Bureau of Home Economics.

Many roasts, especially flank steak of beef, loin of pork and shoulder of veal or lamb, lend themselves to a delicious bread stuffing. The stuffing, for each, though basically the same, may be flavored especially to enhance the type of meat with which it is to be roasted.

Dressing, Properly Seasoned With the Flavoring Most Attractive to the Type of Meat, Adds Much to Taste and Variety.

By Dorothea Duncan.

ROAST FOWL is not the only meat that is complemented by a delicious bread stuffing. If, for variety's sake alone, you should try some of your favorite roasts with a stuffing of bread crumbs which has been seasoned with a flavoring most attractive to the type of meat with which it is being roasted.

A crown roast of pork, for example, lends itself beautifully to a bread dressing flavored with apples, dried prunes or apricots. A flank steak of beef, which, by the way, is one of the most inexpensive of roasts and, if properly cooked, one of the most palatable, is especially well adapted to a bread stuffing seasoned with dried celery leaves, the faintest touch of sage and fat seeded raisins.

A shoulder of veal or lamb also make ideal roasts in which a pocket may be cut for dressing. Plain bread dressing with a touch of onion, a bit of parsley or celery is particularly attractive for either of these roasts.

The small family who rarely if ever indulges in a large cut of meat because of the problem of leftovers will be interested in chops (lamb or pork) which have been cut double thickness to permit a pocket for stuffing. These chops then are roasted in the oven in the same fashion as the large roasts.

Fish, too, and fillets as well as whole fish, may be baked with a bread dressing. The large fish is especially recommended for the family of four, six or eight, and the stuffed fillets for the family of two or three.

The following stuffing may be used exactly as it appears or with your own variation of flavoring for poultry or any of the other suggested meats.

Bread Stuffing.

2 to 3 tablespoons melted fat
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 cup dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 to 2 tablespoons milk or stock
½ teaspoon each sage, chopped celery, parsley

Melt the fat in the frying pan; add the onion, and saute until tender. Add the bread crumbs and seasonings and mix well. Then add the milk or stock. This makes a loose, light stuffing much preferred by many to the soft moist or compact type. It can be varied by leaving out the onion or the sage, by adding chopped celery or by adding two tablespoons of seeded raisins.

Pickle and Caper Stuffing. (for fish)

1 cup cracker crumbs or fine bread crumbs.
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon chopped onion
1 teaspoon minced parsley
1 teaspoon capers
1 teaspoon chopped pickles
¼ cup butter or other fat

Mix thoroughly the cracker crumbs, salt, pepper, chopped onion, parsley, capers and pickles, and melted fat. This makes a dry, crumbly stuffing. To make a slightly more moist dressing, use only two tablespoons butter and add two-thirds cup milk or water. A tablespoon of lemon juice may be substituted for the capers, if preferred.

The Heel of the Loaf.

What do you do with the heel of the loaf? Here is an excellent idea for a dish that the children will love. Dip half slices of bread in golden corn syrup, drain off all surplus sirup and saute in shortening.

Smocks as Favorite Of Modern Woman

Smocks, wide and long, with full sleeves that button snuggly but comfortably at the wrist, are the modern woman's favorite kitchen wear.

These smocks have more than the advantages offered by the cover-all apron, for they will protect the loveliest dress. They can be donned in a hurry over an afternoon or dinner dress if it is necessary to do any last-minute preparation or serving in the kitchen.

Smocks are attractive, too, and much more flattering for morning house wear than the old-fashioned bungalow apron. The smock that has long sleeves which unbutton just above the elbow is popular with many women who like to have bare arms when doing any strenuous cooking. This same smock with the long sleeves in place can be worn to protect a long-sleeved dress whenever necessary.

Avocado and Potato Make a Delightful Salad Combination

A DELICIOUS salad combination, not one so well known but increasingly popular, as confirmed devotees of the late supper hour can tell you, is that of avocados with our classic potato salad.

Freshness, flavor and color are contributed by avocados as well as a distinguishing dignity which lifts the erstwhile humble salad into the limelight. Avocados also furnish an excellent quota of minerals and vitamins.

Avocado-Potato Combination Salad.

1 cup avocado cubes
Clove of garlic
2 cups diced cold boiled potatoes
2 cups diced cooked carrots
½ cup green sweet pepper slices
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup mayonnaise
2 teaspoons lemon juice
Hard-cooked eggs
Avocado sections

Prepare avocado by cutting into halves, removing seed, peeling and cutting into cubes. Rub mixing bowl lightly with cut clove of garlic. Fold mayonnaise lightly into combined ingredients. Chill and serve from a platter garnished with alternate sections of hard-cooked eggs and avocados. Serves 6 to 8.

Here's a Way to Serve Yule Fruit Cake Now

If there is any fruit cake left from Christmas resting upon your pantry shelf take it down and serve it this way. You will find the following combination an excellent one for the Sunday supper dessert.

Take a square of dark warm fruit cake and place it atop two warm pineapple circles. Add four sugar lumps. Pour 2 or 3 teaspoons of brandy, rum or orange extract over the sugar lumps. Set afire. Watch eyes pop wide open with enthusiasm when this bit of fireworks appears. Pass warm pudding sauce.

Even Carpet Sweepers Are Streamlined Now

The last word in carpet sweepers is streamlined to the last inch. It runs as easily as a purring eight-cylinder motor on any floor covering and will slide under the lowest of furniture. Soft rubber bumpers on all four sides keep it from being a menace to your most prized bit of furniture.

The new colors are black with chrome trim, or yellow or green with chrome bands, if you have an eye for color.

Bananas Used In New Upside Down Dessert

Recipe for Latest Version of Reversed Cake; Tarts, Pudding Delectable.

IF YOU are looking for new desserts with which to charm your family consider these: A new version of the upside down cake which features bananas, blackberry tarts that taste like June instead of February, and a bread pudding that leaves every other bread pudding ever invented in the shade because this one is chock full of delicious crushed pineapple and is served with a delectable pineapple sauce.

You will appreciate the blackberry tarts after a not to hearty dinner, the banana upside down cake wtih milk for luncheon, and the pineapple bread pudding any time that puddings are in order.

Banana Upside Down Cake.

1 cup brown sugar
3 tablespoons butter
3 medium sized bananas

3 eggs, separated
6 tablespoons evaporated milk
1 cup sugar
1½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla

Beat eggs yolks with milk. Add sugar and beat until dissolved. Fold in dry ingredients. Fold in beaten egg whites. Bake for 50 minutes in slow oven (300 degrees F.). Amount serves 8.

Pan should be about 8 by 8 inches square and 2 to 4 inches deep.

Blackberry Tarts.

1 No. 2 can blackberries
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ cup sugar
2 tablespoons grated lemon peel
6 baked tart shells

Drain sirup from blackberries and add cornstarch and sugar. Cook until smoth and thickened. Arrange blackberries in baked tart shells. Pour thickened sirup over them. Sprinkle edges with grated lemon peel.

Pineapple Bread Pudding.

2 cups dry bread crumbs
1 tall can evaporated milk
1½ cups water
½ cup sugar
¼ cup melted butter
2 eggs, separated
1 No. 2 can crushed pineapple

Scald diluted milk and pour over crumbs. Cool. Add butter, sugar and beaten egg yolks. Add well-drained pineapple, reserving sirup for sauce. Fold in beaten egg whites. Bake for 50 minutes in a moderate oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit). Amount serves eight.

Fluffy Pineapple Sauce.

3 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
Speck salt
Pineapple sirup drained from crushed pineapple
½ cup water
1-3 cup orange juice
1 tablespoon butter
1 egg, separated

Combine sugar, cornstarch and salt. Add pineapple sirup and water. Cook in double boiler until clear. Beat egg yolk and add pineapple mixture to it. Cook three minutes. Remove from fire. Add butter, orange juice and beaten egg white. Serve warm on pudding.

Sweet Potato Puffs.

Sweet potato puffs will taste delicious with that baked ham or roast of fresh pork. To make: Blend two cups mashed sweet potato, one egg, one-third cup shredded coconut, two tablespoons minced orange rind, salt and pepper to taste. Drop by spoonfuls in deep hot fate (375-390 degrees F.). Fry till brown. Drain on absorbent paper and serve very hot.

Short, Fat Spouse Is More Adaptable, Says Dr. Cheney

The woman who wants an adaptable husband should choose a short, fat mate, rather than a tall, thin one, recent studies of bodily influences on mental reaction indicate.

Pointing out that body structure may be a determining index to personality, Dr. Clarence O. Cheney, of the Columbia University Medical School, recently told alumni of the New York State Psychiatric Institute and Hospital that the "long-boned, constitutionally-weak person is apt to develop an inadequate personality with a withdrawal into himself."

"The short, thick, round type of individual," said Dr. Cheney, "is apt to be active and energetic and to have a greater adjusting capacity than his opposite type."

Troubadour Hats.

Paris (AP).—Troubadour hats have made their debut with spring headgear fashions. They are made of bright green taffeta with a tall tapering crown pierced by a long headed gold pin and a narrow rolling brim which dips in the front.

Holoku Edict Set By Hawaiian Police

Honolulu (AP).—The colorful holoku, a dress the missionaries introduced into Hawaii a century ago, will be worn hereafter by Hawaiian lei sellers under a police edict to "brighten up" the waterfront.

Picturesquely woven in bright colors, the flowing holoku now is worn chiefly by older Hawaiians, who skillfully manipulate its long train, even when dancing the hula.

Many lei venders are descendants of early Hawaiians who resented the introduction of the holoku.

On the Air Today

WASHINGTON'S Birthday is observed via the airways with everything from Walter Johnson's toss of the now famous silver dollar at Fredericksburg to the gala premiere of the "Ziegfeld Follies of the Air." President Roosevelt talks at Philadelphia and George Olson and Ethel Shutta, with the Olson band, begin the first of the new "Celebrity Night" programs.

Special events honoring the day include:

10:00 a. m. President Roosevelt receives degree at Temple University, WJSV and WMAL.

11:00 a. m. Washington's Birthday special musicale, WOL.

11:00 a. m. Sons of Revolution celebration, WJSV.

1:00 p. m. Ferdinand Pecora, Justice of the New York Supreme Court, auspices of Jewish War Veterans, WJSV.

8:45 p. m.—Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, on "Washington and the Constitution," WOL.

9:30 p. m.—Musical instruments of Washington's period, of priceless value, played in "National Barn Dance," WMAL.

9:30 p. m.—John Barrymore portrays role of Washington in scene from Anderson's historical drama, "Valley Forge," in "Chateau," WRC.

9:45 p. m. — Congressman Sol Bloom on "George Washington," including little-known facts of the first President, WOL.

10:00 p. m.—Senator Borah on "The Constitution and Entangling Alliances," WJSV.

10:30 p. m.—Postmaster General Farley on "Campaign and the Corn Crop" from Topeka—Washington Birthday banquet, WMAL.

10:45 p. m.—Representative John W. McCormack, on "Americanism," WJSV.

11:00 p. m.—Rainbow Division salute with William M. Brucker, former Governor of Michigan; Col. J. Monroe Johnson and Ruby D. Garrett, WMAL.

11:30 p. m.—"Made in America Club," with George M. Cohan, Francis T. Garvin and Matthew Woll, WMAL.

* * * *

"Die Meistersinger": From Metropolitan Opera House, WRC and WMAL, at 1:30; with Elizabeth Rethburg.

"Sherlock Holmes": Another story with Dr. Watson, WOR and Mutual stations, 10:30; entitled "The Man With the Twisted Lip."

* * * *

The "Ziegfeld Follies of the Air" replaces the veteran "Beauty Box Theater" series. Miss Brice is expected to stick to comedy, although her introduction of "Second-hand Rose" and "My Man" in years past is proof of her ability to put a song across. However, James Melton and Patti Chapin have been engaged to provide the vocalizing. Advance notice indicates the weekly hour will carry along a plot—of a girl usher who aspires to a position under a Ziegfeld spotlight on the stage.

Ethel Shutta (in private life, of course, wife of Maestro Olson) will be featured in the "Celebrity Night" opening, singing two of her best-known numbers, "I Want a Hillbilly Band" and "At the Codfish Ball." Cook will be his own garrulous, glib, likable self. That should be sufficient. J. H. H.

Italian Land Sinking Alarms Inhabitants

Spezia, Italy, Feb. 21 (AP).—Authorities moved 122 inhabitants and 400 head of cattle to temporary barracks here today because of the alarming sinking of the ground in the Stora River Valley.

Crevices, lakes and funnels appeared suddenly.

Scientists were undecided as to whether the cause was due to land or lava slides or to underground caverns filling up.

Perfect Candy Not a Matter of Chance

Those persons who depend upon luck to give them perfect results in candy making will find failure instead of success. Careful following of tested recipes and nothing else can be attributed to the success of these mouth-watering homemade confections.

Care Is Secret Of Successful Candy Making

Thermometer, or Other Test, Should Be Used; Tasty Recipes Suggested.

DON'T let anyone tell you that candy making is just a matter of luck. Candy making failures are due to carelessness in following recipes, just as much as failures in making pie or cake.

The first rule then, if you wish to make successful candy, is to follow the recipe carefully. Measure all ingredients accurately. Remember that a little extra sugar or an overdose of corn sirup may affect the texture of your candy just as much as too much flour or baking powder in a cake.

After the ingredients have been accurately measured, follow the method of cooking procedure to the last word. If the mixture says stir the mixture until it boils, and after it boils discontinue stirring, you can be sure that following out these directions will make a great difference in the success of the candy.

If you have no candy thermometer with which to test the sirup so that it will not be under or overcooked, use the other test described in the recipe. If, however, you are not sure what soft ball or hard ball or crack stage indicates, be sure to look it up in your candy table somewhere in the back or front of your cook book before attempting the recipe.

The mouth-watering candies illustrated are not difficult to make; in fact, the recipes have been worked out especially for the home kitchen. If you give your attention to every detail in each of the following candy recipes, you, too, will be rewarded with success.

Coconut Fudge.

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
¾ cup milk
2 cups sugar
Dash of salt
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 can moist, sweetened coconut, cut

Add chocolate to milk and place over low flame. Cook until mixture is smooth and blended, stirring constantly. Add sugar and salt, and stir until sugar is dissolved and mixture boils. Continue boiling, without stirring until a small amount of the mixture forms a very soft ball in cold water (232 degrees F.). Remove from fire. Add butter and vanilla. Cool to lukewarm (110 degrees F.), then beat until mixture begins to thicken and loses its gloss. Add coconut. Turn at once into greased pan, 8 by 4 inches. When cold, cut into squares. Makes 18 large pieces.

Coconut Cherry Divinity.

2 cups sugar
2-3 cup water
½ cup light corn sirup
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash of salt
½ can sweet, moist coconut, toasted and crumbled
¾ cup candied cherries, thinly sliced.

Bring half cup sugar and one-third cup water to a boil and boil until a small amount of sirup forms a slightly firm ball in cold water (240 degrees F.). While this mixturet is boiling bring remaining sugar and water and the corn sirup to a boil and boil until a small amount of sirup forms a hard ball in cold water (252 degrees F.). Remove first sirup (240 degrees F.) from fire and cool slightly; pour slowly over egg whites, beating constantly until mixture loses its gloss (1½ minutes). Then add second sirup (252 degrees F.) slowly, beating as before. Fold in vanilla, salt, coconut and cherries, and turn immediately into greased pan, 8 by 8 inches. Cool until firm. Cut in pieces, 1½ by 1 inches. Roll in additional toasted coconut, if desired. Makes 3½ dozen pieces.

Broken pecan meats, chopped dates or raisins may be substituted for the candied cherries in this recipe.

Coconut Fondant Balls.

2 cups sugar
1¼ cups water
2 tablespoons light corn sirup
1 teaspoon vanilla
Canned coconut, sweetened, moist variety.

Combine sugar, water and corn sirup. Place over low flame and stir constantly until sugar is dissolved and mixture boils. Cover and cook 3 minutes; then remove cover and continue boiling, without stirring, until a small amount of sirup forms a soft ball in cold water (238 degrees F.). Wash down sides of pan occasionally with a damp cloth. Remove from fire and pour out on cold, wet platter or porcelain tabletop, or on greased surface. Cool to lukewarm (110 degrees F.). Work with a paddle or spatula until white and creamy. Add vanilla and knead until smooth. Store in covered jar to ripen for several days.

Add 1 cup chopped coconut to fondant. Knead and shape into balls about 1 inch in diameter. Roll balls in additional coconut, plain or delicately tinted. Makes 6 dozen balls.

This recipe may be varied by kneading 1 cup finely chopped raisins or dates into the fondant.

The plain fondant may be flavored with any desired flavoring, and tinted to represent each flavor. These tinted balls of candy may then be rolled in either tinted or untinted coconut.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office

By Morgan Baker.

THE New Deal still needs more room, and is going to get additional office space.

This official statment has come on the heels of the action of the Administration's various departments in taking over apartment houses and private homes in widely separated sections of the city.

BAKER.

More room is needed by the Veterans' Administration to handle the flood of bonus applications. The ICC needs more room to carry out its new bus and truck control work. More room also is needed by the Railroad Retirement Agency.

The following arrangements for increased office space yesterday were announced by Clay J. Guthridge, head of the Division of Government Space Control:

The Veterans' Administration will have, by April 1, 4,000 square feet in the La Salle Apartments, Connecticut avenue and L street, first occupying the third floor and gradually expanding into space of the defunct NRA now administered by the Commerce Department.

Railroad Agency Space.

The Railroad Retirement Agency will occupy 40,000 square feet in a building at Tenth and U streets which is being altered and reconditioned, and will not be ready for occupancy for about two weeks.

The branch of the ICC operating under the motor carrier act will be accommodated in the new ICC Labor Building and the files and offices of the old Railroad Administration will be shifted from there to the second floor at 1418 H street, displacing a unit of the Public Works Administration, which will be transfered to the Interior Department Building.

Archives Project Launched.

A project for the inventory of State and local archives is being undertaken under the administration of the WPA Federal Writers' Projects, and it is expected that about $1,200,000 will be spent on the work by June 30. Co-operating in the project are the American Historical Association, the American Council of Learned Societies, and the Social Science Research Council. Any who may be interested in the preservation of local records and who wish to co-operate are invited to communicate with Luther H. Evans, 1500 Eye street northwest, National Supervisor of the Historical Records Survey.

C. A. Harwell, park naturalist at Yellowstone National Park, has been assigned to the Washington office of the National Park Service for two months of work on ECW visual and vocational education.

Ferdinand A. Varrelman, of the American University, is making a study of European botanical gardens for the use of the House of Representatives' Library Committee in planning the development of the United States Botanic Garden.

Mr. McKellar, you've been quite free
With your hatchet on our cherry tree;
Honored Senator, refrain!
Don't chop our little tree again!
Bury the hatchet for good and all;
This isn't the time for leaves to fall!

Biological Society Program.

Two Agriculture specialists will fill the program of the Biological Society of Washington at its bi-weekly meeting at the Cosmos Club tonight when a series of talks on the fauna and flora of the District of Columbia will be continued.

W. W. Diehl, Bureau of Plant Industry, will hold forth on "Lichens of the District of Columbia and Vicinity," followed by Irving Fox, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, whose subject will be "Spiders of the District of Columbia and Vicinity." Both men will use slides to illustrate their remarks.

The meeting is open to the public, and starts at 8 p. m.

Mrs. Coolidge to Stay At Northampton, Mass.

Northampton, Mass., Feb. 21 (AP).—Ralph W. Hemenway said today Mrs. Grace Coolidge, widow of former President Calvin Coolidge, would remain a resident of Northampton, although the Beeches, secluded estate where Coolidge died, is for sale.

Hemenway, one-time law partner of the former President and still his widow's counsel, said Mrs. Coolidge probably would make her home with Mrs. Florence B. Adams, a friend.

Culbertson on Bridge

Truthfulness at Bridge.

It is only fitting, on Washington's birthday, that the principle of truthfulness, in its relation to bridge, be discussed.

Sadly, I must concede that unfailing veracity would pay poor dividends. Judicious lying is indispensable to the expert's bag of tricks. But there must be a variety of truths and lies if the opponents are to be kept in the desired state of perplexity. The player who lies at every opportunity is even more naive than the consistent truth teller and equally transparent.

A Deceitful Truth.

In the hand described below East shrewdly relied on the psychological fact that the plain, unvarnished truth is rarely believed.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 Diamond	Pass	2 Diamonds	Pass
3 no trump	(final bid).

West made his normal opening lead of the club jack, dummy's queen was smothered by the king, and declarer won with the ace. The five diamond tricks then were cashed, ending in the dummy. On the second round West discarded the nine of spades, later discarding the spade three and the two low hearts.

These perfectly "honest" signals assumed the nature of a double-cross. West felt sure that the declarer would not believe he actually was placing high cards for his, the declarer's, guidance and that he would refuse to be "fooled." West's psychology was well considered. South had a choice of two equal chance finesses in spades and in hearts and, being humanly perverse, he concluded that West's spade signals had been made for the sole purpose of inducing the heart finesse. He felt so sure of this, indeed, that he gave West a scornful withering look as though to say: "What do you think of me? You can't fool me!" and confidently played up to his spade queen. West snickered openly as he gobbled up the trick and ran off his four good clubs, for the contract's defeat.

Disabled Steamship Being Towed to Port

New Orleans, Feb. 21 (AP).—The steamship Elma, disabled by fuel and provisions shortage in the Gulf of Mexico, was being towed to New Orleans today by a Coast Guard cutter and tug.

The Elma, a 150-foot oil-burning vessel with a crew of 15 men, called for aid yesterday when high seas menaced her 90 miles southeast of the mouth of the Mississippi River and the delay caused her fuel to run low. The cutter Kimball last night took the Elma in tow and headed for Southwest Pass into the Mississippi River. Today the seagoing tug Leo left New Orleans for the pass to tow the steamer to New Orleans.

Inventor of Synthetic Rubber Is Married

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Dr. W. H. Carothers, famous in the chemical world as the man who made synthetic rubber, married here today Miss Helen E. Sweetman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Sweetman, of Wilmington, Del.

Dr. Carothers, a graduate of the University of Illinois and later a professor of chemistry at Harvard, went into industrial chemistry at the du Pont Co. several years ago and produced synthetic rubber, which now is in wide commercial use.

Father Julius Nieuland, of Notre Dame, collaborated, having done the fundamental work on acetylene, which led to the final synthetic rubber.

Nation Honors Washington, Father of His Country, Today

WREATH FOR THE TOMB OF WASHINGTON'S MOTHER.—Mary Washington will not be forgotten today when Fredericksburg observes birthday of the Father of the Country. At Kenmore, home of the First President's sister, students from State Teachers College, in colonial costume, prepare a wreath.

HATCHET MAN!—Ray Hall, secretary of the Fredericksburg Chamber of Commerce, totes a few of the thousands of Cherry tree hatchets which will be distributed on "Ferry Farm," where Washington spent his boyhood and is reputed to have cut down the cherry tree. Like the dollar-throwing, the woodsman feat is now debunked.

QUIET ON THE POTOMAC, BUSY ON THE RAPPAHANNOCK.—Fredericksburg civic leaders test dollar-tossing abilities. Scene is on the river bank of plantation where Washington was born in 1732. His great-grandfather, who was of aristocratic English stock, settled there in 1657.

A. P. Map.

SCENE OF THE DISPUTED DOLLAR-TOSSING.—Just where Walter Johnson will stand today when he attempts to duplicate Washington's feat of hurling a silver dollar across the Rappahannock River, is the cause of debate. Representative Sol Bloom insists the original toss, if any, was made from spot indicated by arrow, the river having filled in its banks considerably since then.

WINTER SCENE.—Through the arched walk at Mount Vernon, and across the lawn sheer atop the Potomac, Washington must often have loved to gaze at the frozen Potomac, ice this year from bank to bank.

EVENTIDE—As daylight fails, the long twilight shadows grow on the wintry landscape of Gen. Washington's mansion at Mount Vernon, now the shrine of millions of Americans who visit the magnificent colonial home every year.

Applications For Old Age Aid Printed

Booklet Explaining Law On Pensions Sent With Forms.

Printing of application forms for old age assistance was completed yesterday and distribution begun to the various offices of the public assistance division of the Board of Public Welfare.

The application blanks were accompanied by a pamphlet in which the provisions of the law are set forth in the form of questions and answers.

Purpose of the old age assistance law, the pamphlet states, is to provide care and assistance for aged needy residents of the District of Columbia. A person becomes eligible for assistance at the age of 65 years.

"Is this assistance intended as a pension for all persons 65 years of age and over?" it is asked in the leaflet.

"No," the question is answered. "It is for those who are in need and whose condition seems to make permanent their inability to provide for themselves and who have no children or other persons able to support them."

Legal Responsibility.

Children and grandchildren, husband and wife, father and mother living in the District are legally responsible for support of their aged relatives, it is said. Suit may be brought against those legally responsible for their care for the amount of the old-age assistance granted or whatever amount they are reasonably able to pay should they fail to support the aged, it is explained.

To be eligible for assistance a person must be a citizen of the United States, must have resided in the District for five years or more within the nine years immediately preceding application and must have resided here continuously for one year immediately preceding the application.

Persons in need of continued institutional care may be referred to the board of public welfare for admission to the Home for the Aged and Infirm in lieu of old-age assistance.

No person may transfer his or her property for the purpose of qualifying for old-age assistance.

Evidence of age will be required. Such evidence was cited as a birth certificate, if one can be obtained, if not other evidence of a convincing nature must be secured.

Applications should be made to the District office of the public assistance division of the board of public welfare located nearest the home of the applicant. Application blanks will be mailed to applicants on request from the headquarters of the division at Fifth and H streets northwest.

No Fee for Application.

Application blanks may be filled out at home or elsewhere by the applicant or a friend. Members of the staff of the assistance division offices will aid those who wish them to do so. All applications must be sworn to before a notary public. No fee is required for filing an application.

Payments of the amounts fixed for each applicant will be made by checks to the applicant "whenever practicable." The board said that if the applicant's estate is not sufficient, reasonable funeral expenses may be paid.

Should the public assistance division disapprove an application, the applicant may appeal to the Board of Public Welfare and should that board also make an adverse decision appeal may be made to the District Commissioners.

In the application form the seeker after age assistance must state, among other things, that he is not an inmate of any prison, jail, workhouse, insane asylum, or other public reformatory or correctional institution; that he is not a habitual tramp or beggar; he has not transferred any property to others; has no relatives financially or legally responsible to care for him; state if convicted of a felony; and give information regarding marriages and relatives, if any.

Corcoran Cadet Corps Celebrates 54th Year

Members Recall Birth of Organization Before It Was Barred From Judge's Cellar; Police Seized Members in Alexandria.

Half a hundred members of the Corcoran Cadet Corps Veterans' Association met last night at Knights of Columbus Hall to celebrate the fifty-fourth anniversary of their founding, to swap tales of the glorious days of their once snappy outfit and to listen to some radio entertainment.

It was their annual reunion.

The corps was organized in 1882 when about 30 young boys, averaging only 15 years, gathered in the basement of Judge Plummer's house on K street near Eighteenth street.

"We just wanted to be soldiers," George F. D. Rollins, one of the charter members, said last night. "And we got tired of being thrown out of the then new National Guard Armory.

"At first we drilled with some wooden rifles. Then one night the judge threw us out of his house because we made so much noise. We took our only possession, a student's lamp, and set it up across the street in a vacant lot.

"The first thing we then did was vote a dishonorable discharge for Plummer's son. The neighbors began to notice us, to see that we were in earnest. Then William W. Corcoran, the philanthropist who founded the Corcoran Gallery of Art, took us under his wing and supplied us with some old Enfield rifles."

The corps then took his name and expanded. It joined the National Guard in 1889 and became one of the outstanding organizations in the city.

Members marched in every Presidential inaugural parade from the first Cleveland Administration until Wilson's second term. Since then few of the members have been able to squeeze into their uniforms.

Five of them, however, were able to don their cream-colored coats, blue trousers with white stripes and blue helmets with long waving plumes long enough to act as a color guard for President Roosevelt in 1933.

Members last night pored over a satchel full of pictures of those bygone days and tickets for their annual hops and moonlight excursions which used to be important social events around the turn of the century. There were also pictures of the Corcoran basketball teams which won the championship of the South for four successive years.

Rollins recalled the first parade the youths decided to enter in 1884.

"We heard that there was going to be a George Washington parade in Alexandria," he said. "A bunch of us boys got our rifles and uniforms and enough money to cross on the old Seventh street ferry.

"But we came to grief when we landed at Alexandria and formed our ranks. A policeman came up to us and said:

"'Who are you and where do you come from? It is against the code of the Commonwealth to enter Virginia under arms without specific invitation from the Governor. You are under arrest.'

"He paraded us up to the police station where they finally released us. We got into the parade all right and had so much beer and sandwiches afterward we could hardly march back to the ferry."

Leroy Mark, manager of Station WOL, provided entertainment from his station. Frank Young, pianist, played "The March of the Corcoran Cadets," composed especially by John Philip Sousa.

Maj. Charles A. Meyer was re-elected president for the fifth term. Others re-elected were W. H. Groverman, vice president; Lieut. Col. W. L. Hazard, adjutant; W. N. Handiboe, secretary treasurer, and Blair Shoemaker, Groverman, Hazard, Daniel Niepold, Roy de Neale and Handiboe, executive committee.

Anti-Red Act Repeal Urged In House Bill

Capital Schools' Controversy Is Expected to Flare Anew.

Rep. Sisson Introduces Measure; Backed by Board Members.

Representative Fred J. Sisson (Democrat), of New York, paved the way yesterday for what he called "a clear-cut fight" on the anti-Red rider that forbade all mention of Communism in local schools, by introducing a bill providing for its outright repeal.

The new measure was substituted for a previous bill introduced by Sission, which sought to amend the rider by permitting the teaching of the facts about Communism and Soviet Russia, but continuing the prohibition against advocating Communism.

Sisson's decision to fight for outright repeal of the Blanton-Copeland rider to the 1936 District appropriations bill, was believed inspired in part by the recent demand of Henry L. Quinn, lawyer and member of the Board of Education, that the board fight to wipe out "every trace of this outrageous, unjust and un-American statute from the books."

Shortly after Sisson introduced the bill, five of the members of the legislative committee of the Board of Education and Superinendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou, meeting to prepare themselves for the public hearings on the bill scheduled for Tuesday morning, voted unanimously to support the new measure.

The committee decided to draw up a report that will be approved by the Board of Education at a special meeting Monday afternoon, tracing the history of the rider and its effects on teachers and pupils for presentation at Tuesday's hearings.

It was also decided to send telegrams to many of the Nation's leading educators, regularly stationed in the city, but now attending the conference of the National Education Association in St. Louis, Mo., urging them to wire the House District Committee's sub-committee on education in support of the repeal bill.

Sisson, who recently engaged in a forensic battle with Representative Thomas Blanton, author of the rider, on the House floor, will appear in favor of his bill at the hearings. Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy, of Maryland, will preside.

The ordinary oath of office required of public school teachers, as of other Government officials, Sisson pointed out, is sufficient protection against the advocacy of the overthrow of the United States Government or the adoption of any other radical political steps.

Walsh Cites 'Politics' Ban Upon Priests

Regulations of Church On Leadership Are Reviewed.

Catholic priests are forbidden by their church from participating in "platform recriminations of politics," the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., Georgetown University vice rector, declared last night in a lecture at the university.

While he did not mention Father Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, by name, his talk was considered as timely in view of the recent controversy between Coughlin and Chairman O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee.

"The Catholic Church, for which alone I may properly speak in concrete and particular language," Father Walsh said, "forbids two things: First, for its members to advance the special interests of purely political parties by any claim or pretext of Catholic approbation or by means of any program described as Catholic action.

"This prohibition extends even to those specific Catholic laymen who associate themselves in close cooperation with ecclesiastical leaders in the spiritual apostolate of religion.

"Such high-minded men, once they voluntarily assume the honor and responsibility of leadership in the direction of an official and formal Catholic action must, as a general policy, be prepared to sacrifice public leadership in political life.

"That, in the ruling of the supreme teacher and pontiff of the Catholic Church, is necessary to preserve religion from the charge of subtly seeking political domination.

"Secondly, the church forbids its ministers of religion, as a rule, to participate in the militant contests, rivalries, strifes, nominations, curbstone debates, conventions, caucuses and platform recriminations of politics in the popular acceptance of that term.

"The Catholic Church has no article of faith respecting the tariff, the gold standard, free or impounded silver, monetary systems, technical economics or the best machinery for regulating specific industrial crises.

"In the solution of such important problems Catholics will take their individual stand wherever and in whatever language their free will dictates, and their authority is only as good as the arguments they adduce.

Anti-Feminism Scored By Dorothy Thompson

Woman Writer Warns of Drift to Fascism in America.

The present movement to "put woman back in the home" is but one of the forerunners of fascism in this country, Dorothy Thompson last night warned 200 guests of the National Woman's Party at the Carlton Hotel.

Addressing herself to the men of the audience, the noted foreign correspondent and wife of Sinclair Lewis said:

"Do not believe that a society which dictates to women what they must do, how they must meet their problems, how they must order their lives, will stop with women. The disruption of the lives of one group of people by dictatorial methods will lead to new dislocations and new problems, which will likewise be met by the same methods."

Cites Fascist Spread.

She cited surveys by the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor and Business and Professional Women's Clubs throughout the country to show that anti-feminism had spread from the fascist countries of Europe to this country.

In answer to the argument that the 11,000,000 working women in the United States had taken jobs away from men, Miss Thompson asserted that women were driven out of the home because industrialism had taken away from them their economic status.

"Never in history," she said, "has there been so large a body of completely parasitic women, who live off the strenuous work of men. They, rather than the women workers, represent the social menace. Actually, the mechanization of industry has had just the reverse effect of the one claimed. Men are engaged in the traditional feminine activities."

She blamed the Federal Government for its part in anti-feminist legislation, mentioning the now famous paragraph 213, forbidding the employment of married couples in the Government.

An investigation by the Women's Bureau, she said, had brought out the fact that most of those affected by the law were married women in the lower income brackets, who worked because they had to in order to keep their families alive.

Attacks Hours Limit.

She also attacked the proposed law for the District which would limit the hours of women employed here to a minimum of 40 a wek.

These Federal laws, Miss Thompson said, had served as a precedent for other States, so that now there were many States forbidding married women to teach in the schools.

"Thus," she said, "we are doomed to have our children brought up by precisely those women who know least about children and have the least sympathy with them—spinsters."

As an answer to those who assert that the employment of women results in declining birth rates, she remarked:

"In Russia, where women are urged to work outside the home at everything from hod-carrying to aviation, the birth rate is rising. In Italy, after 14 years of Mussolini, with a nation-wide campaign against birth control, and with all the propaganda of an all-powerful dictatorship concentrated on turning every woman into a highly productive mother, the birth rate is falling."

Relief Roll Cut 262 in District During January

Despite the fact that 1,439 relief cases were assigned to WPA jobs in the District during January the public assistance division ended the month with a net decrease of 262 cases on its books, according to analysis of relief figures made public yesterday by Leroy A. Halbert, director of research bureau of the public assistance division.

During January 1,868 cases were added to the relief lists. Of these, 440 were persons who had not previously been on relief and 1,428 cases were of person who had been dropped from the relief rolls in the past for one cause or another, Dr. Halbert reported.

Reasons for adding the 440 new cases were set forth in the report as follows: Unemployment, 242; unemployability, including illness, 84; cases previously under investigation, including parole, permit and pension, 60; inadequate income, 47; man was in jail or had deserted, 6; referred by private agency, 1.

The 1,428 old cases were reopened for the following reasons, Dr. Halbert said: unemployment 498; inadequate income, 364; investigation, 116; unemployability, 96; reopened due to reorganization of relief load in December, 30; homeless, 26; man in jail or deserted, 15; closed in error, 2; insurance adjustment, 2; referred by private agency, 1; reason not reported to headquarters, due to overload on staff workers, 278.

Those whose cases were closed included, 439 assigned to WPA jobs; 329 who had got employment or made other adjustments; 11 who died; 186 for which reason was not reported to headquarters; 21 were in jail, hospitals, Blue Plains, or otherwise cared for.

House Agrees On Airfield Bill Changes

It Concurs in Senate's Amendments on Road Patrol Guards.

Resolution Now Goes to the White House for Approval.

The House late yesterday concurred in the Senate amendments to the bill providing for the maintenance of patrol guards on Military road adjacent to Washington Airport. The resolution now goes to the White House, a few days before the expiration of an extended agreement to keep the airport open.

Upon motion of Representative May (Democrat), of Alabama, the House adopted the Senate measure as a substitute for the House resolution. Earlier the House Military Affairs Committee had agreed to the substitution.

The new act provides that the National Airport Corporation shall maintain a patrol and such other safeguards as the Bureau of Air Commerce may deem necessary on Military road in exchange for the privilege of using a portion of it as a base for a temporary runway.

The highway patrol, unlike the one now maintained by the airport, will have the authority of the Federal government behind it by virtue of the new law and will be authorized to arrest motorists who disobey its commands.

Offenders may be hailed before the United States Commissioner at Alexandria and be fined up to $500 or imprisoned for six months, or both.

Military road remains open as a public thoroughfare, though it may be closed whenever a plane lands or takes off at Washington Airport.

The right to utilize the highway for a temporary runway will enable the airport operators to connect Washington Airport with Hoover Field, which the company also owns and thus to expand the flying field.

The present arrangement is intended to continue only until Congress provides a permanent airport for the National Capital.

Friends of Artist Depicted in Mural

Designed to depict the "Sweatshop and Tenement of Yesterday Can Be Made the Life Ordered with Justice of Tomorrow," the faces of the figures in the mural which George Biddle is painting on the walls of the building of Justice have taken on the features of his friends.

Already in three panels on the lobby walls near the Attorney General's office in the new Department of Justice Building one finds the faces of Biddle's brother, Francis B. Biddle, of Philadelphia, champion of the rights of labor; Malcolm Ross, press agent of the National Labor Relations Board, and Camille Miller, of the National Youth Administration.

The mural is being done under the direction of the Treasury Section of Painting and Sculpture. Biddle expects the work to be completed sometime in August.

Roberts Assigned To Brigade Here

Brig. Gen. Perry L. Miles, now commanding the troops here, was ordered to the New York post. In his place will come Brig. Gen. Charles D. Roberts, now the commander at Fort Ontario.

The new head of the Sixteenth Brigade won a Distinguished Service Medal as chief of staff of the 81st Brigade in operations near Verdun. He holds the Medal of Honor, the Croix de Guerre, and the Order of Leopold of Belgium.

Gen. Miles, who leaves Washington, also is one of the Army's most decorated officers. He holds a Distinguished Service Medal, a Distinguished Service Cross, the French Croix de Guerre with palm, and the French Legion of Honor.

Bus Valuation Hearings End; Ruling Delayed

Another witness for the Public Utilities Commission, William J. Saunders, consultant, yesterday fired a broadside of figures into the high value put by the companies on the Washington Rapid Transit Co. which the Capital Transit Co wants to buy for $539,823.

Saunders was the last witness presented by the commission as hearings on the proposal concluded and Riley E. Elgen, commission chairman, gave opposing sides 10 days within which to file briefs. He said later that decision of the commission would be announced in a fortnight.

Value placed on the bus company by Saunders was the highest given by any commission witness. He said the value was at the very outside not more than $440,000, including $202,761 in cash held by the bus company and liabilities totaling $237,000, owed to the North American Co.

Edward Roberts, of New York, testifying for the companies, had placed the value at $623,000. B. M. Bachman, chief accountant of the commission placed the value at $300,248. Fred A. Sager, chief engineer of the commission, had put the value at $325,336.

"Assuming the company operates 2,000,000 bus miles in the next two years the maximum revenue which would be expected would be $500,000," Saunders said. "Depreciation charges will have to be increase to at least $50,000, when needed new equipment is purchased. The best net figure which can be forecast would be $25,000 which would be a 6 per cent return on $416,667 and a 7 per cent return on only $357,143.

"After considering all the factors I'm of the opinion that a prospective buyer of the stock of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. would not be justified in paying more than $202,761 in cash and assuming $237,239 in current liabilities.

Rover Deplores 'Oppression' of Jews, Catholics

Criticism of the "horrible oppression" of Jews in Germany and Catholics in Mexico was voiced last night by Leo A. Rover, former United States attorney, before the Washington Hebrew Congregation Brotherhood.

He spoke in behalf of Catholics at a meeting devoted to promotion of closer alignment between all religious denominations.

Jews in Germany and Catholics in Mexico, he said, "must be accorded fair and decent treatment if the governments now in power in those countries are to survive."

History, he added, has proved that any nation which consistently oppresses any class of people eventually suffers "the loss of the respect of the rest of the world, not to mention materialistic penalties."

Samuel B. Finkel, Boston, president of the National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods, declared leaders of anti-Semetic movements charge Jews with communism and with controlling America's wealth and industry. He denied all the allegations.

Walter M. Bastian, District Bar Association president, representing Protestants, urged a greater spirit of fellowship and toleration for the views of others.

Eli Amanuel offered a cello solo. He was accompanied by Lewis C. Atwater, organist.

The meeting was preceded by a religious service conducted by Rabbi Abram Simon and his assistant, Norman Gerstenfeld.

Library Shows Work Of Washington Artists

An exhibition of modern oil paintings by Washington artists is being held at the Georgetown Branch of the Public Library.

The pictures include two landscapes, by Marjorie Phillips, a still life by Eben Comins and a landscape by C. Law Watkins, all well-known local painters.

Inquiry Into Health Situation Shows Nation's Capital Trails

With health items trimmed deeply by the Bureau of the Budget, the 1937 District budget is now receiving Congressional consideration. The Washington Post desires that this city have the best health department in the Nation. This is one of a series of articles designed to show Congress the District's health needs.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Random scribblings based upon two weeks of penetration into the public health situation of the District:

Last year 252 cases of cerebrospinal meningitis, a preventable disease, were reported to the Health Department . . . this was 64 more than the number reported in the nine previous years combined . . . 93 of the 252 victims in 1935 died.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, M. D., of New York, used to be a health commissioner, which may have something to do with his sympathy for the current fight for ample appropriations . . . one night last year, when the District's supply bill for 1936 was in committee, Dr. Copeland quietly went over to Gallinger Hospital . . . he saw for himself how critical personnel and housing conditions there were even then . . . as a result, he used his influence to have the Senate Appropriations Committee restore hospital items that had been eliminated . . . but the House promptly restored the eliminations.

"A child will be strangled to death in Griffith Stadium Wednesday night . . . all invited to attend" . . . Such an announcement, says one of the city's outstanding medical leaders, would create a riot of indignation . . . but, he continues, folks remain complacent while exactly the same effect is accomplished by denying the Health Department sufficient funds to make an efficient assault upon diphtheria.

Dr. William Allen White, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, is said to tell the hypothetical story of a leper running at large and what would be the consequences . . . "The public would become hysterical . . . mothers would draw their babies to their breasts and pedestrians would regard every passerby with suspicion." . . . the story runs something like that . . . and yet, it continues, thousands of unfortunates with afflictions just as disastrous and much more infectious than leprosy are allowed to roam the streets . . . and no one gives a darn . . . although the sufferers need isolation and treatment as urgently as the leper.

Only 1.6 per cent of the expenditures for operating Washington's municipal government is allotted for health conservation activities, exclusive of hospital maintenance, according to latest published figures of the Census Bureau. . . . In this respect, the District is surpassed by 68 of the 94 American cities with a population in excess of 100,000. . . . One of the 26 that spend less than 1.6 per cent is San Antonio, to which Washington is running a close second in the tuberculosis mortality race.

An ailing airedale is luckier than a tuberculosis indigent, as far as his chances of obtaining treatment are concerned. . . . Did you ever hear of a waiting list at the Animal Rescue League or the dog pound? . . . Our infant mortality rate (59.9 per cent) is greater than that of New York, Chicago, Detroit and many more cities, but lower than that of Abilene, Tex. (7.33).

Mrs. Junkin, Guest to Go To Chicago

Latter Will Return to Washington at the End of April.

The accomplished Miss Gisela Binz, young German pianist, who has been visiting Mrs. Francis Junkin here, is leaving on Monday with Mrs. Junkin for Chicago. Miss Binz, whose home is in Berlin, will be soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra next year. Mrs. Junkin is one of several Chicagoans who spend a part of every year in Washington.

Upon her arrival in Chicago, Mrs. Junkin will have as her guests Signora Agresti, the Italian authority on politics and economics who recently visited Washington. Mrs. Junkin will return to Washington April 25, following Miss Binz' departure for Europe to fulfill a series of engagements there.

Last evening Mrs. Junkin entertained in honor of Miss Binz at a dinner party at the Shoreham. The guests included several members of the German Embassy, among whom were the Military Attache and Frau von Boetticher, the First Secretary, Herr Ernst Meyer; the Third Secretaries, Herr Richard Paulig and Herr Gustav Struve, and the Attache of the Embassy and Frau Blankenhorn. Also present were Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Morgan Miles and Mr. McDuff Minetree.

Gives Luncheon.

Another member of Capital society who entertained yesterday was the Director General of the Pan-American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe. Dr. Rowe gave luncheon at the Pan-American Annex in honor of the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Dominican Republic, Senor Dr. Ernesto Bonetti Burgos. The other guests were:

The Minister of the Dominican Republic, Senor Dr. Andres Pastoriza; the Assistant Secretary of State, Judge R. Walton Moore; the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Oscar L. Chapman; the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Ernest G. Draper; the Chairman of the Board of Governors, Federal Reserve Board, Mr. Marriner S. Eccles; the President of George Washington University, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin; the Administrator of Rural Electrification, Mr. Morris L. Cooke; Senor Don Sebastian Velverde, of the Dominican Republic; Dr. Ernest J. Swift, secretary general of the League of Red Cross Societies, and Dr. Leverett S. Lyon, of the Brookings Institution.

The Carrolls Entertain.

Senator and Mrs. James E. Murray, of Montana, were among the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Carroll at dinner in the ballroom at the Shoreham last evening. Mr. and Mrs. Carroll were guests at the Shoreham, while visiting in Washington. Mr. Carroll is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, class of '81, and Mrs. Carroll was educated at Gunston Hall, and they now make their home in Butte, Mont.

Other guests at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Kistler, Capt. William H. Stayton, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Kistler, Mr. John Wallace, and Mr. John Matter.

Rosso to Attend Pirandello Play

Studio of Theater Arts to Present the Work of Noted Italian.

The Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, is planning to attend the Studio of Theater Arts production of "Six Characters in Search of an Author." A number of others from the embassy also will see the performance.

The play will be presented at Wardman Park Theater next Tuesday and Wednesday. It is the work of the distinguished Italian author, Luigi Pirandello, who last year won the Nobel prize for literature.

"Six Characters in Search of an Author" was first presented in this country in 1922, when Brock Pemberton produced it in New York. Nine years later it was again presented in New York by the Theater Guild.

Pen Women Tea Planned Today

Miss Marguerite Merigold, first vice president of the District League of American Pen Women, will be hostess at tea to the Pen Women in her home, 1801 K street northwest.

Receiving with her will be her mother, Mrs. William Edward Merigold, Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, national president, L. A. P. W., and Mrs. Dawson Olmstead, District president, L. A. P. W.

Mrs. Thomas Slater Settle, and Miss Sara Marcum, Mrs. R. R. Farr, of Fairfax, Va., will alternate at the tea table. They will be assisted by Miss Marie Medora Shores, Miss Annabel Lee Glenn, and Miss Ruby Nevins.

Four Women Exhibitors Art Gallery Hostesses

This afternoon four exhibiting artists will receive as hostesses for the Washington Water Color Club at the Corcoran Gallery. They are Mrs. Susan B. Chase, Miss Betty Fast, Miss Rosa Wagner and Miss Emily Haines.

Tomorrow afternoon the hostesses will be Mrs. Anna G. Howland, Mrs. Sona Miller Keplinger and Mrs. Jean Potter.

Miss Audrey Campbell Entertains at Dance

Miss Audrey Campbell entertained at a dinner dance last evening at the Sulgrave Club in honor of her cousin, Mr. Thomas Leiter, son of Mrs. Joseph Leiter. Mr. Leiter returned to Washington Wednesday afternoon by plane from Miami Beach Fla., after spending some time cruising with friends on their yacht in Southern waters.

Mrs. Leiter and her daughter will return to Washington on Monday from Boco Grand, Fla., where they have been the guests of Mr. Eugene Pike. Mr. Pike also has as his guest Maj. Gen. William Mason Wright, of Washington.

Mrs. Leiter and her daughter will go to Aiken, S. C., later in the season, where they have leased a house for the early spring.

White House Party to Feature Country Women's 3d Conference

Pageant of All Nations, Luncheons, Receptions on Program of Gathering May 31-June 12; Mrs. Roosevelt, Lady Aberdeen, to Speak.

A White House garden party, a pageant of all nations, with round-table luncheons, suppers and evening receptions, will be features on the social program of the Third Triennial Conference of the Associated Country Women of the World, to be held in Washington May 31 to June 12, it was announced at Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference yesterday.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and other official women of the diplomatic corps in Washington, will take much interest in the convention, and will attend the social functions as well as the forum meetings. Mrs. Roosevelt will be the guest of honor, and will speak at the opening meeting at noon, June 1, in the new Government auditorium, which will be completed by that time. Greetings will be given at the opening meeting by Lady Aberdeen, of Scotland, at whose suggestion the first international meeting of the organization was held in London, in 1929. Lady Aberdeen has visited Washington frequently before, being well known in the diplomatic colony here, and among international organizations of women.

Lady Nancy Astor, member of the British Parliament, has been especially invited to attend, by the farm women of Virginia, her native State. Mrs. Robert Bingham, wife of the United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James, represents the Kentucky Federation of Farm Women on the executive committee, which meets periodically at the international headquarters, in London. If Mrs. Bingham is in Washington in June, she will be a member of the Kentucky delegation to the convention.

Mrs. Watt to Preside.

Mrs. Alfred Watt, of London, president of the Associated Farm Women of the World, will preside at the sessions. Among the other delegates from London will be Mrs. Miriam McKenzie, secretary; Miss Elsie M. Zimmern, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Frank Gresham.

Other well known women who have signified their intention of attending the convention are: Mrs. Godfrey Drage, J. P., President Carnarvonshire Women's Institutes, Wales; Mrs. H. Lloyd Baxendale, Member Executive Committee, Berkshire Women's Institutes, England; Lady Campion, representing West Australia, social worker in Girl Guides, Red Cross and Nursing; Mrs. Henrietta Irwell, representing the Palestine Countrywomen, Mrs. Anstruther Gray, Magistrate in Fife, Scotland, representing Scottish Rural Women Institutes; Frau Martha Silfverhjelm, representing the Swedish Housewives Association; Mrs. Sykes, of Somerset, England, Member Frome District Council; Mrs. George Oliver, West Sussex, England; Mrs. Hubert Fairfax, Sydney, Australia; Miss Lillie Large, New Zealand; Mrs. A. E. Walker, Bartonville, Ontario, president of the Federated Women's Institutes of the Dominion of Canada; Mrs. R. B. Colloton, Lorne Park, Ontario, Chairman of Peace Education and International Relations, Federated Women's Institutes of Canada; Mrs. T. J. McDowell, Milverton, Ontario, president of the Federated Women's Institutes of the Province of Ontario; Miss Hazel B. McCain, Quebec City, Superintendent Quebec Women's Institutes, McDonald College, McGill University, Quebec; Miss Bess McDermand, Superintendent, Women's Institute Branch of the Department of Agriculture of Ontario, Toronto; Miss Esther Thompson, Director of Women's Work, Extension Service, Department of Agriculture, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

President Roosevelt will receive, with Mrs. Roosevelt, at a reception which will be a garden party, if the weather permits, to be held at the White House for the international delegates June 1 at 4 p. m.

A supper party will be held one of the evenings of the convention, to which officials and members of the diplomatic corps have been invited. There will be a pageant of all nations when many of the delegates, and women of the diplomatic corps will appear in native dress. The convention will end with a ceremony around the Washington Monument, when the flags of all nations will be displayed.

Pilgrimages will be made during the convention to nearby historic places, land-grant colleges and agricultural schools. Wreaths will be placed on the tombs of Martha Washington, at Mount Vernon, and Mary Washington, at Fredericksburg, by an international committee.

Farm women, official and diplomatic women, especially committee members, will attend the convention in the character of homemakers. The simplest type of warm weather clothes will be the order of the convention, even for social events.

On May 31 there will be a special service for the international delegates at Washington Cathedral. On Sunday, June 7, a similar service will be held at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Rep. McGroarty To Be Speaker

Tournament Dinner to Be Held at Parrot Tea House Tomorrow.

Well known Washingtonians will attend the tournament dinner tomorrow evening, at 8 o'clock, at the Parrot Tea House, arranged by the executive committee in charge of the tournament, with Mr. E. Francis McDevitt, Mr. J. E. Bishop, Mr. Charles Gillman and Mr. James M. Rawls in charge of arrangements and program.

The speaker of the occasion will be Representative John Steven McGroarty, of California; Mr. Fred E. Hand, the donor of this season's awards to the winners, and others. Mr. Denis E. Connell will preside at the dinner as toastmaster, and the judges of the preliminary contests and finals will be special guests.

Other prominent Washingtonians who will attend the dinner are Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, Mr. Lewis R. Barrett, Prof. W. Hayes Yeager and directors of drama groups not connected with the tournament.

Features of the program will be musical numbers by a group of outstanding Washington singers, and a skit, "Tournamentitis," written and directed by Mr. J. A. Bishop, with directors of the tournament plays taking part as actors.

Forbushes Party For Mrs. Benjamin

In honor of Mrs. John Benjamin of New York City, writer and editor, who will be visiting them over the Washington birthday week-end, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Forbush will entertain this evening at a game party and midnight supper.

Among the guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Leigh Ore, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Klotz, Dr. Edward C. Ernst, Dr. and Mrs. H. J. Wollner, Miss Frieda Baird, Miss Katherine C. Blackburn, Miss Phyllis Held, Miss Marie Henry, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Turnbull of Clarendon, Virginia, and the Messrs. Harold Pearson, William Abbott, Richard Buch, Harold Starr, Lee Rosecrans and Edward Beardsley.

Photographic Show Preview Set Tomorrow

Junior League Will Open Exhibition at Its New Galleries Here.

The preview for the first annual Washington Photographic Show, to be staged by the Junior League of Washington in the league's new gallery at 2001 Massachusetts avenue, will take place tomorrow afternoon from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock. The exhibition, which will be open to the general public from February 24 to March 8, answers a long-felt need among local artists for an opportunity to compete with amateurs and professionals, club members and nonmembers.

Among those invited to the preview are Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Laney, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Minnegerode, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Woodring and Mr. and Mrs. Law Watkins. Of the art critics representing the local papers who will attend are Miss Leila Mechlin, Miss Helen Buchalter and Harold Rhodenbaugh.

The judges committee is composed of Prentiss Taylor, Washington artist and photographer; Miss Caroline Thompson, chairman of the arts and interests committee of the league, and Mr. Rhodenbaugh. Miss Anne Carter Greene, president of the Junior League of Washington, will receive.

Indoor Horse Fete Set for Wednesday

First of Season's Shows at Fort Myer.

The first of this season's indoor horse shows to be held in the riding hall at Fort Myer on Wednesday evening will bring together many of the most outstanding horsemen and horsewomen of Washington and vicinity.

Among the Fort Myer entries are Maj. Arthur P. Thayer, Third Cavalry, instructor of the advanced equitation class at the Cavalry School, Fort Riley, Kans., who will be seen in the various classes with his Roving Fox and Danceaway, the newest additions to a famous string of jumpers, and Maj. James T. Duke, one of the Army's outstanding horsemen and one of the best instructors in horsemanship at the Cavalry School, on his well-known Sandy and Old Gold, and many others of national importance.

Mrs. Ross to Entertain At Dinner for Relatives

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross will entertain at dinner tonight at the Mayflower, in honor of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Tayloe, of Memphis, Tenn., who are visiting her for a few days following a trip to New York.

Mrs. Samuel Shepard Dennis, of New York, shared honors with Mr. and Mrs. Tayloe, in the company that included Mrs. Florence P. Kahn, Representative and Mrs. Edward C. Moran, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, Mr. William A. Julian, and Miss Estelle Tayloe, of Mount Airy, Va.

Mrs. Ross' son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Ross, her son, Mr. Bradford Ross, and Mrs. Edness Wilkins, were also among those entertained.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Resident

Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Vice President, will be the guest in whose honor Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, will entertain at luncheon today in her home on Woodland Drive.

The Minister of The Netherlands and Mme. van Haersma de With, entertained at dinner last evening in the legation, when covers were laid for 30 guests.

The Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Miss Josephine Roche, entertained at dinner last evening in the patio of the Carlton Hotel, when her guests numbered 12.

Mrs. Copeland Leaves For Florida Visit.

Senora Coppola, wife of the Air Attache of the Italian Embassy, will entertain at a tea this afternoon from 5 until 7 o'clock, in her home at 2129 Wyoming avenue.

The retiring Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy expects to leave Washington about April 1 for Bolivia, where he will assume his new duties as Minister from his country.

The First Secretary of the Czechoslovakian Legation, Mr. Otaker Kabelac, left Washington yesterday for New York, where he will spend several days, returning to the Capital the early part of the week.

Maj. and Mrs. Richard D. La Garde will be at home informally Sunday afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock, and again on Sunday, March 1. They will have with them their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ben La Garde. No cards have been issued.

Nelson School Juniors Present Own Plays.

Juniors at the Nelson School for Boys gave some plays last evening at the school, which they wrote themselves. Those who took part in the performances were Luis Quintanilla, son of the Counselor of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Quintanilla; George Marshall, Julian Huffman, John Clark, Martin Snyder, Douglas McElreen, Joseph Myers, George Smith, Stephen McClaren, Michael Davis and Albert Peters.

Mr. William W. Rapley left Washington for Miami Beach, Fla., yesterday where he will spend ten days visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Rapley, who have leased a home for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. George Vincent, of Greenwich, Conn., are spending the week-end in Washington at the Mayflower as guests of the latter's sister, Countess Elena Dandini de Sylva, of Rome, Italy, who is spending the season at the hotel. Mr. Vincent was president of the Rockefeller Foundation from 1917 to 1929.

Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Hemingway, of New Haven, Conn., are stopping at the Dodge.

Mrs. A. S. Bonner, of Buchanan, Mich., daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. C. Coulter, who make their home at the Wardman Park Hotel, arrived here last week accompanied by her young son and Mrs. Martin Pearson, also of Buchanan. They have taken an apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel for several weeks' visit in this city.

Mlle. Odette Kuen To Be Feted at Tea.

Mlle. Odette Kuen, brilliant French journalist who is providing one of the most entertaining personalities in Washington this winter, will be honored at a tea at the headquarters of the National Woman's Party a week from today, March 1, from 4 till 7 p. m.

It was originally planned to honor Mlle. Kuen in this fashion today, but, due to conflicting events, this tea was postponed until next Saturday.

Mrs. Dan Hefferman, chairman of the Reporter Plan Group of the Democratic Women's National Council, has called a meeting on Monday evening at Admiral Club, Seventeenth street and Rhode Island avenue. Dinner will be served at 6:30 o'clock and will be followed by discussion at 7:30 p. m. The program will include an address by Boyd Fisher, special assistant to the administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration, and a talk by Mrs. Alma Livingston Shevlin, of the National Emergency Council, about the work of the N. E. C.

Play and Dance Set for Friday By Club Group

Miss Alice Hunter Heads Event Scheduled for Wilson College.

Miss Alice Louise Hunter will head the reception committee and ushers at the Players Club performance and dance to be held next Friday night at 8:15 in Wilson Teachers College auditorium and gymnasium. Miss Hunter will be assisted by Miss Katherine Kammerer, Miss Fillis Speich, Miss Lena Abbott and Miss Gertrude Elmendorf.

The event follows the tradition of the Players Club, which became well known for its "backstage" parties a year or two ago at Central High Community Center, when the Players Club gave a succession of informal plays on the big stage at Central High School, with the audience seated on the "apron" of the stage, the play performed on the stage proper; and a party which often was a dance given in the "wings."

Members of the club who will take part in the program, directed by Miss Lucy Ann Rogers, are Mrs. Theodore V. Wilson, Mrs. Beulah Raby, Miss Viola Trilling, Miss Eleanor Boyd, Miss Dorothy Frances Braun, Mr. William Austin Davis, Mr. Jack Rollins, Mr. Jann Brodinsky and Mr. Jack Aracey.

Mrs. Edith H. Hunter is in charge of reservations and tickets for the dance and the plays which precede it.

Miss Kyner Is Married To Felix Cristofane

Mrs. David Rush Daniel announces the marriage of her niece, Miss Susanna Parker Kyner, daughter of the late Maj. and Mrs. James H. Kyner, to Mr. Felix Ernest Cristofane. The ceremony took place on Wednesday, February 19, at Bostwick House, Bladensburg, Md.

After the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Cristofane left for a six weeks' trip to the West Indies. After the first of April they will be at home in Bostwick House.

Mrs. Broy Here; Organized First Welfare Group

London Consul's Wife Played Active Part in City's Community Life.

Mrs. Charles Broy, of London, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Jacob Anderson Norton, and other relatives in Washington. Mrs. Broy will be remembered as Miss Cecil Norton, organizer and first director of the community center department of the District. She married Representative Thomas U. Sisson, and after his death, wedded Charles Broy, who has been serving for several years as American consul at London.

Mrs. Broy entertained at tea at the Wardman Park hotel, Thursday afternoon. Among her guests were Mrs. Pat Harrison, Mrs. Augustine Lonergan, Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Mrs. Ruth Shipley, Mrs. Frank W. Ballou, Mrs. Ephraim Bowyer, Miss Bernice Broy, Mrs. John W. Broy, Mrs. Charlton M. Clark, Miss Elizabeth Clagett Clark, Mrs. Brent Clarke, Mrs. Allan Davis, Mrs. Watson Davis, Mrs. Randolph Keith Forrest, Mrs. Ralph Gilchrist, Mrs. Golder Norton Kimmel, Mrs. Augustus H. Martin, Miss Louise Martin, Mrs. John Daniel O'Leary, Mrs. Thomas W. Penn, Mrs. Thomas Upton Sisson, Mrs. Glenn A. Smith, Mrs. F. Romine Taylor, Mrs. Thomas T. Taylor, Mrs. Edward J. Ward, and Miss Julia C. Young.

Rep. Clarence Cannon Presides at Luncheon

Representative Clarence Cannon, president of the Missouri State Society, presided over a luncheon yesterday in the Speaker's dining room in the House of Representatives. His guests were members of the executive committee and committee chairmen of the society, and included Mrs. John J. Cochran, Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, Mrs. Frank E. Kaufman, Mrs. Edward D. Hays, Mrs. Otis J. Rogers, Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, Mr. O. E. Reed, Mr. James L. Baity, Mr. Craig L. Reddish, Mr. W. W. Badgeley, Mr. Arthur W. Brown, Mr. Carl Ristine, Mr. Henry C. Hensley and Mr. G. TWO ON SAFARI

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Ballard Mallory, young American explorer, accepts from Grast, Furman & Menck, London solicitors, the commission to find dead or alive the young Hon. Laurence Morland, who disappeared in Africa. They offer £5,000 bonus if Morland is dead. Mallory is about to walk out of the office when they agree to put it in writing. Mallory signs up.

CHAPTER IV.

The Face in the Cab.

INSTEAD OF GOING down the stairs, Ballard Mallory went to a window at the end of the long hall and read again the brief guarantee so readily supplied by the Messrs. Grast, Furman & Menck: "We, the undersigned, finding ourselves stalemated in the administration of the Morland succession through inability to confirm rumors of the death in the interior of Africa of the Hon. Laurence Morland, have commissioned Mr. Ballard Mallory to undertake an expedition. Should the subject of the search be encountered alive, the matter of reward naturally remains his concern, but in the event Mr. Mallory comes upon proof, acceptable in the Courts of Chancery, of the demise of the said Hon. Laurence Morland, we guarantee a bonus over and above his salary and expenses in the sum of £5,000."

"What cheek!" thought Ballard, until he realized it was the very boldness of the wording that put the document above suspicion. Say he had not been present at the conference which preceded its delivery, what would be his judgment of anybody who found in it a bid for murder? That the accusation was so far fetched, so gratuitously malicious, that an action for defamation of character would be in order. He began to see not only how the Messrs. Grast, Furman & Menck had built up their reputation for cleverness, but why they were feared.

In his final interchange he had been jockeyed into the position of having to make an appointment to start his round of purchases on the following day. Two courses now remained open to him, simplified, thrown into high relief—cut and run, or see it through.

Common Sense Rises.

His common sense rose in its might and advised the former, but the very fact of the cleverness of the trap was what gave him pause. If he dodged its jaws it could be set with impunity again and again until it caught an individual capable and willing to do the trick. In fact, there would be no again and again about it, since it was undoubtedly certain factors in his own training and make-up that had fooled the shrewd conspirators. They were not accustomed to dealing with Americans, especially one of his type, and he was willing to bet that when next they dangled their bait it would be before somebody who would swallow it, hook and sinker.

His gorge rose at the thought. For any man who knew the somber background of Africa, its physical dangers as well as the shadowy workings of the native mind, the job would be easy—easy and safe. Inclination was the only hurdle; jump that and 5,000 pounds would be in the bag. The vague cloud he had glimpsed on the horizon was vague no longer; it towered black above him, enveloped him as if it were taking deliberate possession of him—mind, body and spirit. If he tried to tear himself out, he would inevitably leave something behind. Never again could he consider himself the rounded entity he had known as Ballard Mallory. He folded the paper, replaced it in his pocket and raised his eyes to stare out the window.

Jones Is Nervous.

Red Lion Square is not large; it is an enclosure rather than a square. At first his gaze was diffused, a blank staring at nothing in particular, but gradually it was drawn to focus and concentrated on a single individual. Coming fully to his senses, he discovered he was looking at a figure already grown familiar.

Though Lord Morland's car had long since left the scene, William Jones had not, and he was acting in an extraordinary manner, even for him. Walking up and down in the short space between the exit to Southampton Row and the street leading to Lincoln's Inn Fields, he was glancing wildly this way and that, pulling at his fingers as if he would tear them out, pausing to knock his bony knees together and otherwise showing signs of anxiety verging on distraction.

At first Ballard was merely amused at being able to deduce so much at such a distance, but soon he had reason to be puzzled and absorbed. A closed taxi drew up at the curb near the old man and he rushed around the cab. Above its lowered window, Ballard caught the gleam of a face before it was eclipsed by William's stooping shoulders.

Evidently words passed between the passenger and the old clerk, but abruptly his gangling figure set itself in motion again and he came scurrying toward his burrow. Mallory drew into the corner beside the window and stood quite still, his face to the wall. He heard Jones enter below and listened while his hurrying footsteps ascended the stairs, passed rapidly down the hallway, paused for a moment and then were muffled into silence as the door of Messrs. Grast, Furman & Menck closed softly upon them.

Only then did Ballard turn, and it was merely the instinct of the natural-born hunter that caused him to glance from the window. To his surprise, the cab had not moved. He waited, watched, but it showed no sign of life.

"Fool," he thought, "perhaps it's not the same cab." From this distance he could not make out whether its vacant sign was up. He hurried down the stairs. Issuing from the entrance, with his outlandish headgear still dangling at his side, he made straight for the object of his curiosity.

Face in Cab.

Soon he caught again the gleam of a face in half shadow, cut by the slanting line of a felt hat, and with the suddenness of all premonitions he became convinced that whoever owned the hat was observing him intently. Why? Before he could think up a single answer to so general and puzzling a question the taxi started with a violent lurch, dodged left, turned and disappeared into Eagle street. Vaguely annoyed, he looked around for another cab; there was none. He stopped, stood for the moment it took him to light his cigarette, and in that brief space of time a strange transformation took place within him.

Abruptly his spirit was at ease. He was laughing at himself—laughing at the sinister meaning he had attached to the interview with Messrs. Grast, Furman & Menck, and at the importance he was giving to the discovery of the contact between the old clerk and the occupant of the cab. All these things were puzzling either in themselves or by reason of his state of mind—but that was not the point.

What was important was that while an hour ago he had been bored he was now bored no longer. Furthermore, it appeared that he was being offered a heaven-sent chance to avoid boredom for several months to come. The last shred of doubt fell from him. He might be a fool to take the chance, but opposed to that eventuality stood the conviction that if he refused he was doomed to spend the rest of his life despising himself. So, in reality, he had no choice; he was in for it, sink or swim.

Reserves Steamer Cabin.

He went straight to Cockspur street and made a reservation for Cape Town on the first mail packet, which happened to be one of the best on the line. From there he hurried home and dragged out a couple of battered trunks. Inside them were all those articles which divided his life in two parts as definitely as the equator splits the globe. One of the trunks was a column 5 feet along by a foot square. He opened it and disclosed a battery consisting of a shotgun, one field rifle of small caliber, one of medium and finally a heavy double-barreled elephant gun, each by a maker with a tradition of excellence. He started to lift the medium rifle from its cradle, but stopped and closed the cover reluctantly.

Out of the other trunk he began to drag articles of wear with feverish haste. Breeches, shirts and handkerchiefs of khaki. A suit of heavy Harris tweed. One pair of black dress trousers, tropical weight, a cummerbund, a single black dress tie, all badly in need of pressing. Three white mess jackets, faintly yellowed. Two pairs of walking boots, laced to the calf, each boot protected by a cotton bag. Three suits of silk pajamas. One of woolen underwear. A camel's-hair bathrobe. Six dress shirts with collars attached, half a dozen fine handkerchiefs, a dozen pair of socks and a minimum amount of white linen. He rang for the porter, who in that modest establishment acted also as valet.

Caustic Letter Flays Erskine For New Book

Representing the largest group of organized women in Washington, Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, yesterday dictated an open letter to the author.

It follows:

Dear Mr. Erskine:

Your caustic comments in "The Influence of Women—And Its Cure" prove only one thing, that either you are a backwoods type of man, totally unaware of what women are doing, or you are breathless trying to keep up with their accomplishments!

In either case you are hardly enough of an authority on feminine mass influence to write a book about it.

We realize you expected us to rise in wrath to defend ourselves against your denunciations. Obviously you calculated every protest would be a free advertisement; that in holding women up to ridicule, you would increase the sale of your book and strengthen your position as a writer.

Your controversial statements may result in good "box-office" for your vehement volume, but I doubt they will help you regain your rapidly diminishing literary laurels.

Why not be frank about it, Mr. Erskine? Was "The Influence of Women—And Its Cure" written because you really think we are, as you suggested, such a "distressing and pernicious lot" or because the book that preceded this one was such a flop?

If you had been a bit more subtle in your approach to the subject of woman, a little more understanding in your attitude and much more specific in your arguments against us, you might have succeeded in what you set out to do. But when a man in modern times makes such an absurd statement as this: "Except for the one matter of childbearing, society can now get along without the typical American woman"—anything else he says cannot make much difference.

Yours truly,

MRS. LLOYD W. BIDDLE,
President, D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs.

Child's Interest Must Be Roused To Retain Facts

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

BUT you learned that last week. In fact you recited that whole page to me and got 'A' for knowing the lesson perfectly. Yet today you don't remember ever having heard of such a thing."

You can drive a horse to water, you can even force his mouth open and put water into it, but you cannot make him drink unless he wants the water. It is the same way with the human memory, especially with children's. It can hear facts and even photograph them for the moment so that they come back pert fashion. But unless those facts have some interest to the child or are in some way connected with what he knows, they will make no real or lasting impression on his consciousness.

Often the same thing must be told a child over and over again until at last some different or new association in his mind seems to work the combination, and at once the thought registers to stay. It is not the child's fault if he is slow. There is no sense in being annoyed and scolding him for wilful inattention. Facts as facts have no special virtue.

The object of teaching should be to connect new knowledge with what is already known, and to arouse the child's curiosity to the point where he wants to have more information and will make an effort to get it.

Problems of Various Kinds Considered in Column Today; Couple Would Adopt Child; Woman Wishes to Write Greeting Card Sentiments; Dress Discussed.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: My husband and I are middle-aged. We have worked hard and saved. We have a good home in the best neighborhood of our home town. We are in good health, but we have no children. We would like to find some good normal orphan girl around the age of 12, preferably a dark brunette, to take into our home. We are of Italian birth, so it would be our preference to find an Italian girl to adopt as our own. Could you tell us how to get in contact with the right parties? Thanking you, I am, HOPEFUL.

• • • •

DEAR HOPEFUL: Since your home is in Maryland, these are the proper agencies to contact: Henry Watson Children's Aid Society, Snow Building, Calvert and Lombard streets, Baltimore, attention Mr. Paul Beiser, general secretary. Maryland Children's Aid Society, 2109 North Calvert treet, Baltimore, attention Miss Katharine Kirwan, executive secretary. Catholic Center, Cathedral and Franklin streets, Baltimore, attention the Rev. Edwin L. Leonard, director.

I am told the Henry Watson Children's Aid Society is the outstanding agency in Baltimore for placing children; that the Maryland Children's Aid Society is State-wide in scope, and is developing branches in every county throughout the State. Whether such an agency has as yet been set up in Anne Arundel County I do not know, but you can inquire of the central office. The Catholic Center sees to the placement of Catholic children in suitable Catholic homes.

Another Home Lover Has a Problem.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: When I read "Home Lover's" letter in your column February 14 it seemed as if she were stating my own situation. I did not realize how nearly alike two persons' problems could be. She might have been describing my own home, my life and my present situation. I could wish that she was the person who had no home, and that she might consider coming to live with me. I know it would be pleasant to live with such a gentle soul. But someone else will have to be sought and I am asking you to help me find that person.

• • • •

My apartment is particularly well situated overlooking woods and garden just below a large open porch. There must be someone who, if she knew about it, would enjoy and love my home as her own and be willing to assume part obligation in maintaining it. Accept my thanks in advance for your consideration.

ANOTHER HOME LOVER.

• • • •

DEAR A. H. L.: In forwarding to "Home Lover" such mail as has come to her in response to her proposal that someone share with her the comfort as well as the financial responsibilities of her pleasant apartment home, I have asked her to acknowledge receipt of each communication, and to suggest to those whose counter-propositions she must necessarily reject that they enter into negotiations with you. This seemed the speediest way of supplying you with the contacts you seek. If others are interested in your proposition, they may address you in care of this column, and the mail will be forwarded. Your name and address is filed for future reference. M. H.

Is One Well Paid for Writing Epigrams?

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Please tell me where I can get a list of greeting card companies. Do you think one has much chance of writing epigrams, etc., for these companies and is the pay worth while? I read your column every day and thoroughly enjoy it. Yours truly, INQUIRER.

• • • •

DEAR INQUIRER: You can get a list of about 15 names and addresses of well-established greeting card manufacturing companies from Mrs. Nona Jones, buyer for the stationery department in Brentano's bookstore, 1322 F street northwest. Mrs. Jones' hours are from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. I am told these companies are constantly on the alert to discover new writing talent, so if you have a gift for fresh phrasing it may prove well worth your while to get in touch with such houses. I have no idea what is paid for such work. M. H.

What's Proper Wear for Restaurant Dining?

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: My husband and I have been in Washington for a few months and in that time have not gone out to dinner to any of the smarter restaurants for the reason that we do not know what is considered proper attire—particularly for a woman. What is considered informal wear in Washington? Does one wear a hat and what length dress is worn after 6 o'clock? Your truly, MID-WESTERNER.

• • • •

DEAR MID-WESTERNER: Informal wear of the type you have in mind, such as can suitably be worn by a woman who is dining reasonably early in smart restaurants, hotels and clubs in Washington, may consist of a dark woolen dress and coat ensemble; of street-length silk or crepe dress topped with fur or cloth coat and felt or fabric hat; or tailored suit and blouse worn with a wrap of conservative color and cut. Thus dressed for a day in town, a woman need feel no hesitancy in accompanying her husband—clad in business suit—to dinner in any smart dining place, if they expect to conclude their dinner around 9 o'clock.

• • • •

If you plan to make an evening of it and remain for dancing and a floor show, you will probably feel more comfortable and more a piece with the general scenery if you wear a dinner dress or evening dress, and your husband wears dinner coat and black tie. A dinner dress differs from an eveping dress in that it usually has long sleeves and high neck, although many evening dresses nowadays are made so as to be readily convertible into dinner dress by the addition of a little matching jacket.

If you have a fur coat it may be used as an evening wrap, otherwise it would be a good investment to buy an evening wrap. The majority of women go hatless and either wear or carry long gloves, when wearing evening or dinner dress. There has been a vogue recently for wearing wispy hats and Juliet caps with evening dress—but unless such millinery is definitely a part of the costume with which it is worn, it never looks really smart.

• • • •

If you want to have dinner in a smart restaurant before going to a movie, by all means wear your most becoming street clothes. Don't bother trying to effect the compromise of wearing afternoon clothes. People for the most part either "dress," by which is meant donning evening clothes, or they "don't dress," by which is meant they wear daytime clothes.

It may interest and amuse you to know it is customary to dress in one's evening best when dining in Washington's smarter spots on Saturday nights, however. I'm sure no middle Western village can surpass that for the folksy touch. M. H.

Smart Keynote Of Simplicity in New Handbags

Nat Lewis Models Compel Attention; Plain Calf, Patent Leather Rule.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SMART simplicity is the keynote of the original Nat Lewis handbag models shown in an F street shop. Not one among the fascinating group arranged there on the counter that doesn't demand your attention and admiration.

Patent leather and plain calf are the predominating materials. Colors range from shiny blacks to the popular luggage tans. As to shape—they defy description. Some of them are long and narrow, others plump and square.

From Table to Desk.

YOU CAN turn the simplest table into a desk with the addition of the desk pads shown in a downtown store. They are economical little conveniences that can be depended on to save the shiny surface of either desk or table.

The pads are large blotters in stalwart frames with leather corners. They come in green, red, tan and blue. Price, 59 cents.

That Wonderful Solka.

WHETHER we know it or not, we're all acquainted with Solka, that wonderful material that goes into the making of almost everything, from toys to dress, and pots and pans to jewelry.

In this instance it comes to us in a brand-new form to fill a very useful purpose. We find it thin papery towels, which come, hundreds of them, in a large pad which sells for 15 cents or two for 25.

These towels, unlike just ordinary paper towels, can be used and rinsed and used again. And how many uses they have! They're soft and absorbent, fine for all kinds of cleansing and dry. In the kitchen they are a deluxe convenience.

Attractive New Scarfs.

PAPER TAFFETA makes an eloquent bow in the form of "cravattes" this spring. They are ascot scarfs or ties, and ideally suited to your new tailleur.

Three cheers, too, for they come in a sufficient vareity of patterns and colors to be appropriate for almost any type suit. Particularly attractive are those in stripes. They lend a bit of colorful dash! However, take a light gray suit, for instance. Wouldn't a cerise scarf be stunning? Especially if your hat had a cerise band or bouquet of flowers!

Lamp for Present.

FOR THAT EASTER wedding you'll need a present, and what, oh, shall it be? A lamp, maybe? You'd say yes if you saw those shown in a Connecticut avenue shop. They have that certain something! And the added advantage of being inexpensive. One of them, with a creamy white whorled base, has a pongee shade. Another a shade of coarse woven fabric and round wooden base, plain as plain can be, of a natural wood.

Poliomyelitis Cripples Most Of Its Victims

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE amount of disability that follows infantile paralysis (poliomyelitis) is large. In fact, it is reliably estimated that there are now in the United States more than 120,000 children physically handicapped because of this disease. From this figure we may visualize the large number who fortunately recovered without complications.

We must regard poliomyelitis as a disease of the entire body generating a poison which in turn attacks nerve tissue, rendering it unable to function. In some instances the disease does not affect the nerves at all, and the patient may be scarcely ill. Nevertheless, as in many diseases, a mild case in one individual may transmit the infection in a severe form to a susceptible person. When the spinal cord is attacked it is usually in the lower back region gradually ascending until it reaches the base of the brain or involves the brain itself. This explains why it is sometimes mistaken for meningitis.

Sometimes the disease paralyzes the breathing center in the brain and may prove fatal unless artificial respiration is maintained for hours, days, or even weeks. In such a situation an automatic respirator is invaluable. As the inflammation subsides, however, the nerves of breathing may regain control.

A common-sense program of rehabilitation offers substantial assistance in the prevention of atrophy, the avoidance of contractures, and the lessening of deformities. Furthermore, it keeps the child occupied and reasonably happy.

New Spring Fabrics Lure Home Dressmakers To Post Fashion Book and Sewing Machine

Patterns Offer Latest in Style Developments, Fashion Trends.

ALLURING new spring fabrics now on display in the stores offer a temptation to women to take up their needles and wheel out their sewing machines. Gay prints, soft silks and crisp cottons await the creative touch of the home dressmaker. Dresses this spring are amazingly easy to make and every woman who has any ability at sewing should be able to make herself a new outfit.

The Washington Post's new Spring Fashion Book contains a wide variety of styles for the woman who does her own dressmaking. These styles were designed by Laura I. Baldt, former professor of household arts, Teachers College, Columbia University. Through her wide experience as a teacher, Miss Baldt is familiar with the problems of the home dressmaker and has designed styles that can be made with a minimum of technical knowledge.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THEY'VE BEEN married a year but they're just now getting around to taking an apartment of their own. Of course they're thrilled to pieces, even if they do have to keep strictly within a budget of $550 for everything, including furnishings for living room, bedroom, kitchen and bath. She's in the midst of the art and arithmetic of the situation now and asks us for a list of the "musts." She's scared to death she'll leave out something important like bed springs or a table to eat on.

The main thing to remember is to get as few things as possible to begin on—but have them just as good in quality as possible. In short, begin a home that will grow without having too many discards along the way as additions are made. For the living room the essential things are: sofa and one or two easy chairs, two lamps, two small tables, a rug, curtains, a desk or chest, a table and chairs for dining (a bridge table set could pinch hit for the purpose at first).

For the bedroom the essentials are: dresser, bed, springs, mattress, pillows, small bedside table, boudoir chair, straight chair, curtains, spread, sheets, blankets, two lamps, rug. For the kitchen, she'll have to have the gadgets and utensils for cooking and cleaning, along with curtains, a step stool, dishes, silver, glass and linen (preferably for six), a table an, of course, a stove and refrigerator if they're not furnished with the apartment. For the bath room, needed things will be face towels, bath towels, wash cloths, bath mats, hamper, curtains • • • and a bathroom scale if that's a problem in the family.

Capital Fans' Interest Also Is Centered in 3 Other Horses.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

SANTA ANITA RACE TRACK, Calif., Feb. 21.—Over the same ground where grizzled miners used to tie a bag of gold to a stake and then ride around certain trees, with the first to grab the precious sack being declared the winner, the 100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap will be run tomorrow.

Instead of a bag of gold, a check will go to the winning owner. Instead of a stake at the finish, there will be a black line on a white pole with a camera focused upon it in case the battle to the wire is too close for human eyes to decide.

Instead of a few bearded, bushy-haired and callous-handed builders of the West, the Los Angeles Jockey Club hopes to be host to 60,000 turf fans. Instead of horses that were a cross between Indian ponies and animals which drew covered wagons across the continent, a field of thoroughbreds groomed from birth with the care given an heir to a throne will compete.

Riches Are Waiting.

Here where Lucky Baldwin found relaxation in ranching and racing after digging a fortune out of the earth; here where Nature and man have teamed to build a beautiful race track, riches await, not the man with the pick and shovel, but the man with the best horse.

If we are to believe the story the figures tell, the man will be Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, youthful millionaire, and the horse will be Discovery, the gallant son of Display. Last year's stake champion has caught the fancy of this Western world and his odds have dwindled like a melting cake of ice. Those who quote a figure place his chances at 6 t 5, while the consensus of the press-box points to an even-money mutuel.

A field of 15 appeared on the official entries released this morning and there were no surprises. Every horse that I named yesterday as a certain starter was shown on the mimeographed sheet. There is a possibility that I will steal some of Lucky Baldwin's stuff and be Lucky Haight with my guess that 13 horses will face the barrier. The two scratches necessary to bring the field to that figure probably will come from Preeminent and Pompey's Pillar.

Discovery, with his top weight assignment of 130 pounds, drew No. 12 post position. While some representatives of the Vanderbilt forces were disappointed with his barrier station, I believe he can escape crowding on the outside during those few fleeting moments that mark the getaway. Time will tell.

Interest in Others.

In addition to having a friendly feeling for Discovery because he is from Vanderbilt's Sagamore Farm in Maryland, Washingtonians will have a sentimental interest in three other horses. Time Supply, now the property of Mrs. F. A. Carreaud, was foaled and raised at Leesburg, Va.; Thursday, recently sold by Selby Burch, of Washington, rose from a selling plater to a stake horse on our Maryland tracks, and Singing Wood was sent to the races from Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Llangollen Farm near Upperville, Va.

Although the sun appeared today, prospects for a fast track were poor, indeed, and this was seen as a further factor in Discovery's favor.

Time Supply, breaking away from No. 13 post, and Top Row, tenth from the inside fence, are second choices in both the pre-race betting and conversation. Time Supply, third in the classic last year, comes by his backing justly. He gets a 16-pound pull in the weights from Discovery and is recommended by a track-breaking effort here a few weeks back. Top Row's prestige is the fruit of two victories over Discovery in New England last year.

Azucar, which won the pot of gold last year for Fred Alger, jr., of Detroit, drew No. 1 post position, a place befitting of a defending champion. It was along the rail beside which he will await the start tomorrow that Azucar made the move that wrote turf history 12 months ago. He has lost caste since that race, however, and it is probable that he will be a long shot again. The former steeplechaser has a recent victory to attest to his condition.

Whopper Is Liked.

The horse with which Floridans hope to get the laugh on the Californians is Whopper, the big fellow from the barn of Hal Price Headley. Whopper, coupled with Preeminent, his stablemate, was conditioned under Florida's tropical sun. A victory for him would kick the point after touchdown, for Florida already feels that the reports of two weeks of rain here are the equivalent of putting the ball over the line.

A sizzling workout over a heavy track has earned some support for the Foxcatcher Farm's Rosemont and Singing Wood's triumph here the other day will draw him a scattered backing. Tick On, Thursday, Riskulus, Pompey's Pillar, Ariel Cross, Howard and He Did are believed in the race in hope of a "miracle." However, Azucar was about as fashionable at this hour last year.

The times of the plater races being run as I write are improved over yesterday. There will be much manicuring of the oval tonight and tomorrow morning. However, the weather man refuses to be agreeable and has predicted showers for tonight and tomorrow, much to the disgust of Fred Purner, who was born in Washington, D. C., and who feeds the world publicity on this track.

The night before Christmas was an ordinary evening compared to the suspense on Santa Anita eve—and visions of gold are dancing through many a head.

Mrs. Crews Victor Over Miss Berg

By the Associated Press.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 21.—Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, of Miami, today temporarily halted the meteoric rise of 18-year-old Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, as she effectively defeated her, 4 and 3, in the 18-hole final of the annual Palm Beach women's golf tournament.

Playing over the soggy Palm Beach Country Club course, which in many places was ankle deep in water, the veteran and the Minneapolis school girl were all square at the end of the first nine holes.

Miss Berg's hitherto steady game which carried her to two successive victories in south Florida golf tournaments, fell apart on the back nine, however and Mrs. Crews, without losing one of the last six holes, ended the match at the fifth.

Ties Match.

Mrs. Crews dropped one under the 18-year-old golfer on the seventh hole after maintaining a lead through the first five, then rallied on the ninth to tie the match with a birdie 4.

Before a gallery of 300 persons tramping through occasional sprinkles of rain, Miss Berg finally broke the Miamian's lead with a 10-foot putt on the sixth, which squared matters.

The Minnesotan won the seventh with a 3, halved the eighth and lost the ninth by one stroke when Mrs. Crews put her third shot within 6 feet of the pin and then dropped it.

Winning the first two holes with fours against Miss Berg's fives, Mrs. Crews dropped the third to take a one-up lead which she held until the Minneapolis girl sank her long putt on the sixth. Miss Berg rolled in another 10-footer at the eighth, to halve it in threes.

Her medal score was 38 for the first nine, two better than Mrs. Crews' 40. Their cards:

School Series Is Financial Failure

By John R. Vosburgh.

HIGH SCHOOL sports are facing a financial crisis, according to statements made last night by Birch E. Bayh, head of the physical education department of Washington's school system, and Laurence T. Brown, treasurer of the Interhigh Athletic Association.

Bayh said that the interhigh basketball series which closed Wednesday "was a financial failure."

"We did not make enough money to take care of expenses," he continued. "What this will mean to high school sports in general can be imagined."

Said Brown "The interhigh series failed to pay for itself. Our expenses ran over $500, our receipts were about $400. Surplus from basketball receipts heretofore have taken care of expenses for baseball and track.

Depleted Treasury.

"If the schools expect to have an interhigh baseball series," the treasurer asserted, "they will have to put up the money themselves. The interhigh treasury cannot afford it."

Bayh and Brown, supported by John Paul Collins, former president of the Interhigh Athletic Association, fired verbal broadsides at the policy of the board of principals of holding the series on the "split" plan—one game at Roosevelt and one at Tech.

Collins, who suggests the "split" plan last year, recommended it be withdrawn this season. So did managers and coaches of the teams, and, more important, the faculty advisers. The board of principals met, however, perfunctorily passed the motion to pursue the same policy which had also failed, in 1934. Now a deficit for two years running has the interhigh treasury in dire straits.

Bayh, brought in by the Board of Education as the "czar" of interhigh sports and physical education, was not notified of the meeting of the board of principals at which the "split" policy was approved. Bayh is an ex-officio member of the board and strongly against the "split" policy.

To Restore Twin Game.

The burden for the serious condition in which the interhigh treasury now finds itself therefore rests largely on the board of principals. It is too late to do anything about the 1936 season, but Bayh and Brown are working to restore for next year the "double-header" plan, of holding both games at Tech.

The officials are also working to perfect a 1937 schedule which will embody night games at Tech. Pro-

Werber and Two Red Sox Holdouts

By the United Press.

Boston, Feb. 21.—General Manager Eddie Collins of the Boston Red Sox broke a club precedent tonight by revealing that three members of the team were holdouts and would be barred from the spring training camp unless they returned their signed contracts.

Collins named the trio as Infielder Bill Werber, league leading base stealer; Pitcher Johnny Marcum, recently purchased from the Philadelphia Athletics, and Outfielder Dusty Cook.

Contracts were sent them a month ago, Collins said, but they have failed to return them. "Before they can start training," Collins insisted, "their signed contracts will have to be returned."

The disclosure definitely eliminated reports that Catcher Rick Ferrell and Infielder Eric McNair, former Atheltics star, also were holdouts.

This Morning . . .

Without Shirley Povich.

By Dave Herman.

WHEN Bobby Jones, the Atlanta barrister, stepped down from his throne in the fall of 1930 after completing his famous "Grand Slam," and announced his retirement from competitive golf, veteran observers remarked:

"There will never be another Jones."

Years ago, we'll say a quarter of a century ago, when Marse Robert was just learning to keep his eyes on the ball and make a complete follow through, there was a gent named Harry Vardon who was a good golfer, too. He was so good, was Vardon, that when he faded out of the picture, all England and all America were agreed that "There would never be another Vardon."

HERMAN.

Little did golfers realize that when Vardon went into golfing exile—far from the stampeding, thundering mob that hundreds of times followed his miraculous shots with bated breath—another player, as great, if not greater, would step forth and capture the imagination of fanatics of the fairway.

Bobby Jones was the answer. Over a stretch of 15 years, the Georgia ace won five American Amateur, four American Open, one British Amateur and three British Open championships—remarkable, indeed. Most amazing, incredible, as the English term it, was his first four-ply wallop in 1930 when he swept all four major crowns.

'Tis true Vardon had no equal in his day. There were Taylor, Herd, Braid, the Auchterlonies, Hilton, Anderson, Smith, our own Fred McLeod, but always Vardon was the man against the field, just as Jones was during his triumphant days. Vardon won six Opens, but his American campaigning, oddly enough, netted him only one Open, which was in 1900.

Vardon was before my time, and thus I was deprived of the privilege of seeing that sturdy Englishman perform. Yet, I do not believe he was the golfer Jones was. Vardon had everything, as the boys say—a beautiful, graceful swing, a sound game from tee to green, a wonderful competitive spirit. What else could you ask of a champion?

But Marse Jones had all that, and, we think, more. Jones was a better putter than Vardon, my professional friends who have analyzed their games carefully, tell me. In golf the payoff is putting. Those little chips, putt savers, come in handy, and it was in this department, too, that Bobby had it over the great Vardon. Because Bobby Jones could chip and putt better than any other pro or amateur in his day, he was always "the man to beat."

Here is a case of comparing an amateur, Jones, with a professional, Vardon. You say that's not fair! Well, it's O. K. with me. I still say Jones is the greatest golfer of all time.

Walk up to any old-time Scotch or English pro in this country, and ask him who's the greatest, and quicker than you can snap your fingers he'll say, "Vardon." Put the same question before the average American pro who has seen both men perform, and his answer is "Jones."

The debate marches on. Civilization, golf courses, golf equipment have changed since Vardon's time, we agree. In his day the courses were crude looking things, balls not quite as powerful as they are today, and the average old timer carried from six to eight clubs as compared to the 14 to 18 that cluttered up Jones' bag.

Well, there's an opening for you. It's an argument in favor of Vardon. But no—Vardon couldn't match the smoking pace of Jones in the heydey of the Atlantan's power and glory if Vardon, with all his artistry and cunning, were made to fit into the twentieth century picture.

Sarazen doesn't think there'll be another Jones or Hagen—and I might add Sarazen. Sarazen is wrong. Lawson Little, the California Hercules, has breathed new life and romance into the game with his "Little Slam," result of two straight British and American Amateur championships. He, too, has everything, and can knock the ball farther than Vardon or Jones ever dreamed of knocking it.

He has a chance to surpass Jones' record, young man that he be. His best years are ahead. Jones never won 31 consecutive matches in British and American amateur competition. Jones never finished an amateur championship with a 19-under-par performance. But Little did that last year. Little already has done a big job. He's rolling, and in golf when you roll, according to Hagen, you get to the top.

Will Little win an Open? Yes. He may win eight or nine before he reaches the 40 mark in life. Until the Californian wins an Open crown, he can not be put in the same class with Jones, who won seven Opens before he retired. In the years to come, it will be written of Lawson Little, believe us. "There will never be another Little."

The pros will learn to fear him, just as they feared Jones, and just as the amateurs fear him now.

With Sarazen and Hagen, great showmen, two of our golfing immortals, fast passing from the spotlight, young stars are zooming into prominence. Johnny Revolta, the Wisconsin comet, is the nearest approach to Hagen or Sarazen, and both will tell you so. All Revolta needs is a little color, for he has the game and the fight and the shots. He must be good to win $10,000 in one year, and average close to 72 per round.

Beaupre Loses By Knockout To Tow

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHICAGO STADIUM, Chicago, Ill., Feb. 21.—Husky Bob Tow, Alexandria, Va., heavyweight, scored a surprising fifth-round technical knockout over Tom Beaupre, of Texas, as Joe Lipps, of Ty Ty, Ga., was being decisioned by Buddy Knox, Dayton, Ohio, in the seventh-round of White Hope heavyweight elimination tournament here tonight.

Scaling 200 pounds, Tow never gave ground in his bout against Beaupre, which was scheduled to go six rounds. He began a two-handed attack on the Texan, who was described by the Associated Press and other services as the "best looking prospect" in the tournament at the outset. Previous to tonight, Beaupre not only was undefeated in the tournament but never had suffered a loss in his professional career, which embraced 15 bouts, most of which ended in his favor via the knockout route.

The knockout came in one minute and 15 seconds of the fifth round. Bob hooked a hard right to Beaupre's head from close range and the Dallas fighter, with a wild look, sank to the canvas. At the count of nine, Beaupre rose, but was completely bewildered and out on his feet. A steady flow of blood ran from his nose and Referee Joe McNamara stopped the fight.

Maryland U., Trailing 22 to 9 at One Stage, Defeats G. U., 47 to 39

Brilliant Second-Half Rally Slices Rivals' Big Early Lead.

Keller, Willis, Thomas Heroes in Triumph Before 2,000.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

MARYLAND'S Terrapins played 'possum on Georgetown's Hilarious Hilltoppers last night at Tech High School, and after allowing their opponents to assume a mountainous 22-9 lead in the first half, staged one of the gamest comebacks witnessed on a local floor this winter to out-point them by the comfortable margin of 47-39.

An audience of some 2,000 fans, Maryland's Jekyll-Hyde performance, quite a number of them Old Line supporters, although this did not become evident until the second half when their favorites got into the swing of things. However, they really had nothing to cheer about in the first half, which Georgetown won, 25-18.

Engineer Rally.

It's rather difficult to single out the most important figure in the Terps' thrilling victory. They looked like champions in that second half, stalking Georgetown into defeat with a smooth passing and unerring shooting attack that left the foe exhausted and decisively whipped. Knocky Thomas, Vic Willis and Charley Keller, who engineered the winning rally probably deserve the lion's share of credit, but it was a five-man proposition. The best brand of teamwork Maryland has displayed this winter eventually won.

Georgetown may have been the victim of its own coach's strategy, for he yanked two extremely important men, Tommy Nolan and Harry Basin, at the start of the second half, obviously to save them for Maryland's belated rally which was certain to come. Coach Mesmer's calculations were correct, but when he did play his aces it was too late, the Terps were running wild and a dozen Nolans and Bassins couldn't have stopped them.

Georgetown's scoring ace was Buddy Nau, heretofore an obscure reserve, who led his mates with 13 points. He played a beautiful game all the way through, but was bottled up along with the rest when the Terps opened up with their home-stretch drive. Mike Petroskey, center, and Don Gibeau, forward, also came through with their usual good performances, but to no avail. The best team won.

Hoyas Win Lead.

Georgetown overcame a 4-1 lead to assume an advantage that at various times was 9-4, 12-6, 17-8 and 22-9 early in the first half. It looked like a breeze and then a tornado that threatened to blow the Terps all the way back to College Park. But Wheeler, Thomas, McCarthy and Willis came through with field goals as Georgetown began to wilt, and when Bernie Buscher sank two free throws just before the half ended, the count stood, Georgetown 25, Maryland 18.

Subscriber Sends $2 to Poor Youth

A few days ago there appeared on the sports pages of The Post a story about a letter written by a 13-year-old boy to Joe Turner, asking for help for himself and a sick mother, left by an unemployed father. Bo Bregman, a local sportsman, visited the boy and his mother, found conditions just as pitiful as the letter had said—and paid the poor people's rent and gave them a few dollars to live on.

Yesterday The Post received an envelope containing a clipping of the story describing Bregman's action—and two one-dollar bills. There was no return address on the envelope, no name in the letter—just the clipping and the $2.

Venzke Faces Cunningham Tonight

Duel to Head Program at Garden. Mangan Not Entered.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Knights of the board tracks take another whirl at toppling indoor records tomorrow night in the Amateur Athletic Union's forty-eighth National senior indoor championships in Madison Square Garden.

As the pick of the country's athletes converged on New York tonight, at least a half dozen indoor standards appeared unlikely to withstand the assault of such record-breakers as Glenn Cunningham and Gene Venzke, whose 1,500-meter duel tops the program; Eddie O'Brien, Syracuse's ace quartermiler; Jack Torrance, Cornelius Johnson, Eulace Peacock, Forrest Towns, Chuck Hornbostel and Hank Cleman.

Although Joe Mangan won't be there to complicate matters, Cunningham's indoor record of 3:50.5 may well go by the boards when he and Venzke toe the mark in the 1,500-meter event. Back in the form that made him an idol of New York's track fans three years ago, Venzke already has beaten Cunningham twice this year and will be out to make it three in a row. Mangan, the former Cornell ace who sprang a stunning upset in beating both Venzke and Cunningham in the Wanamaker mile of the Millrose games, was forced to withdraw from tomorrow night's tussle because of illness.

O'Brien, who cracked the 500-yard record in his last start, tops a crack field in the 600-meter run in which Milton Sandler, the indoor record holder, seeks his fourth successive title.

Records also may fall in the high jump, the 1,000 meters run, the 65 meter high hurdles, the shot put and the 1,500 meter walk.

In the high jump, Johnson, Pacific Coast Ace, renews his torrid duel with Temple's Al Threadgill with a new-comer, Dave Burke of Marquette, a possible contender. Glen Dawson of Tulsa is conceded small chance of retaining the 1,000 meters title in the face of such opposition as Hornbostel and Elroy Robinson of Fresno State Teachers will provide.

Paralyzed Grid Star Enters N. Y. Hospital

Tade, unable to speak or move his arms, was brought here on a fund raised by fellow students.

D. C. Firemen Upset Dope, Beat Bovello in A. A. U. Tourney

Plumber Five Bows, 26-21, In Thriller

Extra Period Is Played; Senate Beer, Rockville, Are Victors.

SIX plucky players representing the D. C. Fire Department collaborated successfully last night at Heurich's gym and upset the dope by knocking off the flashy Bovello Plumbers, 26-21 in the feature unlimited game of the District A. A. U. Post championship basketball tournament.

Forced into an overtime five-minute period, the firefighters turned the hose on their basket and sprayed it to the extent of three straight field goals. Gallotta popped in the first goal that blasted Bovello's hopes, and Lyles and Harrington followed suit. Bovello's lone point in the extra session was a free throw by Chalkley.

In the second game of the night Rockville A. C.'s rangy boys buzzed like a well-oiled machine to humble a weak National Capital Parks team, 44-21, with Herschberger, forward; Forney and Berker, centers, scoring 14, 13 and 12 points, respectively.

Rockville waltzed into an early lead, and was way out in front, 24-8, at the turn. The Parks boys fought valiantly, but to no avail. Howe with nine points, was the Parks' best shooters.

The crack Heurich Senate beer team advanced to the second round at the expense of Bliss Electrical School, 48-42, but not without a struggle. The Senate boys held a 27-11 lead at the half, but started loafing in the closing period, and the Bliss team quickly widened the gap.

Ray Imparato, roving Bliss guard, fired 'em in from all angles, to score 18 points, ever proving a threat. Anthony Latona, Cavanaugh and Williams pocketed 10 points for Heurich.

The Fire Department - Bovello game was the second overtime game in the unlimited division since the big Post games opened Tuesday night. It was a thriller from the very outset, with the Firemen grabbing an 11-to-8 lead at half-time. A goal-for-goal battle followed in the closing session.

With less than 15 seconds to go, Bob McVean, former Catholic University player, fired a pot shot into the hoops to enable Bovello to knot the count at 20-all and necessitate an extra period.

No games are scheduled in the tournament tonight. Play will be resumed Monday.

smashed frequent rights to the kidneys, which slowed Beaupre down considerably. The latter tipped the scales at 185½ pounds.

Tow returned to the ring in this elimination tournament after a long layoff necessitated by a shoulder injury. He was operated on for this injury at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, about a year ago, and had been on the sidelines since.

Lipps, who made a great hit with the crowd here last week by coming back in the last round of a six-round bout against his opponent only to lose the decision, went down to defeat tonight before the same fighter, Buddy Knox. Tonight's bout also went the six rounds and Lipps staged another great finish, having the big crowd on its feet yelling for him and then urging the officials to give the decision to him this time.

However, Knox, who weighed 187 against 174 for Lipps, carries a wicked short punch in either hand and he piled up points early, something the fine finish of Lipps could not overcome.

Knox and Lipps went at their chore without a let-up. It was a slambang fight throughout, with Knox taking the decision, but by a very narrow margin. He scored mostly with hard raps to the body and an occasional left hook to the chin. Joe fought a long range fight, with a hard straight left hand that frequently found its mark bearing the brunt of his attack. He also used a looping right hand punch that scored numerous points for him.

Neither fighter was marked after the bout.

Wilson Is Victor; Phil Fox Is Star

With Phil Fox leading the attack and increasing his total point score for 14 games to 187, Wilson Teachers College last night trounced Bridgewater, 42 to 35, before a capacity crowd in Wilson Gymnasium. Zeller, of the visitors, shared individual honors with Fox with 13 points.

The game was marked by frequent fouls on both sides and developed into a toe-to-toe battle as it progressed. Wilson led, 28 to 13, at half-time, but the Virginians, led by Scott and Zeller, came back strong in the second half, only to falter in the closing seconds of play.

Maryland Rally Defeats G.U. Five

period opened, Maryland pulled up to 22-27, and when Willis and Keller pocketed field goals and Buscher made good on one of two free throws the game was tied 27-all. But Nolan's foul and Gibeau's field goal gave Georgetown a temporary reprieve, and the boys struggled along like wildcats until the tally stood 34-33, Georgetown still leading.

Thomas then whipped in a long shot and Willis followed suit, gaining a 4-point lead their mates clung to with savage tenacity over the remainder of the period. Two free throws by Nau, one by Petroskey, and a basket by Bassin propped Georgetown's total to 39, but meanwhile Maryland had increased its own to 43 with Willis, Wheeler and Thomas leading the parade.

Keller's smashing defensive play in these last few minutes not only served as protection for his team's lead but opened up new scoring avenues for the Terps, who were rubbing it in on their ancient rivals as the game ended.

Johnson

Warm-Up Suggested; Then He'd Toss Good Money After Bad.

By Jack Miley.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Just in case you don't think the panic is ended, allow us to remind you that the sportively inclined citizens of this broad and bountiful land are itching to whoop up George Washington's birthday tomorrow by tossing scads of important money around in their most reckless and abandoned manner.

In the first place, the gray-thatched Walter Johnson, creaky Big Train of the Nationals, will try to pitch a silver dollar across the Rappahannock River down in old Virginny at precisely the same spot where the Father of His Country stood when he is said to have bowled a buck across that lazy stream soon after he copped a unanimous decision from the British in the Revolutionary War.

But Johnson's project is really bush league stuff, unworthy of our mention and your attention, compared to what will happen when the $110,000 Santa Anita Handicap is run on the old Lucky Baldwin ranch near Los Angeles.

THERE the Fondle McDandles and the Gwendolyn Gulps of the Hollywood movie colony—who've always had more krohen in their kicks than cerebral plumbing under their scalps—will heave $1,000,000 into the mutuels on the galloping glue-pots of their choice.

Old man Johnson was in strenuous training today for his flipping feature. Meanwhile, the residents of Fredericksburg, Va., where Walter will try his epic elbowing, were laying fancy prices that he couldn't fling his cartwheel across the 372-foot expanse of water. In fact, these skeptics were hinting that Washington himself hadn't done it—that the story was one of those dubious yarns like Steve Brodie's jump off the Brooklyn Bridge, or who struck John McGraw's pal.

If Walter fails he has a swell alibi—for any housewife will tell you a dollar won't go nearly as far today as it used to. Remember, also, that Johnson is hurling one of those light and inflated dollars — worth about 64 cents.

NATURALLY, one couldn't expect him to get the same distance with this feathery missile that he might obtain with an old-fashioned, 100-cent dollar.

We think the committee in charge should allow Johnson a few warm-up pitches before he starts to throw strikes. He might try a few trial twirls with counterfeit coins. Then when he cut loose with the McCoy buck it truly would be a case of throwing good money after bad. Or if the Rappahannock proves too broad for the old Coffeyviller's withered old wing, he should be given another chance of some narrower river in the community where he might score by scaling that scratch across the ice on the third bounce.

We do hope Walter doesn't carry his emulation of the deeds of our Presidents too far. For instance, we'd like to see him try to chop down a cherry tree with a fungo bat or attempt to cross the Delaware with a pair of catchers' mitts for pontoons.

IF he gets too engrossed in such didoes, Walter might take it into his head to imitate Lincoln—and he wouldn't be satisfied, we fear, until somebody had assassinated him.

Returning to that other spending orgy, the Santa Anita Handicap, we're dropping our deuce right on the Dundrearies of the favorite, Discovery. This is no bet, it is an investment; like buying a bond, but with a quicker turnover. The race may be no shoo-in, but that Vanderbilt horse reeks with class and should win easily. Although such timothy-masticators as Time Supply, Top Row, Whopper, Rosemont and Thursday must be reckoned with, we think they'll pay off on the big Red Runner from Alfred Gwynne's barn.

Discovery, packing 130 pounds, is carrying a feather. The 1935 turf king is the fastest horse alive at three-quarters of a mile and doesn't stop there. He can be rated in behind the pace or he can take the stretch, and when he bears down on that straightaway he's like the Twentieth Century Limited—nobody'll tag him.

The hot shot should pay slightly less than 7-5 and we've practically got the money spent but don't let us influence you. Pick 'em yourself and have no regrets.

Maryland, Attacked by Paper, Gives Charity Game Receipts

By the Associated Press.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Feb. 21.—Some worthy charity in Cumberland is to receive $77.77 as an indirect gift from the University of Maryland.

That sum was the university's part of the receipts for the Maryland-West Virginia basketball game played here February 10. It was sent here following newspaper criticism of the game.

H. C. Byrd, acting president of the university, wrote Eugene T. Gunning, Cumberland representative for the game in question, and sent the check. He asked that the money "be donated to any worthy charity in Cumberland that you feel most deserving."

The article in question criticized Maryland for failure to bring its full team to Cumberland because of "injuries." The players in question were injured February 1 in a game with Duke, but played February 6 against the University of Virginia and February 11 against Washington and Lee. They did not play here, however.

They were Vic Willis, center, and Al Waters, forward.

Byrd wrote Gunning that "I feel the criticism was more or less justified."

It has not been decided what organization will receive the money.

Heurich Faces Pittsburgh Willigs

TWO of the most ambitious sports programs ever put on here have been scheduled for tonight and tomorrow afternoon when the Heurich Brewers meet the famous Pittsburgh Willigs in two games.

At 7 p. m. tonight the second place Roosevelt High School quint will engage Heurich Flashes and at 8 p. m. Rinaldi Tailors will meet Delaware & Hudson. The Tailors, winners of the Heurich Amateur League, will be awarded the cup.

Tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 the Willigs, victors over such clubs as the New York Celtics and the Philadelphia Sphas, will be met a second time. Their line-up includes such names as Don Smith, former Pittsburgh U. all-American; Capt. Teddy Riggs, of Carnegie Tech; Tom Lowry, former Pitt U. ace, and Willies Hughes, another Pitt U. luminary who captained the Panthers several years ago.

In one of the best preliminary programs ever held here two girls' teams will play boys' rules at 2:30 o'clock. They are the United Typewriter Grays and the Walter Reed Nurses. There will be three guards and three forwards in this game. The ball will be tossed in the center of the court by the referee and the young ladies will scramble for it.

In the other preliminary tomorrow Fort Myer will meet Olmsted at 1:30. Admission to both games is 40 cents. Children will be admitted for 15 cents.

Inter-High Series Financial Failure

vided the board of principals can be impressed with the necessity of reviving one of the city's most thriving sports features, next season will possibly see basketball restored to its former heights.

The largest crowd at an inter-high game this season was 450 spectators at the Eastern-Tech game. Under the double-header plan, 2,000 to 3,500 spectators have attended consistently in past years.

Football receipts dropped radically last season to a total of only approximately $1,000, Brown said. The decision of the board of principals to scatter some of the inter-high games among the various schools aided the decline in receipts. The financial failure of basketball finds the treasury wobbling along with a dismal future if present policies are continued.

Post Mortems . . .

Eric Greenleaf, of Washington, has been appointed chief timer of the American Power Boat Association, succeeding L. Eastern After New Title Today

THE old Eastern custom of winning the Metropolitan scholastic basketball championship will no doubt be renewed this afternoon at Tech High, when the inter-high champions lead Bethesda-Chevy Chase High to what looks very much like another sacrifice. Eastern is gunning for its fourth straight Metropolitan title.

Last year, Bethesda-Chevy Chase was likewise victimized. This year a first-class girls' game will precede the main event with Sherwood High, of Montgomery County, meeting the Fredericksburg, Va., High misses, who have won 24 games in a row. This contest will start at 3 p. m. with the Eastern-Bethesda game immediately following.

In view of Eastern's 53-18 victory over George Washigton High, of Alexandria, in the first round of the tourney, Thursday night, the Lincoln Parkers are heavy favorites to demolish the Marylanders. Despite the latter's 27-21 win over Mount Rainier High, of Prince Georges County, Thursday, they have already been beaten twice by Eastern.

Eastern will be seeking its twenty-second straight victory over a high school, prep school or independent team. Beaten only college freshmen, the Northeast nomads have also set up a record of 23 straight interhigh wins.

The Maryland team has improved greatly since that time and should not be exactly a set-up today. For Eastern, the game will be the last prior to its defense of its Eastern States championship at Glens Falls, N. Y., the last week in March.

The main threat for Bethesda is expected to be Capt. Frank Lozupone, the lanky forward who ran up 12 points against Mount Rainier. Bob Harris will start at the other forward post, with Schneider at center and Woody Putman and Kimmel, the starting guards. Lozupone, Harris, Schneider and Putman all saw action against Eastern in the Metroplitan tournament last year when the suburban champs gave the interhigh champs stubborn resistance to the finish.

Baltimoreans Set Duckpin Record

THE GREATEST team exhibition of duckpin bowling ever witnessed on local alleys was staged last night at the Convention Hall alleys in a Southern-Inter-City League match, in which the Recreation Fve of Baltimore, clipped the maples for a new South Atlantic record pinfall of 3,290 for five games. The new record-holders shut-out the league-leadeing Occidental Restaurant quintet.

The mark betters the former record, held by the Silver Spring Skating Rink team and is but 17 sticks less than the world record score chalked up by the famous Connecticut Blue Ribbons.

Every man on the record-breaking team rolled far over the 600 mark. Harry Schreck, cracking the individual game record of 171 formerly held by "Dutch" Newman, of the Occidental's, shot a 176 game and totaled 705 for the set. The former team set record for the league was Occidental's 3,197, which was bettered by 93 pins.

The third annual Lorraine Gulli sweepstakes tops the local duckpin card for today, with close to 50 or the Nation's leading women bowlers, hailing from New England, Baltimore, Richmond, Norfolk, the District and other points South, scheduled to compete in a gruelling tournament, consisting of ten games.

Cox and Kalmikoff To Head Mat Card

Kansas City Joe Cox, upset conqueror of Ernie Dusek and George Zaharias, will return to local mat wars next Thursday when he squares off with Sergei Kalmikoff, the bearded Siberian wild man, in the feature match of the weekly wrestling show at the Turner Arena.

Previous plans to match Champion Danno O'Mahony and Ernie Dusek failed to materialize when the titleholder balked at Promoter Joe Turner's financial arrangement.

"I won't take action against O'Mahony," Turner said last night. "But you can bet he'll never be booked in Washington until he signs for either Dusek or Cox."

Hines Grabs Golf Lead With 139

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 21 (AP).—Jimmy Hines, Garden City, L. I., who leads the professional entourage in the low scoring averages, broke par over a rain-soaked course today to lead the $2,500 St. Petersburg open at the halfway mark.

Hines added a sub par 70 to his opening 69 for a 36-hole aggregate of 139 to lead the field by three strokes.

Soggy from an early morning rain and swept by high winds all day, the tricky Lakewood course took a heavy toll of strokes. Hines and Harry Cooper, Chicago veteran, were the only ones able to better par. Cooper also carded a 70, one under par, and pulled up into a tie for second place with Paul Runyan, White Plains, at 142.

Cooper had a 72 yesterday and Runyan, who set a new competitive record for the Lakewood links yesterday when he carded a 68, took a seven on one hole today and soared to 74 for the round. Johnny Revolta, P. G. A. champion from Milwaukee who had a 69 yesterday, required 74 blows for his second round and stood alone at 143.

Leonard Dodson, Pembine, Wis., carded his second 72 for an aggregate of 144 and three professionals were bracketed at 145. They are Ky Laffoon, Chicago; Ray Mangrum, unattached, and Herman Barron, White Plains, N. Y.

Terl Johnson, Winter Haven, Fla., and Wiffy Cox, Washington, D. C., were tied at 146 and the 147 group includes Ed Kerby, Akron, Ohio; Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa.; Harold McSpadden, unattached, and Al Kreuger, Beloit, Wis.

Hines finished brilliantly with two birdies and a par and holed a 36-foot putt at the home green. He was an early starter and escaped much of the heavy wind that Cooper, Runyan, Revolta and the other leaders battled most of the way.

The 60 low scores and ties will play the final 36 holes at the Pasadena Golf Club tomorrow. First money is $500.

Wynne Leaves Tonight for Orlando

Post Sandlot Choice Off With Harris and Five Pitchers for Camp.

ACCOMPANIED by five pitching candidates, two catchers and three gentlemen of the press, Stanley R. (Bucky) Harris, of the Nationals, will entrain from Union Station tonight at 7:20 o'clock for Orlando, Fla., and the Nats' training camp.

Two young Washington sandlot products will be among the party, namely, Dick Lanahan, 23-year-old former Eastern High pitcher, and Huck Wynne, 20-year-old ace of the city's sandlot catchers. Wynne is being given a try-out with the Nats at the expense of The Washington Post, which has selected the rifle-armed, hard-hitting catcher from 1,600 players to be accorded the opportunity of climbing into the big show.

The other four pitchers, in addition to Lanahan, will be Nick Coppola, a boy named Krakaukas; another named Chase, who pitched for Panama City last season, and a semi-pro from New Freedom, Pa., named Rathensburger. Krakaukas is a young Canadian semi-pro and Chase is the property of the Chattanooga club, Washington recruit farm.

Coppola leaves as a probable choice to make the Nats' mound staff, with Lanahan another decidedly promising prospect to make the jump from Chattanooga to Griffith Stadium.

The other catcher, in addition to Wynne, will be a Fordham University receiver named Sabo.

Only two of the Nats' regulars will be at camp when Manager Harris and his advance guard hit Orlando, namely, Cecil Travis, the third baseman, and Cliff Bolton, catcher. Three third basemen will be on hand, for Senor Estellella, the Cuban, and Buddy Lewis, the brilliant "find" from Chattanooga, are already on location.

Sammy Holbrook and Jackie Starr, catchers, and Dee Miles, young outfielder, also have established residence at the Florida resort. The remaining members of the squad will file into camp from day to day.

Gets Job Through His "Situations Wanted" Ad In Post

Ollie Martin, 25 years old, is a good worker—but nobody knew about him. So last week he put an ad in the "Situations Wanted" column of The Post—and sure enough the third morning the ad appeared in The Post he received a call which resulted in a job for him. Here's the inexpensive Post Want Ad that got him the job:

3-Line "Situations Wanted" Ad Costs Only 27 Cents in The Post

Whether you are unemployed or are employed and looking for a better position—you can advertise in The Post's "Situations Wanted" column at only one-half of The Post's regular want ad rates.

In a 3-line ad, which costs only 27 cents, you can place your qualifications, experience and address before thousands of employers. Take advantage of this inexpensive method to make a connection—whether you do office work, housework or perhaps seek a professional associate.

Write your ad and bring it to the Want Ad counter on the first floor in The Post Building, 1337 E Street Northwest. The deadline for week days is 8 p. m., for the big Sunday issue it is 4 p. m.

Woodlander Winner at Hialeah

Stretch Bid Of Wacoche Is Futile

By the Associated Press.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 21. Excitement above the ordinary reigned here this afternoon. The big crowd was subjected to suspense and thrills, due to finishes so close that the photographic eye had to be called into constant play, and a futile claim of foul which delayed the result of the third race.

The Tropical Claiming Handicap, a mile and a furlong feature, that attracted a half dozen $4,500 platers to the post, saw Mrs. B. Hernandez's Woodlander barely lasting to win by a nose from the Corsicana Stable's Wacoche. Mrs. Emil Denemark's heavily backed Chasar was third, three lengths behind. This was the third event out of five in which the camera was used to determine the winner. The pictures of the close finishes were displayed for the public's benefit and the judges' stand resembled an art gallery after the main event.

Nearly Loses Race.

Woodlander very nearly lost the purse through the overconfident handling of L. Turner, who apparently thought he had too long a lead to lose and stopped riding in the late stages.

Woodlander covered the mile and a furlong over a slow track in 1:52 4-5 to pay $10.50 for $2.

Wacoche ran into a commanding lead, followed by Woodlander. The latter ran over the Pacemaker and reached the eighth pole three lengths in the van. Turner took too much for granted, with the result that Wacoche, instead of conceding victory, came on again and almost stole the purse. Chasar never was a serious threat, the first two horses holding him safe with ease.

Apprentice Jockey W. G. Jackson was suspended for the balance of the meeting for reckless and vicious use of the whip astride Vanda Cerules in the last race of Thursday, the Stewards announced. The officials added that this was a repetition of the offense for which Jackson had previously been set down for 10 days.

Dear Al: Santa Anita Race Track, Calif., Feb. 21.

I am going to take Time Supply to win the 100 grand tomorrow. I didn't put the names in a hat, either. The son of Timemaker is a "money" horse. He is as solid as rock, has worked well and broke a track record here recently. They say he will not like an off track, but I have reason to believe otherwise. He carries 114 pounds, 18 less than Discovery, which appears to be the one to beat. Time Supply was third last year to Azucar and Ladysman. He was on top in the stretch, but had a rough time before getting there and had nothing left for the final drive. With better racing luck, I expect his number to be flashed in the win position. Of the others, I prefer Whopper, Singing Wood and Thursday. But if you really are serious about determining the winner remember that Mrs. Bennings' lovely boy picked Equipoise last year.

BILL.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY HOCKBERGER, $11.10, $5.00, $4.20; ST. NICK, $4.80, $4.30; HIGH TORQUE, $9.20.

LADY HOCKBERGER, raied in near attendance of the pacemaker, came through on the inside when moving to the front at the stretch turn, carried ZEVANAID very wide at the top of the turn to draw clear entering the homestretch, but Meade became overconfident and permitted his mount to loaf.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200. Tropical Claiming Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:43. Off at 4:43½. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, Mrs. B. Hernandez's ch. g. (5), by Rolled Stock—Rosewood. Trained by B. Hernandez. Value to winner, $8500; second, $2000; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:52 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WOODLANDER, $10.50, $4.10, $2.70; WACOCHE, $3.60, $2.60; CHASAR, $2.40.

WOODLANDER, under steadying restraint while following in nearest pursuit of WACOCHE, opened up a winning lead when moving to the front at the stretch turn, but tired rapidly in the final sixteenth and barely lasted long enough. WACOCHE had nice speed while setting the pace, saved ground wherever possible, then came again when taken to the outside of all horses in front. CHASAR was overtaken.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:13. Off at 5:14½. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, Mrs. N. E. Doyle's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OLD JUDGE, $14.60, $8.00, $4.50; BLIND BROOK, $8.00, $4.40; INFINITATE, $3.10.

OLD JUDGE rated forwardly during the early running, gained the lead readily when shaken up and came away slowly approaching the finish. BLIND BROOK raced in the better footing when sent into the lead, rallied nicely when put to a hard drive and was willingly. INFINITATE closed with good courage when put to strong pressure, but could not menace the first two.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:45. Off at 5:50. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, Mrs. Charles P. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LONE HAND, $5.30, $3.60, $2.80; GALLIC, $6.00, $4.60; LADY COUVIN, $4.60.

LONEHAND, in tight quarters until leaving the backstretch, swung to the outside when reaching the stretch, responded courageously under a strong drive and closed stoutly to get up in the last few strides. GALLIC went close to the leaders after being crowded going to the first turn, took command when leaving the backstretch, opened up ground wherever possible in the better footing and held on stubbornly until the finish. LADY COUVIN, weakly ridden and permitted to drop out of contention, rallied when shaken up and finished strongest of all.

Courts Delay Utility Plans For Expansion

Insurance Companies Turn to Urban Realty for Investment.

New York, Feb. 21.—"The TVA decision focussed attention this week on the "outlook for the utilities," Business Week will say in its issue tomorrow. "They found the Supreme Court's ruling disappointing, partly because it left so many pertinent questions unanswered. The extensive expansion programs that many of them have planned may be held down until the legality of the holding company act and PWA's financing of municipally-operated plants is decided.

"Urban real estate again looks good to life insurance companies. Since January 1, some 45 of them have invested over $34,700,000 in city mortgages against less than $8,300,000 in the same period of 1935. Urban mortgages absorbed 14.4 per cent of life insurance funds invested this year against a mere 2.3 per cent in the same weeks last year.

Machine Tool Upturn.

"The January machine tool index reached 110.8 per cent of the 1926 level against 98.3 per cent in December. The first quarter of 1936 thus gets a flying start, and should exceed by a wide margin the 60.3 per cent average of the first quarter of 1935.

"The Lumber Survey Committee expressed disappointment that lumber stocks, which were substantially reduced in the first half of 1935, increased 500,000,000 feet in the last half of the year, following the end of NRA.

"Though cotton consumption by domestic mills in January was the largest for the month since 1929, sales of textiles for future delivery have fallen below trade expectations this month. In woolens, the situation is more cheerful. Mills claim to have enough orders on hand to keep going at current levels for 11 weeks.

"Shoe production in 1935 reached a new all-time figure of 383,761,499 pairs, a 7.5 per cent increase over 1934.

"Rubber consumption in January reached a level that has been attained only three times since 1929. It was 13 per cent above December and 3 per cent above January, 1935."

Abbott Laboratories Increases Dividend

Chicago, Feb. 21 (AP).—Directors of Abbott Laboratories, pharmaceutical manufacturers, today placed the stock on a $3 annual basis instead of $2 by declaration of a regular dividend of 75 cents a share, in addition to an extra of 10 cents. The dividends are payable April 1 to stockholders of record March 18.

S. DeWitt Clough, president, said sales in 1936 have already reached a new high point. Last year was the best in the company's history.

Bleachable spot nominal: March closed 9.50; May, 9.56; July, 9.42; September, 9.31.

Brokers' Loans Rise $1,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers, held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City, were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board to have totaled $944,000,000 for the week ended yesterday, an increase of $1,000,000 for the week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $800,000,000.

Auto Production Shows Sharp Drop

Detroit, Feb. 21 (AP).—Cram's Reports, Inc., said today that production of passenger cars and trucks in the United States and Canada showed a sharp decline this week to approximately 62,813 units, compared to 74,730 recorded for the previous week.

Production for the corresponding week last year was 82,481. The report said that "this week or next is expected to be the low point for the spring season."

Passenger Car Lead Regained By Chevrolet

Displaces Ford in 1936 Sales; Plymouth Holds Third Place.

New York, Feb. 21.—The initial sales experience with 1936 modal pasenger cars has witnessed the recovery by the Chevrolet Motor Co. of first place in sales in the automobile industry, the Wall Street Journal says today.

This development represents the latest swing in the keen contest for leadership between Chevrolet and Ford, the two largest lines in the lowest priced field. With 1935 models Ford recaptured first place for the first year since 1930. During the intervening years until 1935, Chevrolet held the lead.

New car registration figures for November and December together with incomplete returns for January show that Chevrolet's domestic sales in that period, which constituted the first selling months for 1936 products, ran 11 per cent ahead of Ford's.

Ford continued to hold first rank in new truck sales in November and December, but not at a sufficient rate to offset Chevrolet's lead in passenger car deliveries. In the 1935 season, Ford's domestic sales of cars and trucks combined were 28 per cent larger than Chevrolet's on the basis of registration figures.

Plymouth, the third major contender in the lowest priced field, has held its share of the market virtually at the 1935 model level, accounting for 13.78 per cent of the early sales of 1936 cars as against 14 per cent in the 1935 season and 16 per cent in 1934.

Holiday Closings.

All domestic financial markets in the United States will be closed today in observance of Washington's Birthday. All livestock markets in this country will function as usual, as will all European and Canadian exchanges, with the exception of the stock and metal market in London, which are normally closed on Saturday.

The Market

Stocks Move Irregularly in Less Active Trading as Market Eases Before Holiday.

New York, Feb. 21.—Stock traders acted as though they would welcome a day's rest and the market milled around in rather desultory fashion. Closing prices were irregular, and so were opening quotations. Numerous new high prices were paid in various groups, but the market as a whole got nowhere in particular. Sales volume was the smallest of the week at barely over 3,000,000 shares. May wheat closed a quarter of a cent lower at 98¾ cents a bushel.

Traders flitted about in selecting their stocks. International Telephone weakened a bit in the afternoon, possibly on the news of rioting in Spain, where the company has a considerable investment. A strong push took place in Yellow Truck, and other low-priced motors had an active day, with generally higher prices, particularly Studebaker. Rail equipments were mixed. Westinghouse Air Brake sold at a new high price. American Locomotive was strong, but others were indifferent. Rails also were irregular. A good deal of buying came into Coast Line, which rose 2 points to a new high. North Western puffed into sight and B. & O. continued to be favored. It began on a 10,000-share lot. Central opened at a new high price.

Around mid-day a good deal of interest was drawn to Chrysler. It moved up to 99 with numerous 1,000-share blocks, but ran into offerings at that price and halted at 99¼. Case, Deere, Harvester and other farm implements were buoyant. They ran up 1 to 4 points. Copper shares were firm, but silvers dropped another 1 to 3 points. United States Smelting broke into new low ground. Steels were firm to easier.

In the food section Standard Brands took an active position. Buying of the stock was based on a rumor which was only partially true, namely, to the extent that the company's subsidiary has a contract to supply spirits to a large whisky concern. Most liquor stocks moved higher. Continental Baking was active and higher. The operation in Omnibus sent the stock to a new high price. Amusements were firm. Airplanes, with the exception of Douglas, climbed a little. Utilities improved. Oils were irregular. Tobaccos continued to drift lower.

Excess Reserves Rise.

Dollars were a litle harder against the gold currencies, notwithstanding the apparent solidity of the new French ministry. Possibly the promise of an early tax bill in Congress had some effect on European sentiment. Government bonds, on the other hand, were slightly easier, although no change took place in the money market. After a mild expansion of the past two or three weeks the Federal Reserve System statement for this week shows no change in credit in use. Monetary gold stock rose a little, money in circulation was up only a trifle and member bank reserve balances increased $48,000,000. Excess reserves climbed back above three billions.

Publication of foreign trade figures for January was the principal addition of the day to statistical information. Compared with a year ago we enjoyed a rise of 13 per cent in exports, with a corresponding gain in imports. The excess of exports of $12,000,000 for the month was only slightly higher than that of a year ago, but the larger totals for both accounts is encouraging, as indicating a substantial revival in world trade.

Compared with December our trade fell off a little. Our exports of $198,436,000 were 11 per cent under those for December. The decline was largely in raw materials—cotton, tobacco and oil—partly seasonal and partly perhaps because of smaller demands from countries engaged in war or preparing for it, and, as usual, the rise in imports was traceable to food shipments.

Excess of Imports.

For the past seven months the trade record is not so favorable. Exports totaled $1,056,000,000, against $1,272,000,000 in the preceding year, and imports were $1,240,000,000, compared with $958,000,000, making total trade only slightly higher and giving us an unfavorable balance of $184,00,000. The favorable balance in the same period of the previous year was $324,000,00.

Considered as commodity imports, as they should be, the silver shipments give the record a still worse complexion from the standpoint of those wishing to see an export excess. Last month the silver shipments give the record a still worse complexion from the standpoint of those wishing to see an export excess. Last month the silver imports, net, were $56,230,000, against $19,000,000 a year ago, and $47,603,000 in December. Actually therefore in January we had an unfavorable trade balance of $47,000,000. For the past seven months the balance has been unfavorable to the extent of $500,000,000, against a favorable balance, including silver, of $222,000,000 a year ago. Yet in the seven months we have brought from abroad net gold imports of $980,000,000.

Burns Brothers.

The Stock Exchange's solution of the Burns Brothers problem may be slightly puzzling to some people. The class B stock, which has been selling at a price difficult to reconcile with the other securities, has been lifted from the inactive to the active post. Assuming that something is queer about the price, the shift would appear to be rubbing salt into the wound. However, it is a well known fact that trading usually dries up in a stock as soon as it is taken from the odd lot post and put into full lot company. If that proves to be the case with Burns, at least sales will be less frequent and less damage, if any, will be done, or at least that is one way to look at it.

Suspicious.

"After reading your article on stocks of doubtful value," writes a Long Island investor, "I am wondering about my investments. I hold 100 shares of Consolidated Textile ($1 a share), 100 shares of Mother Lode (1⅜), and 100 shares of Callahan Zinc-Lead (1¾). Will you kindly advise if these stocks are in the same category?" The Stock Exchange answer would be: "Who can say?" and it is perhaps as good a reply as could be made. The real problem is nevertheless what the authorities ought to do about permitting such stocks to be traded in the exchange.

Discrepancy.

National Department Store stocks offer another instance of price disparity. Under the reorganization plan as confirmed by the courts, the old preferred stock will receive three and a half shares of new common; the old common will get one share of new for every four shares of old. That would indicate a value for the old preferred of 14 times that of the old common. Actually the old common is selling at $3 a share and the old preferred at $36 a share, instead of $42 a share, its indicated value on a comparative basis. The Stock Exchange has received an application to list the new common shares, along with new 6 per cent preferred.

Freight Traffic Maintains Rise Over Last Year

Total of 631,347 Cars for Week Is Gain of 8.5 Per Cent.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended February 15 totaled 631,347 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 49,678 cars or 8.5 per cent above the corresponding week in 1935 and an increase of 31,079 cars of 5.2 per cent above the corresponding week in 1934. Loading of revenue freight for the week of February 15 was an increase of 9,250 cars or 1.5 per cent above the preceding week.

Grain Loadings Decline.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 28,109 cars, a decrease of 435 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 2,917 cars above the corresponding week in 1935. It was, however, a decrease of 2,163 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended February 15, totaled 16,472 cars, an increase of 827 cars above the same week in 1935.

Live stock loading amounted to 9,975 cars, a decrease of 456 cars below the preceding week, 1,596 cars below the same week in 1935 and 6,493 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western District alone, loading of live stock for the week ended February 15, totaled 7,045 cars, a decrease of 1,669 cars below the same week in 1935.

Coke loading amounted to 11,329 cars, an increase of 422 cars above the preceding week, 3,528 cars above the same week in 1935 and 209 cars above the same week in 1934.

All districts, except the Northwestern, reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

$90,000,000 Bonds Planned By Pacific Gas

Will Be Largest Single Issue So Far Filed With SEC.

New York, Feb. 21.—Negotiations for a new issue of about $90,000,000 of Pacific Gas & Electric bonds have progressed to a point where the filing of a registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission is probable in about two weeks, it was said today in financial circles. A group headed by Blyth & Co., Inc., will underwrite the bonds.

This will be the largest corporate bond issue ever to be registered with the SEC under the securities act. Proceeds from the sale of this proposed issue will be used to retire two issues of 4½ per cent first and refunding bonds, outstanding to the amount of $84,578,000.

Part of Refunding Series.

In a series of refunding operations began in March, last year, the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. has issued a total of $95,000,000 of 4 per cent bonds for refunding purposes. Completion of the sale of the $90,000,000 issue will lift the total bonds sold by this company since last March to $185,000,000, or the largest for any company since the enactment of the securities act.

Details of the forthcoming financing have not been completed, but, in view of the trend of money rates and condition of the investment market, it is considered likely in bond circles that the interest rate on the new issue will not be greater than 3½ per cent.

SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, holding Probate Court. No. 49291. Administration. This is to give notice that the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Samuel T. Utz, also known as Samuel Thomas Utz, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof, legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 29TH DAY OF JANUARY, A. D. 1937; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of February, 1936. IRVING J. FASTNAUGHT, 2321 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. Attest: (Seal.) THEODORE COGSWELL, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 15,22,29

R. P. HOLLINGSWORTH, Attorney, Metropolitan Bank Building.

SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, holding Probate Court. Estate of Mary B. Lothrop, deceased. No. 49414. Administration Docket 106. Application having been made herein for probate of the last will and testament and codicil of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by the National Metropolitan Bank of Washington, it is ordered this 10th day of February, A. D. 1936, that Mrs. Ben Carney and the unknown heirs-at-law and next of kin of Mary B. Lothrop, deceased and all others concerned appear in said court on MONDAY, the 23d day of March, A. D. 1936, at 10 o'clock a. m., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Let notice hereof be published in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ALFRED A. WHEAT, Chief Justice. Attest: (Seal.) THEODORE COGSWELL, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 8,15,22

HOEHLING & OGILBY, Attorneys, 613 Fifteenth Street Northwest.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, holding a Probate Court. In re Estate of Alice B. Whitmore, deceased. Administration No. 49875. Order for ratification nisi. Evelyn W. Dye, administratrix of the estate of Alice B. Whitmore, deceased, having reported to the court that she has sold said decedent's real estate, to wit: Lot 6, in square 1006, improved by premises known as No. 1237 Maryland avenue northeast, in the City of Washington, District of Columbia, to Moses Herman for the sum of fifteen hundred Dollars ($1500), under the terms and conditions set forth in said report, it is by the court, this 12th day of February, 1936, adjudged, ordered and decreed, that the said sale be ratified and confirmed by the court, unless cause to the contrary be shown before the 11TH DAY OF MARCH, 1936; provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post prior to the expiration of that period. ALFRED A. WHEAT, Chief Justice. Attest: (Seal.) THEODORE COGSWELL, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 8,15,22

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE MILKY WAY." Paramount picturization of the stage comedy by Lynn Root and Harry Clork, adapted to the screen by Grover Jones, Frank Butler and Richard Connell, starring Harold Lloyd, with Adolphe Menjou, Verree Teasdale, Helen Mack, William Gargan, Lionel Stander, Dorothy Wilson, George Barbier, Bonita, Marjorie Gateson, Milburn Stone and Paddy O'Flynn. Directed by Leo McCarey. Previewed Tuesday, February 18.

Upon the framework provided by one of the most hilarious travesties of the prize fight racket Broadway has seen in the last several seasons, Harold Lloyd's expert crew of comedy constructionists have festooned a succession of ridiculous sequences that permit the bespectacled comedian to revert to the sort of thing that made him famous.

"The Milky Way" was funny on the stage. It is infinitely funnier on the screen. The story, so that you may have some vague notion of what it is all about, concerns a young milk-wagon driver whose sales record is none too good, but whose adoration of his sister is sufficient to plunge him into a fine midnight brawl with the middleweight champion of the world and one of his hangers-on when they pester Mae Sullivan, the hat-check girl, to the point of desperation. By the time the cops arrive on the scene to quell the melee, the champ and his pal are out on their backs on the sidewalk, and Burleigh Sullivan, the milkman, bears not a scratch to testify to his part in the encounter.

An Artful Dodger.

As a matter of fact, Burleigh is no fighter. He is, however, a fine ducker and slipper of punches. It seems, he was a puny kid who had to develop an elusive defense against the attacks of the tough kids of the neighborhood. He carried his program of evasion to a point of proficiency that finally made it impossible for anyone to lay a hand on him or hit him with a rock! Thus, in the encounter in front of the night club he merely stepped from a disadvantageous point between the middleweight champ and "Spider" Schultz when they socked and let them knock each other out—for which he got all the credit.

At this point, with his champ wearing a lovely black eye and Mr. Schultz still groggy from the experience of the night before, Gabby Sloan, manager of the champion, steps into the picture and, in self defense, decides that the only "out" is to make a potential challenger for the title out of the meek and timid Mr. Burleigh Sullivan, whose interests are entirely enclosed in milk bottles.

Sequences Carefully Built Up.

As was long the custom in the manufacture of the Lloyd vehicles, "The Milky Way" has been built up into a succession of carefully detailed farcical sequences. Of these, the ones that strike these eyes and ears as being the most amusing are those in the training camp, when Ann Westley — who lives in hope of some time being Mrs. Gabby Sloan—teaches Burleigh the art of the left jab and the right cross to waltz time; the priceless episodes in the home of the wealthy Mrs. Winthrop LeMoyne, sponsor of the milk fund boxing card, where Burleigh teaches Mrs. LeMoyne the art of ducking and sliding punches, which she employes with devastating effect from then on; the baby colt in the taxicab footage, one of the funniest in the picture, and, finally, the championship scrap which Burleigh wins by a most amazing combination of circumstances, still wearing his horn-rimmed spectacles.

This is all crafty, nonsensical, clean and wholesome entertainment that is completely on the side of abject foolishness, but swell tonic for movie tastes satiated with too much romance and conventional screen formulas.

Star and Cast Excel.

Harold Lloyd turns in one of his typically agile performances in this subject. He is back almost to the form of "Safety Last," "Speedy," "Welcome Danger" and the other sprightly items that anticipated "The Cat's Paw."

With his usual generosity, the star has permitted half a dozen or more members of his supporting company to achieve personal acclaim practically equivalent to his own. Foremost among these are Adolphe Menjou, who does a tremendously real and effective impersonation of the harried manager of fighters; Verree Teasdale, who reveals a comedy sense that lends full value to some of the best lines in the play; William Gargan, as the champion; Lionel Stander, as the dumb hanger-on; Marjorie Gateson, in the role of the milk fund sponsor who learns the rudiments of boxing and footwork in one simple lesson; Helen Mack, as the milkman's sister, and Dorothy Wilson as the clerical young woman with whom he falls in love. And the greatest of these are Menjou, Teasdale and Stander.

The Stage Bill.

The stage bill for the new week at Loew's Fox is headlined by that versatile young man, Eddie Garr, singer, monologist and impersonator par excellence. His act at yesterday afternoon's second performance was a bit lackadaisical, but his impressions of George Arliss singing "Heat Wave"; Jimmy Durante doing his hat-throwing bit, and Ed Wynn, as the radio fire chief, were enough to give him an exit to loud applause.

Other diverting acts are supplied by Carl Shaw, an exceptional acrobatic dancer and comedian, and his male and female assistants; Ted Adair and his Dance Revue in which all manner of terpsichorean endeavor is demonstrated by the star and four feminine associates, and Gautier's Toy Shop, one of the best dog and pony acts on the boards.

The Fox Movietone News and Prof. Lampkin's overture, dedicated to famous February folks, complete a bill that should please every member of the family from junior to grandpa and grandma.

Earle

"MILLIONS IN THE AIR." Paramount picturization of a screen story by Sig Herzig and Jane Storm, with music and lyrics by Ralph Rainger, Arthur Johnston, Leo Robin and Sam Coslow, featuring Wendy Barrie, John Howard and Willie Howard, with Robert Cummings, Eleanor Whitney, Inez Courtney, George Barbier, Catherine Doucet, Samuel S. Hinds, Halliwell Hobbes, Dave Chasen, Alden Chase, Bennie Bartlett and Marina Schubert. Directed by Ray McCarey. Reviewed Friday night.

Major Bowes' Sunday night amateur theater of the air has made a sufficient imprint upon the consciousness of the amusement world to serve as inspiration for the story of this brief, breezy and ebullient screen fable. No other deduction is possible. The gong is rung on the acts that are not so good and Samuel S. Hinds, in the role of Chief Edwards, presiding over the K-e-l-l-o Soap Hour, comes so close to the Major's mannerisms that the implication is inescapable.

The story is an inconsequential trifle that attempts a bit of romance, contrives a considerable amount of comedy and introduces some talented specialists who obviously are not amateurs, although they appear on the amateur hour for the sake of the integrity of the plot. There is something about it all that brings back vaguely the hazy contour of "Here Comes the Band," except that "Millions in the Air" is not quite so far-fetched as that imaginative opus.

Cast Deserves Credit.

There are those in the cast who give fine accounts of themselves in the unwinding of a narrative that never need have caused anyone any great expenditure of anxiety. The piece evidently was fabricated for the fun that was in it—and a great deal is.

Wendy Barrie, as the daughter of the millionaire sponsor of the hour on which she finally gets a chance to display her voice, and John Howard, as the young ice cream pedler, who doesn't know the identity of the girl with whom he has struck up a flaming romance, are the "heart interest" leads and they do a very neat job of it. George Barbier, in the role of the Keller who sponsors the Kello Soap Hour, has one of his more irascible roles and plays it right up to the hilt, as he always does this sort of thing.

Then in secondary juvenile roles are Robert Cummings and that nimble-toed tap dancer, Eleanor Whitney, of whom the broadcast studio and the audience do not see half enough. Miss Whitney is a dancer who would crowd close on the heels of Eleanor Powell if she were afforded a sufficiently ample opportunity, which, in this picture, she decidedly is not.

Willie Howard a Knockout.

Comedy of the first order is contributed to the action of the film by Willie Howard, intent on getting "Donna e Mobile" across to the loudspeaker listeners, but always getting either the hook or the gong, and Dave Chasen, that silent pantomimist who so long was a fixture of the Joe Cook musical comedy productions. Willie eventually succeeds in getting on with his "Rigoletto" quartet, in which he does the peeping bit that is so familiar to all patrons of musical revues and so embarrassing to the lusty soprano upon which it is practiced.

Catherine Doucet, remembered for an especially effective performance opposite Jay Fassett in "As Husbands Go," plays opposite Willie Howard in several scenes as another aspirant for recognition on the Kello Amateur Hour.

There is a microphone bit done by an unnamed young woman who sings a stuttering song that is entitled to greater program recognition than it receives, and a youngster by the name of Bennie Bartlett executes a piano solo with a degree of personal distaste that is immensely amusing. It turns out that he hates music!

"Millions in the Air" is well directed and staged with a degree of opulence that places it among the more ornate of the inconsequentials.

Wayne King Real Ace.

On the stage at the Earle this week, Wayne King and his orchestra receive tangible evidence of the popularity they have compiled by their broadcasts. This orchestra, as everyone knows by now, specializes in the gentler types of melody and the sheer beauty of legatos and pianissimos. Their waltzes are incomparable, as was evidenced when they made the time-worn and overplayed "Merry Widow Waltz," their opening number, one of the melodic gems of their program.

There are, to be sure, bursts of instrumental comedy now and then during the orchestral program, but the brassy blatancies, the fanfares and cacophonies of the usual "jazz band" are totally lacking from the program of this sterling organization.

Clever instrumentations are introduced during the lengthy list of numbers these talented musicians play and specialists abound among the band's personnel. It is a group that no real music lover can afford to miss.

Other Acts and Auxiliaries.

Other acts on the vaudeville portion of the bill include the Three Queens in "Six Feet of Rhythm," a trio of feminine tap dancers who are at the top. Their unison and solo dancing are among the most skillful terpsichorean demonstrations the current stage is able to afford.

Audrey Sieber, the effulgent young young mistress of ceremonies, also introduces, in addition to some new styles in smart gowns, Eddie White, that elongated young singing monologist, who was about all in at last night's final performance after six stage shows and a proportionate strain on his vocal chords. He stopped the show, at that.

The Paramount News and Freddie Clark's orchestral contributions complete a bill that the presence of Wayne King makes it impossible not to recommend. N. B. B.

He Gets His Man at the Palace

After having been interviewed by four local drama desks over long-distance phone on Thursday afternoon, Nelson Eddy probably never will be the same again, but, fortunately, he and Jeanette MacDonald had made "Rose Marie" long before all that happened. Mr. Eddy, whose handsome likeness appears above, is cast as the sergeant of the Royal Northwest Mounted who encounters a beautiful star of opera in the Canadian north woods. It was a happy circumstance that they met, else we would not have their incomparable singing on the screen. "Rose Marie" began its second week at Loew's Palace yesterday.

"THE GHOST GOES WEST." London Films picturization of a story adaptation by Robert E. Sherwood, starring Robert Donat, with Eugene Pallette, Jean Parker, Elsa Lanchester, Hay Petrie and Patricia Hilliard. Directed by Rene Clair. Reviewed Friday morning by Sally Stroud.

Introduced by the whining bravado of bagpipes, the first portion of "The Ghost Goes West" is authentically Scotch, eighteenth century Scotch. The ancient head of the Gloure clan lies dying. His traditional foes, the McLaugherns, profane his last few hours to taunt him that his son playeth in the fields with the damsels while they go to fight the English for the glory of Scotland.

Murdock, the son, has a fascinating pastime which he calls "spelling game." The girls love it. "What's the difference between a thistle in the heather and a kiss in the dark?" he asks them. They are supposed to answer correctly before he can spell the Scotch equivalent of "Jack Robinson." If they fail, they pay a forfeit. A kiss.

He is interrupted in his games and dispatched to the castle.

Receiving his sword and shield from his father, Murdock swings off to (1) avenge his family's honor by ridding Scotland of the McLaugherns, (2) win the war for Scotland.

Is Subtly Slapstick.

At the battle front, the McLaugherns about-face, letting the battle hang fire while they deal with the last of the Glourie clan. Playing his game with another damsel, he is divested of his sword and chased around by the five McLaughern sons. Hiding behind a powder keg, which is ignited by a cross-eyed cannon which always fires in the wrong direction, he goes to heaven. At least parts of his apparel flutter down from on high. (Are you beginning to comprehend this as a subtle, delicately slapstickish affair?)

Murdock's tam is placed on the table in front of the ancestral crest. The father, who had died as his son rode off to avenge his honor and that of Scotland, was sorely angry that his heir should have died a coward. He speaks sonorously, from Heaven, I presume, to tell Murdock he is doomed to walk the halls of Glourie Castle, beginning each night at midnight, until he has cleared his name of the disgrace. He must, to be explicit, force one of the McLaugherns to kneel, touch the floor with his nose and swear one Glowery could lick fifty McLaugherns. And so the ghost walks.

Down to Date.

Zip! We are now in the twentieth century. Glourie Castle is a cobwebby ruin. Donald, the last remaining Glourie, is besieged by creditors. A lovely American girl named Peggy appears in a streamlined motor, buys the castle, ghost and all.

Mr. Martin, her father (Eugene Pallette), makes out the check. The chain store business is his business. Gladys, wife and mother, is suffering a nervous breakdown, during which she had discovered herself to be psychic. But she did not perceive the presence of the ghost, who still abideth therein. Walking—walking."

"Stone by stone, panel by panel," Glourie Castle is moved to Florida. The ghost goes along with it. Appearing on shipboard, en route to the new site, Murdock vanishes into thin air, affrighted by flashlight picture explosions. Thus he comes to the attention of the G-reat A-merican Public. Headlines herald his act; Congress and Parliament chatter feverishly about "alien lands"—"our ancestors"—"their old ghosts"—the Ghost of Glourie Castle becomes an international celebrity.

That is the story. But a rigid outline, making no concessions for the subtlety of handling, the superb photography, the gentle jibing, the adroit dialogue, the sheer farcial appeal of the thing.

Expert Combination.

But you should know the combination of Alexander Korda, Robert Sherwood and Rene Clair would be infallibly right. Sherwood adapted it from a tale in "Punch." Clair does not use his customary songs and music (though the musical effects are astoundingly in-tone with the action), but he does heave some light-fingered inuendoes at American habits. Note the car in the New Yorkian parade of reception labeled For the Ghost. Are we Americans really so gullible?

Clair's near camera tricks are confined to the sliding screen ruse, for the most part. The most effective one being his use of it to show Edinburg and Washington, separated by the Atlantic Ocean, voicing their reaction to the ghost's "going west."

Rene Clair has hitherto done his own writing. Whether the collaboration with Sherwood was voluntary or not might foretell whether Clair will click in the Hollywood factories or be restrained in the wrong manner. Technically, the film is a trifle self-conscious, hampered as Clair was by language ignorance and national mannerisms. But let us not be technical. For this is a story which will command your respect and delighted laughter. You may even murmer "Wellwells" to yourself, as did the nice old lady next me.

But she can't admire Robert Donat more than I do! Even in kilts and bogged down in Scotch dialect!!

Supplementaries.

Maj. Bowes' Theater of the Air, episode five, has nothing of merit except a young man named Boswell who makes music with two spoons. For the rest, you see toothsome kids exhibiting the same wriggles and camera tricks of professionals.

Better Housing Administration does excellent plugging for the Own Your Own Home idea.

And finally, we have one of Bert Gillette's perfect little Rainbow Parade shorts, "The Goose That Laid the Golden Egg." Such a lovely golden goose, such a nice Felix, such a wicked snarling Cap'n Kidd. Such fun, such fun.

Metropolitan

"KING OF THE DAMNED." Gaumont British picturization of a play by John Chancellor, adapted to the screen by A. R. Rawlinson, with screen play by Charles Bennett and Sidney Gilliat, starring Conrad Veidt, supported by Helen Vinson, Noah Beery, Cecil Rampage, Percy Welsh, Peter Croft, C. M. Hallard, Raymond Lovell, Gibson Gowland and Edmund Willard. Directed by Walter Forde. Previewed Thursday midnight by W. A. Whitney.

Combining the elements of pestilential jungles, the starkness of insular penal institutions and mass action for a "cause," "King of the Damned" offers an hour and a quarter of stirring, if not always pleasant, entertainment.

Laid in the jungles of one of the minor of the Lesser Antilles—the island of Santa Maria—and in and about a penal colony of undetermined nationality, there is unfolded the stirring story of a prisoners' revolt against the tyranny and officiousness of the martial masters, against the unfit food, against cruel and unusual punishment and road building, not untinged with graft for the higher-ups.

Dominiating the story is the character of Prisoner 12183, played by Conrad Veidt, who, as a trusty, organizes the several thousand prisoners into an efficient body of harried insurgents. A quiet, somewhat restrained part is this, and Mr. Veidt, whose charming quality of voice further adds to the portrayal, turns in a superb delineation. He would revolt not so much against the almost unbearable conditions of life but rather to prove to the world what might be done with the island if properly handled—even by those under penal servitude.

Has Lighter Moments.

A point of levity is frequently struck by that admirable actor, Noah Beery. As Mooch, a huge brute with an almost child-like faith in his leader and the cause, yet extremely and maturely mute under stress, Mr. Beery is excellent, adding that necessary touch which eases the dramatic tension of the situations and makes the picture much the genuine entertainment it is.

Cecil Ramage, C. M. Hallard and Raymond Lovell depict the island's officialdom, effectively portraying those conditions which led to the revolt. Helen Vinson adds the feminine touch, which actually is so minor it might just as well have been omitted. She does, however, have more to do than merely to adorn the scenery (which she does very well, indeed), and on those points where her part crosses the main thread of the story, she carries on in fine fashion.

In Shop Talk we have a good comedy with Bob Hope ambling through a department store, wherein, from time to time, a bit of enjoyable slapstick action and plenty of amusing lines are unfurled. "The Cat Came Back" is a cats-versus-mice cartoon in color that is excellent in idea, development and presentation. A release of the Federal Housing News Flashes and the combined issues of the Paramount and Universal newsreels complete an entirely satisfying bill.

"ROSE MARIE." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the operetta by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein 2d, with music by Rudolf Friml, adapted to the screen by Frances Goodrich, Albert Hackett and Alice Duer Miller, co-starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, supported by Reginald Owen, Allan Jones, Alan Mowbray, Gilda Gray, George Regas, Robert Greig, Una O'Conner, Lucien Littlefield and Herman Bing. Dance ensembles by Chester Hale. Additional lyrics by Gus Kahn. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke. Reviewed Friday afternoon (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

During the past decade or so the living stage has given to the world some operettas destined to immortality—"Blossom Time," "The Student Prince," "The Desert Song" and others. One of those surest to attain that kinship with the works of Sir Arthur S. Sullivan and Victor Herbert is "Rose Marie," the motion picture version of which is sailing blithely on, in its second week at Loew's Palace.

To those words of expert appraisal appearing in these columns last Saturday morning, nothing can be added—for after it has been said that here is a "majestically set, handsomely acted and gloriously sung screen version of the Rudolf Friml operetta," it would, indeed, be gilding the lily to say more.

The italicized paragraph above will give the casual reader the details of cast and production, so we come to the end, except to add that "Gymnastics," a Pete Smith announced "Oddity;" "Run, Sheep, Run," a Technicolor cartoon, and the double-length Metrotone News complete the program.

"STRIKE ME PINK." United Artists release of Samuel Goldwyn's picturization of "Dreamland," a serial story by Clarence Budington Kelland, adapted to the screen by Frank Butler, Walter DeLeon and Francis Martin, starring Eddie Cantor, supported by Ethel Merman, Sally Eilers, Brian Donlevy, Jack LaRue, Harry ("Parkyakarkus") Parke, Helen Lowell, Hilarry E. Fields, Gordon Jones, Sunny O'Dea, Rita Rio, Charles McAvoy, Stanley Blystone, Duke Yorke, Charles Wilson, Clyde Hager and the "Goldwyn Girls." Music by Harold Arlen; lyrics by Leo Brogan. Dances and ensembles by Robert Alton. Directed by Norman Taurog. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

With two weeks already amusement history and a third well started, there is little left to be said on the merits of "Strike Me Pink." Indeed, with Eddie Cantor the star in the traditional Samuel Goldwyn production, what more necessary recommendation is needed for the thousands of Cantor fans?

With a bevy of beautiful girls, a story of passing service, plenty of songs, all being mixed with a generous portion of Cantor, "Strike Me Pink" presents banjo-eyed Eddie as his coterie of admirers like him best.

Nor is Mr. Cantor the sole member of the cast deserving mention. While his ghostly poker game is one of the highlights of the picture, the Negro spiritual chorus to Ethel Merman's "High and Low" solo, the sizzling terpsichorean routine with the Goldwyn Girls' "Shake It Off" number, and the mirror tap dance by Sally O'Dea are other highlights to make this work worthy of serious consideration.
